There is evident fright in some quarters, and it is the general impression that the bucks are running away from what they regard as an impending calamity. It may be, however, that they are bent upon pillage and murder. The aged warriors and women are frightened over the outlook and profess the warmest friendship for the pale faces.

A dispatch received at the headquarters of the Department of Dakota from Fort Lincoln, stated that 25 Indians, claiming to be Rickarees, passed that point to-day and said they were on their way to Fort Berthold.

READY TO BATTLE.

Red Cloud Says He Will Meet the Troops To-Morrow.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 20.—A special from Rushville brings word that as soon as troops arrived there couriers rushed with the news to Pine Ridge Agency.

Word has just been received from this agency that the bad Indians under Red Cloud and Little Wound declare that they will meet the troops in battle to-morrow.

Agent Royer was interviewed. He said his Indian police were powerless. One of them, Thunder Bear, arrested a bad Indian last Saturday, but was overpowered by others and the prisoner was released. Several other prisoners were released, and the rebels threatened to burn the agency buildings. Royer has been sending his reports recently to the War Department, and the Indians were not aware of the coming of the troops until to-day. He relates that on Monday he was approached from behind by a bad Indian, who drew a knife and threatened to kill him. Royer was unarmed and at the Indian's mercy. The latter for some reason desisted. Royer tried to get him arrested but could not.

Red Cloud and Little Wound have been fomenting trouble for several weeks, while American Horse and Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horse, have tried to pacify the warriors. Last week a big meeting was held about 30 miles from Pine Ridge at which a reputed apostle of the Messiah was present. He told the Indians to return to the agency and await the coming of the Messiah, who is to arrive to-morrow in the form of a buffalo. He will give the signal for the opening of the conflict which is to annihilate the white race. This fact causes great fear in the minds of old Indian fighters. Unless there is an absolute failure to get word from the Messiah on the day of the arrival of the troops, a conflict is certain. Major Butler's column went into camp about 10 miles from Pine Ridge. The officers are prepared for what seems now to be a certain combat.

Stampede of Settlers.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 20.—Settlers from Cody, a town near the Rosebud Indian Reservation, are flocking into Valentine, 33 miles distant, for protection. They say that the Indians came into Cody yesterday to buy ammunition and that the post trader had advised the settlers to take refuge in the towns. The troops sent out from posts in the Department of the Platte will not reach the Pine Ridge Reservation until to-morrow. The army officers think that the settlers' stampede will be the most serious result of the Indian scare.

The Envoys Visit Norwich.

NORWICH, Conn., Nov. 20.—Messrs. O'Connor and Harrington of the Irish envoys addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting here last night. They were escorted to the hall by the Catholic societies of the town, and the way was ablaze with fireworks. Twenty thousand dollars was raised, and Mr. O'Connor expressed thanks to the people for their generosity and did not hesitate to say that Norwich thus far was the banner city in the land for liberality and cordial sympathy extended to the visitors.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Tom O'Rourke, of Boston, the backer of George Dixon, the colored bantam-weight champion of the world, has arrived here to arrange a match with Cal McCarthy. The match will probably be made in two or three days.

TROUBLE OVER THE FAIR.

The Chicago Directors and the National Commissioners at Odds.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—World's Fair matters are in a condition of confusion worse confounded. The Herald says the entire project is in grave danger; that the enterprise may be wrecked, that the struggle between the dual authorities may become so bitter that the Fair may be abandoned and Congress called upon by the National Commission to dissolve that organization and repeal the act selecting Chicago as the location for the exposition. "These questions, and others of similar import," it says, "were heard wherever the Commissioners were congregated last night, and some of them are quoted as saying that unless the South Park Commissioners come to terms at once, the whole site question will be opened again, and that means no World's Fair in Chicago.

"Judging from other sentiments exhibited it is certain that the National Commission will not tolerate many of the plans of the local directory.

"Many of the commissioners openly declare that they have lost confidence in the local directory, and that this feeling is so general in the commission that no further negotiations can be conducted with them with any assurance that national interests will not again be betrayed."

The situation at present is that the South Park Commissioners and the directors are arrayed against the national body, and is difficult to see how a deadlock can be avoided.

SLASHED WITH A KNIFE.

A Carpenter Makes a Desperate Attempt to Kill Himself.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 20.—At 5:30 a. m., the occupants of the house at 51 Charlotte street were startled by groans from the room occupied by Daniel Borst, a boarder.

Going to the room a horrible sight met their eyes. On the floor lay Borst in a pool of blood. He was removed to the Homœopathic Hospital.

The man had taken a small penknife and with this had cut his throat in several places and otherwise mutilated his body. He had severed the radial artery in his left arm and several smaller arteries in his right arm. He had also cut the muscles of the calves of his legs. There has been a good deal of hemorrhage from the various cuts but as yet the physicians cannot say whether there is hope of recovery.

Borst is an unmarried man and 42 years of age. His parents reside in Buffalo. He is a carpenter.

Hamilton's Alleged Widow Will Fight.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Eva Hamilton, the imprisoned wife of the late Robert Ray Hamilton, has served notice through her lawyer that she will contest his will. The objections of Mrs. Hamilton state on information and belief that Mr. Hamilton was not of sound mind, memory and understanding, and that while executing the alleged will "he was under the controlling will of one or more persons by whom he was unduly influenced or coerced into the making and execution of said paper and deposition of property therein contained, and deprived of free, unrestrained and independent action."

Tilden concerning a public library for this city invalid, was submitted without argument to the Supreme Court General Term, the court which had the case previously before it decided to modify the judgment of Judge Beach, but held the trust invalid. The case now goes to the Court of Appeals, which will finally decide upon the famous $4,000,000 trust.

$5,000 for the Fighting Fund.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Messrs. John Dillon and William O'Brien addressed an audience of 5,000 at Music Hall, and collected $5,000 for the "Fighting Fund." The speakers did not at any time refer to either Parnell or their Clonmel sentences in connection with the Smith-Barry estate riot, but confined their remarks strictly to the work mapped out by them for their lecture tour.

The Knights and the New Party.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 20.—The Knights of Labor are still wrangling over the proposition to form a new political party with but little prospect of anything being done at this session. The difficulty is that there are too many plans. Some want a federation with either Democrats, Republicans or Farmers' Alliance, while others want a new party.

KOCH'S MAGIC LYMPH

Two Thousand Visiting Doctors Disappointed.

THE PUBLIC AGAIN CAUTIONED

Beware of Physicians Who Claim to Have the Remedy for Private Patients.

The Irish Nationalists Convicted—O'Brien and Dillon to Serve a Year in Prison. Princess Victoria Married—Ireland's Primate Starts for Rome—The Queen Wishes General Booth Success.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—On account of the scarcity of guinea pigs and other animals, even cows, used in the production of the Koch lymp, 2,000 physicians from all parts of the world are leaving Berlin, again disappointed at not seeing Professor Koch or obtaining the lymp.

Dr. Waltzoldt, of San Remo, and a physician in Davos are said to be the only outsiders who have received even small quantities of the remedy.

The public is again cautioned against all physicians who advertise to have the remedy for private patients.

There is a growing feeling of disgust against the Berlin physicians who have obtained the lymph through Professor Koch's generosity and are using it to further their own interests.

To-day's German Medical Weekly will contain an article signed by Drs. Bergman, Fraentzel and William Levy, and Staff Surgeon Koehl, in which they declare that after experiments in many different cases they are prepared to fully indorse Professor Koch's statements regarding his remedy.

Prof. Koch to Have a Royal Title.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A dispatch from Berlin says that Emperor William will probably confer a title of nobility upon Prof. Koch as a reward for his services in the interest of science. Prof. Koch relates that it will be necessary for the Government to provide the lymph used in the cure of tuberculosis.

Patrick O'Brien and John Cullinane were sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and Messrs Walsh, Mockler and Bolton to four months. The sentences are all for imprisonment without labor. Father Humphries and Messrs. Kelly, Condon and Sheehy were discharged.

The Duchess of Marlborough Explains.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—An explanation is published regarding the report that judgment for a large sum had been obtained in the courts of the United States against the Duchess of Marlborough. The Duchess' annual income on property in America is $200,000. This is a life interest on which the American courts do not allow a charge to be made, and the Duchess therefore raised a large sum in England to pay for improvements on Blenheim Palace and in the purchase of a mansion in London. As security for the loan the Duchess insured her life for a large amount and allowed judgments to be taken in the American courts for money advanced. The Duchess' financial position is not affected by this legal operation.

The Queen Wishes Booth Success.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—General Ponsonby, private secretary to the Queen, has written to General Booth, of the Salvation Army, thanking him on behalf of Her Majesty for a copy of his book on "Darkest England." AMERICANS TAKE A HAND.

The Colony in Honduras Rally to the Support of President Bogran.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A dispatch from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, says: "The insurrection here resulted in serious loss to the American colony, Col. Aldea H. Baker, of New Orleans, being killed, and Henry Smith, of Georgia, wounded.

"Some weeks ago the Americans in Honduras, about 200 in number, signed a paper agreeing to support President Bogran in case a revolution should occur. When the trouble finally did break out the Americans rallied to his standard, bringing with them their Winchesters.

"On the 13th the troops of the President recaptured the palace after stubborn fighting in which the Americans bore a conspicuous part. On the 14th Fort Leona was stormed. The arsenals and barracks were carried by assault on the 15th. Sanches escaped from the city but was pursued, captured and shot, thus ending a brief and bloody revolution.

"The President has acknowledged in a general order his thanks to the American volunteers for their powerful assistance."

There is ample capital back of the paper, and an effort will be made to place it in the front rank of the journals devoted to the interests of the farmer. The Agriculturist is the only farm paper published in New Jersey, and will be made especially a journal and mouth-piece for the farmers of this State, a class widely known as the most advanced of their profession. J. H. Drevenstedt, the well known writer on live stock, still retains editorial control of its columns and is a member of the company. The paper has already shown marked ability in its field, and is commended to our farmer readers.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Lou Clawson, of this city, is the guests of Mrs. J. H. Wilson, of New Brunswick.

W. L. Saunders, of Mercer avenue, Washington Park, left to-day for Ithaca, N. Y. He has been invited to deliver a lecture to-morrow evening on "Compressed Air," before the Cornell University and Faculty.

Thomas R. Ford, bookkeeper at R. W. Rice & Co's, has given up his position. About the first of December he will go to California and spend the Winter for his health. He is a deservedly popular young man, and has the best wishes of a host of friends.

Martin I. Cooley had been considering for some time, more or less favorably, the idea of removing his family to New York. This morning's fire, probably, will settle his mind in the matter, and North Plainfield will consequently lose one of its most valued citizens, one of its most charitable women, and one of its most charming families.

Improvement Promised in the U. S. Express Service in Plainfield.

Because there has been so much reason for complaint against the inefficient express service in this city recently, the merchants and the people are now the readier to appreciate the efforts of Agent Harry F. Skiff to remedy all difficulties. Towards this end he has just added a new two-horse delivery wagon. He assures THE PRESS that Plainfield shall have as complete and faultless a service as any city in the United States. Mr. Skiff claims that so far as his company is concerned, the recent outcry of the papers about the raise in prices is without foundation. The raise has only been made in a few instances, and that at the request of competing companies. The tendency is to lower rates, which, he says, is being done wherever possible.

The Marshal Goes to the Clerk's Assistance, and Gets Run Over.

As the North Plainfield hose carriage, tied behind a wagon, was being rushed along at a rapid rate this morning, Marshal Rutledge noticed that with only Borough Clerk Brokaw on the tiller it was being switched from side to side to the great danger of the man who was clinging to it.

The Marshal thereupon sprang upon the carriage behind and crawled over the reel, but in getting down in front he lost his balance and fell headlong. Two wheels of the heavy carriage passed over his right leg and broke it. The accident occurred near the corner of Grove street and Linden avenue.

As a cough remedy, Hires' Cough Cure is, perhaps, the best medicine that science has ever discovered. It cuts the phlegm and mucus, relieves the lungs and chest, breaks up cold as nothing else will do. In croup and whooping-cough its prompt action is like magic. No family should be without it.

COSTLY FIRE ON ROCKVIEW TERRACE.

The Handsome Home of Martin I. Cooley a Ruin, Despite Good Work by Firemen.

The handsome residence of Martin I. Cooley on Rockview Terrace, North Plainfield, was ruined by fire this morning. The fire originated from a defective flue under the flooring of the second story, and when discovered had eaten its way between partition walls and floorings throughout almost the entire house, so that the building was threatened with being enveloped in flames at any moment. The firemen of Warren Engine Company, however, under the command of Chief George Fairchild, got promptly to work, and to such good effect that by the time that Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2, who were summoned later for fear their services would be needed, reached the scene, the fire was under excellent control.

Much of the furniture in the house was saved and piled in heaps on the lawns till it could be stored at the neighbors' homes, but some valuable things things were considerably damaged. As for the house itself, what fire did not touch water flooded, and the costly dwelling of the New York merchant is a wreck. The total loss will, it is estimated, reach fully $13,000, which will fall entirely on the insurance companies.

The only persons in the house at the outbreak of the fire were two servant girls. The coachman and the painters who were just finishing painting Mr. Cooley's buildings were at the barn. Mr. Cooley and family were all in New York City for the day, but were wired to come home.

Mr. Cooley's extensive lawns were ruined by the hundreds of feet which ran excitedly about the place. The firemen had a tough time in coping, in saturated garments, with the fierce and biting Northwest wind that blew.

Set Mr. Higgin's Stage.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I noticed in your valuable paper of the 17th inst, a complaint of a Washington Park "kicker" about my line of coaches not running to Music Hall on Saturday evening. I want it made known to the public that my coaches do not run to any entertainment unless they are ordered by private parties for the evening. If this Washington Park "kicker" had ordered one of my coaches he would not have had to stand on the corner for half an hour waiting for it. I wish it understood also that no one must use my name with other people's advertisements, as such may cause injury to my large and respectful business.

M. A. HIGGINS.

Plainfield Against Fanwood Will Open the Bowling Season.

C. C. Burnet has saved the life of the bowling interest of the Crescent League, by taking it in hand himself and putting some of the same activity in it that he and C. P. Leggett infused into the base ball interest with such wonder fully successful results last summer. Mr. Burnet is arranging matches with the five-men teams of the Elizabeth and New Jersey Athletic clubs, the Westfields, Fanwoods etc.

The first contest will be at Fanwood, Wednesday evening of next week. The Crescent League will send a strong team, and it is hoped that a crowd of their fellow members will go along to cheer for them. Those who bowl for Plainfield will be Van Emburgh, Haven, Van Winkle, Rogers and Emerson, with Thiers and Teal as substitutes.

A Well Favored Missionary.

The regular sewing meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, in the chapel parlors. All the ladies of the congregation are cordially invited. This society has recently shipped its usual Christmas box to the Rev. Thos. Pearce and family, whom they are supporting in Ord, Nebraska. The box was valued at $400. A safety bicycle will also be sent Mr. Pearce by the Society, as his church work extends to parishes nine miles apart.

Thanks from North Plainfield's Fire Laddies.

Chief Fairchild desires in the name of himself and his firemen to thank the residents in the neighborhood of this morning's fire, for refreshments so bountifully furnished. He also wants to thus publicly express his appreciation of Chief Doane's quick response to his request for assistance when it was supposed it would be required.

NO PEACE IN UPSON'S HOME.

Mother-in-Law, Father-in-Law, and Wife, Turn Against Him.

The various domestic skeletons in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Upson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Huxley were freely exhibited in the City Court this morning before Judge Codington. The evidence submitted revealed the fact that Upson, who was the man on trial, has a bad temper which his wife "exonerates" "because he inherited it from a terrible-tempered father, who has had to be separated from his wife." Upson's temper is worse when he is intoxicated, and that he has in times past been in a most violent state of mind was quite evident from the story of his wife, his father-in-law, Mr. Huxley, and his mother-in-law. The Upsons and Huxleys have all lived together on West Sixth street, and the home has been made so unhappy because of Upson's "carr iags-on" that when his last offense was committed the father-in-law went and had him arrested. Besides smashing things up in general, Upson was accused of brutal treatment of his wife, her father and mother, and of driving them and the neighbors out of the house with threats to kill, and with exhibitions of violence. Mrs. Upson said her husband was the most barbarous man in the world, and led her a wretched life. While she toiled night and day at dressmaking and canvassing he went off and squandered her earnings in drink and then came home and drove her away from the house.

Upson admitted some of the charges, but said that bad cooking started most of the trouble. When his food was chronically placed before him ruined by careless preparation and served in a slovenly manner, and when no effort was made by his wife or mother-in-law to please him, he couldn't help getting mad and taking to drink and tearing things to pieces.

The opinion of all parties seemed to be that a separation would be the best thing, and one will be arranged for. Upson was fined $10 for the specific offense of which he was charged, and said he would pawn something to raise the money. He promised to give back to his wife the Winter wrap and other garments he had carried away. Mrs. Upson had him also bound over to keep the peace.

Another Opportunity for Young Men.

Every man should have enough knowledge of book-keeping to accurately keep his own accounts with debit and credit. This knowledge if strictly observed might change many a failure to a success. Accurate business knowledge mixed with honesty, will give but few disastrous failures. Book-keepers writing a good hand, are in demand; endorsed with honesty, and they are at a premium. Come to the Y. M. C. A. rooms and enroll your name in the book-keeping class, Monday night.

—The Ladies' Bible Class will meet at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

—A special call is made for teachers at Warren Mission. Those not doing school work will find at this chapel a ready field for work.

Heavy Hail and Wind Storm.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 20.—A heavy hail storm accompanied by high wind prevailed in the Wyoming Valley last evening, and did much damage. At Plymouth, four miles from here, the steeple of the Lithuanian Catholic Church was blown down and the structure otherwise badly damaged. It will probably have to be rebuilt.

REVIEW OF FASHIONS.

Effects That Are Brilliant, Yet at the Same Time Very Artistic.

Brilliancy, without bizarre effects, is the characteristic feature of the fashions for autumn and winter, to which gorgeous coloring, handsome materials, magnificent trimmings, and graceful designs contribute to produce a most charming tout ensemble. Bright colors we have become accustomed to; but the familiar shades seem to be intensified, yet toned down by combination with other hues, till the effect is brilliant, but at the same time extremely artistic.

Yet it must not be supposed that gorgeousness is to be indulged in on all occasions. The proprieties are in nothing more rigidly defined than in matters of dress. The costume intended solely for walking and street wear retains its simplicity of design—the clinging skirt, with only sufficient fullness at the back to permit of easy locomotion, and the natty jacket—and for these there are provided handsome "faced" cloths and serges in from four to six shades of all the fashionable colors, whose beauty may be enhanced by combinations of velvet, plush or fur, or elaborate braiding or passementerie trimmings, if the wearer desire.

Rough-finished Scotch woolens, in solid colors, in fine checks, plaids and stripes, in all conceivable patterns, and Bannockburn tweeds, like rough blankets, are also favorites for street costumes, the fancy goods used for the skirt, and the coat or jacket of corresponding goods, but of solid color, with perhaps a few flecks of the bright colors in the plaid.

One feature, noticeable alike in street and house costumes, is the almost universal prevalence of sleeves of a different material from the body; indeed, the sleeves might almost be said to impart the character to a dress. Even in the most severe of tailor-made costumes in solid color—for which the "Estevana" coat is a favorite model—velvet sleeves are preferred, and the effect is the more pronounced as the sleeves are in the favorite gigot style, and as high as becomingness to the wearer will permit. Another point about sleeves; it is not obligatory that the sleeve material should appear in any other part of the dress. Some ladies even go so far as to buy handsome material for sleeves, and the other goods and trimmings after; and economists are utilizing choice remnants for the purpose, and congratulating themselves on their foresight.

With the cooler weather, high finishings for the neck have reappeared. Flaring Medici collars and full Henri Deux ruches are worn on the street and house dresses; and as both are equally fashionable, and each becoming to an entirely different type, the selection of the wrong style for personal use is a manifest admission of want of artistic taste, and the wearer has only herself to blame if she realizes too late that it is an almost unpardonable sin to be unbecomingly dressed.

All skirts, excepting those intended specially for walking dresses, are worn longer at the back than heretofore; but the round skirt, entirely escaping the ground, retains its prestige for street wear. The favorite style for street costumes is devoid of looped drapery, and is almost in fourreau style in front and at the sides, the fullness in the back confined in the space of from four to six inches, disposed either in shirring, fine overlapping plaits turned toward the middle of the back, or simply gathered, with sometimes a large box-plait at each side of the fullness, if the figure require it.—Demorest's Family Magazine.

MISS BULKLEY AND THE BOARD

Addressed by a Mother Who Thinks the School Hours too Long.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:—Will you permit me through the medium of your columns, to present a plea to our Principal of Plainfield schools and the Board of Education, on behalf of a large class of parents of moderate means and more or less intelligence, whose children are partially deprived of some very important benefits of our school system?

In the many articles on the defects and needed improvements in this system, from the pens of the ablest educators, it is a singular fact that we find no allusion to one of its most serious evils—the length of time the children of the lowest grades—almost babies, are confined in the school room.

Look at these little five-year-olds as you pass them on the street, good educators, and notice how small they are; think of your own fatigue if, in even the best ventilated auditorium, the most interesting speaker you know should prolong his discourse to two and a half or three hours, not to mention five, and then say whether we parents are unwise, when we yield to the medical opinion which but confirms our own doubts, and reluctantly turn from the school room door that is practically closed against our little ones, with its iron rule of "a whole loaf or none."

We must then resort to the private kindergarten or children's school, where the teaching is seldom conducted in reference to public school needs and methods, or take up the burden ourselves and undergo the trials inseparable from home-teaching.

It is not our object to reflect upon the many superior private schools. They are a very useful luxury, and to many children almost a necessity; but there are many parents who regard our common school system as a priceless boon; and who know that our children are in far less dangerous companionship when they are thrown with the bad classmate whose dirty and rough ways make him naturally repulsive, than when they are in the society of many a rich man's son, whose Fauntleroy suit and a veneer of polished manners conceal a character of deceit and viciousness.

The rule of compulsory attendance at both sessions falls even more severely upon the poorest classes. One or two cases out of the many which have come to my personal knowledge will illustrate.

A mother supports a family of three children, one a baby, by working out by the day. The second child can attend school regularly, but the eldest, a bright girl anxious to learn, is kept at home by the care of the baby, and is struggling along to acquire a little education almost unaided.

Shorter hours for the little children, this is our appeal; and until the great victory for manual training which must surely come, (a victory in which we may confidently predict that our Plainfield schools will bear a leading part) when an unlimited amount of book knowledge shall no longer be regarded as a patent medicine adapted to all dispositions and all stations of life when the dignity of intelligent labor shall be fully conceded, and hand shall bear equal with brain in the development of a higher ideal of man and womanhood, may we not hope that the good and faithful guardians of our schools will see the importance of this vital and much neglected subject, and be the first to apply the simple remedy?

A MOTHER.

What a Republican Says.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It is fortunate for the people and taxpayers of Plainfield that Joseph S. Cutter has consented to be a candidate for Mayor, and that means that he is not only nominally the Democratic candidate but is the candidate for the whole people. There could not have been named a better man for the taxpayers to vote for than Mr. Cutter. He is especially qualified for the office—being familiar with the affairs of Plainfield from its township government up to its present standing as a city. He would be faithful and true to the people at large, and his administration would be fearless in the interests of taxpayers, and every individual however humble, would receive from his hands the consideration due to every inhabitant of our city. He would advocate economy and frugality in our city government, and would be a blessing to the community over which he would preside. He is a man of unsullied reputation, and his public record is beyond censure. He would furthermore be at his post of duty every day, and every hour, would always be accessible and ready to attend to the business of the public, and his aptitude to direct our public affairs is admitted by everybody. Politics should not enter into this contest but the best man available for the position of Mayor should be triumphantly elected, and that man is Joseph S. Cutter.

REPUBLICAN.

Famous Women.

It is a significant fact that most of the women who have achieved fame in art, literature, or "affairs," have enjoyed vigorous health. This shows that the mind is never capable of the severe and continued application necessary to creative work, unless the body is at its best. The woman who aspires to fill an exalted place among her associates, must be free from nervous debility, etc. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will banish these, and it is warranted to restore those functional harmonies which are indispensable to health. As a specific for all those chronic ailments p culiar to women, it is unequaled.

BROTHERS OF THE CAMERA.

Plainfield's Amateur Photographers Ready to Join a League for Duplicating a National Collection of Views in Every Club Room in the Country.

The idea suggested at a recent meeting of amateur photographers of this section, that a collection of pictures be taken of all objects of interest in the various large cities, as well as of such artistic scenes as can be obtained of street life, has taken hold of the amateurs, and in a short time fine collections will decorate the rooms of the amateur societies.

It is said by young photographers that the poorest pictures of a city, or of a section remarkable for its artistic scenery, are those taken by the local photographer. Among objects familiar to the city professional he somehow fails to notice the curious, or such little bits of the picturesque, that would attract the camera man from out of town almost the first thing. It is believed that a valuable collection can be obtained, and one that will be most interesting to look over even by those living in the different cities. Some of the work has been already begun in New York, Philadelphia, and other places, and a survey of photographic subjects has been entered upon with encouraging results.

But this new plan will not be confined to the cities alone. A desire is now being expressed among the photographers that the entire United States be searched over for photographic gems, and that a general collection be procured for the various societies in the country which have the study of photography for their object. This idea is feasible, and will commend itself to all amateurs. To gather together the pictures is a comparatively easy matter. Already there are thousands of views to be carefully examined and the choice bits culled. The societies are now so numerous that every section of the country could be covered in a short space of time. For example, the Pacific Slope Camera Club could be depended upon to furnish the beautiful views of California and Oregon. That they would do it well goes without saying, for some of their work, already seen and admired by members of the Plainfield Camera Club, has been of unusual merit, and reflected much credit on the San Francisco amateurs.

Members of the Plainfield Camera Club who have journeyed about to any great extent and who have visited their brothers of the camera in different places, testify to the photographic skill met among the various clubs, as well as to the courteous and kindly feeling shown to strangers who with the camera as a pass word venture among other amateurs. In the South the New Orleans Society has a number of earnest members who would be delighted to furnish the objects of interest in their section either upon the photographic print or upon the lantern-slide screen. And so all through the country. There is a plenty to do the work. It needs only a moving spirit to start the systematic photographing. Foreign societies would take up a similar method, and in a short time the visitor to the rooms of the various societies would have the principal objects of the world before him.

Another advantage of such a collection would be its guide-book phase. Often on starting out on their trips the amateurs, Plainfielders and others alike, are bothered to know just where to go in certain localities to get their pictures, and sometimes much precious time is wasted in looking for the best photographic scenery or some one view that the amateur has heard of and wishes to procure. With a complete collection at his society rooms, he can readily study out ahead just what places he cares to visit and what views he may wish to gain. At the coming conference of amateurs in New York city, which Plainfield amateurs will attend, and at which an amateur league will probably be organized, the question of allied work in gathering the views of interest of the country will come up and a good start will be made.

The March of Methodism.

A summary of the reports of the Secretaries of the Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal church shows that of the $1,020,309 received for missions during the year, $460,170 was expended in the United States. There is a membership of 16,000 and $1,000,000 in property in the missions of Germany, 7,000 members in Switzerland, 15,000 in Sweden, 8,000 and a property of $500,000 in Norway, and a membership of 56,000 in the great Indian missions. The reports further state that there is to be a great Chinese Methodism, rivalling that in the English-speaking world.

One Thing the Editor Doesn't Know.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Do you know the name of the book that tells you how to flirt? If you do imform me through your your paper the name were it can be bought and the price of it.

LUCY.

THE PRESS must acknowledge that the question is one that it cannot answer. It can, however, give Lucy the names of many books that will do her more good; and would reccommend, among others, a spelling book and grammar.

Will Warm Their House With a Fair.

The entertainment committee of the Crescent League, at a meeting held last evening, decided that instead of another minstrel show they would arrange for a big fair to be given in the new club house as soon as the building is completed but before the alleys are put in.

PECULIAR PEOPLES.

THE Aleutians, of Alaska, make fire by dipping two pieces of quartz in sulphur, which abounds in the islands, and striking them together over a small heap of down on which sulphur has been sprinkled. Some tribes of Esquimaux use two pieces of iron pyrites or pyrites and flint, in the same way.

THE religion of Dahomeyland is to the effect that any soldier killed while fighting white men goes straight to Heaven to become a handsome young man of twenty-five, who is provided with fifteen beautiful wives and all the game he can eat for one thousand years. Under this belief hundreds of them do their best to get killed.

TUNISIANS have a rather unpleasant custom of "fattening up" their girls for marriage. A girl after she is betrothed is cooped up in a small room. Shackles of silver or gold are put upon her ankles or wrists as a piece of dress. If she is to be married to a man who has discarded or lost his former wife, the shackles which the former wife wore are put upon the new bride's limbs, and she is fed until they are filled up to the proper thickness.

THE Cochin China people strike two pieces of bamboo together and ignite tinder. The coating of amorphous, silex-like flint on the surface of the bamboo yields a spark at a sharp blow. The traveler, Mr. W. T. Homaday, says that the jungles are frequently fired by the excessive friction of the bamboos during a gale. The Tungaras of British North Borneo and the Ternate Malays carry attached to the girdle a joint of bamboo, often finely carved, containing tinder and a fragment of porcelain. The bit of china with tinder is held in one hand and struck against the bamboo tinder horn held in the other, generally getting a light at the first blow.

ON the Congo there are no beasts of burden, there existing merely a manual transport, the porters being the natives of the Bakongo tribe, inhabiting the cataract regions. In physique these men are slight and only poorly developed; but the fact of their carrying on their heads from sixty to one hundred pounds weight twenty miles a day, for sometimes six consecutive days, their only food being each day a little manioc root, an ear or two of maize, or a handful of peanuts, pronounces them at once as men of singularly sound stamina Small boys eight and nine years old are frequently met carrying loads of twenty-five pounds weight.

ACCORDING to recent accounts the natives of the Chin mountains, in Asia, must be unique. Their dwellings have no furniture; they have no laws, no religion and no government, except an incomplete village system. Medical science and surgery are absolutely unknown. Their habits are repulsive. Certain tribes are confirmed drunkards, consuming great quantities of beer brewed by themselves. They, however, display remarkable mechanical ingenuity, constructing wonderful bridges on the cantilever principle. In some tribes the sole arms are small knives and bows and arrows. They are skillful archers, killing tigers and bears at eighty yards. The women of all the tribes have their faces hideously tattooed to prevent their being carried off by the Burmans.

DAINTY FEMININE FANCIES.

THE girl of the period who has not got a string of Roman pearls is behind the crowd.

THE long-time problem of how a lady may prominently yet safely carry her watch is solved by the new leather bracelet, which has a fancy watch-pocket at the wrist.

THE newest way of folding a sheet of note-paper is to double it longwise. For this a very long, narrow envelope is provided. Much of this fancy stationery comes from Berlin and is not very expensive. That from Paris costs nearly twice as much.

MAUVE is the newest shade in English note-papers. There are plain and ornamental sorts in this color. The ornamental paper has a dim floral pattern scattered all over it and looks almost like chintz. Another new note-paper is the mignonette, in a very pale shade of green.

A LITTLE gilded or mottled-brown bamboo table as low as a five o'clock tea-table is very pretty and useful. It is convenient to hold books near the divan. A vase of ferns looks better there than set up higher. There is a special pleasure in looking down into a bouquet of daisies or other flowers, instead of up toward them, as they are usually placed.

A FAN of goose feathers! How unpoetical it sounds, and yet many a lady need only see to wish to possess one. Snow-white feathers with the natural quills replaced by the staves of the fan are arranged gracefully together and only the outside shows the complete feather. Each feather has a dainty border of flowers painted on it, in colors true to nature. The bow is composed of numerous loops of narrow ribbon the colors of the flowers.

AUTOGRAPH fans, a revival of an old fashion, are made this season of ivory paper, an excellent imitation of real ivory, and on each stick the name or sentiment and name of favorite beaux or friends can be inscribed with indelible ink. If you number an artist or a musician among your favorites a sketch or a bar of music and the autograph can perhaps be etched upon two or more of the sticks, along with the name of the etcher.

ONE of the latest devices for perfuming rooms is the perfumed oil sold by the lamp dealers for use in the high lamps of the drawing-room. Another is the use of cut glass flagons filled with aromatic and combustible fluids, and fitted with wicks and burners, which, kept constantly burning, add a religious suggestion as well as a fragrant atmosphere to the room. Then there are large atomizers in fine glass or porcelain, and mounted in gold or silver, from which at any time a cooling and odorous spray can be sent through a drawing-room. Secured in any way you will, your apartments must be filled with perfume.

THE DAY BEFORE THE WEDDING.

"Yes, Alice, strange as it must seem, it is, indeed, I, your Cyrus. The white caps called on me last night, and what, with a great deal of tar and a modicum of feathers, I feel constrained to ask you to postpone our marriage for a few days."—Life.

Not to Be Expected.

Lawyer—You say that the poison which the prisoner placed before his victim was concealed in a white liquid, and yet you are not prepared to swear that it was milk. Don't you know milk when you see it?

Witness—No, sir.

Lawyer (sarcastically)—Who are you, anyway?

Witness—I am a milkman.—Life.

A Malmed Hero.

Colonel Hooks (a candidate for Congress, addressing a meeting)—Gentlemen, I point with pride to my war record. Every time I went into battle I had an arm or leg shot off.

Inquisitive Constituent—And how many battles were you in?

Colonel Hooks—I fought, sir, in every one of General Grant's battles.—Light.

An Awful Discovery.

Dentist—I see what the matter is. The nerve of this tooth is exposed.

Boston Girl—Horrors! Turn your eyes away, sir.—Street & Smith's Good News

Are You a Nervous Sufferer?

Do You Have these Symptoms and Feelings?

Nervous affections are very prevalent, and are attended by restlessness and nervousness, an anxiety or depression of the mind, loss of interest in society and the daily affairs of life. There will be a tired, languid feeling, with a sense of exhaustion, upon waking in the morning. Persons so affected tire easily, having little power of endurance; there is often a bad taste in the mouth, with a faintness or sinking at the stomach; there may be a loss of appetite, or it will become variable, and digestion may be impaired. They gradually become nervous, restless and irritable, and there is often more or less loss of sleep.

There will be feelings of exhaustion, lassitude and lack of inclination for either physical or mental exertion. There is an almost constant sense of weakness, languor and dullness, often accompanied by strange and disagreeable sensations in the head and eyes, often followed by headache. The night's sleep, which should refresh the system and restore strength and vigor to the nerves and muscles, often leaves them in the morning more tired and exhausted than on retiring.

Persons thus affected are often despondent and suffer from gloom and depression of mind. The nerves become so weakened after a time that the least excitement or shock will flush the face and bring on a tremor of trembling, often attended by more or less palpitation of the heart.

If you have the above symptoms and feelings, or a portion of them, you are suffering from nervous disease, caused by an exhausted condition of the nerve power, which is slowly but surely sapping your life and energies; and it is absolutely necessary for you, if you would prevent insanity, paralysis, or total prostration, to use the great nerve invigorant and vital restorative, Dr. Greene's Nervura, which is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and for sale by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Refuse all substitutes, as this great remedy has no equal.

If you are weak, tired and nervous, with lifeless feeling and no ambition to work, or run down by malaria, it will restore your strength, vigor and energies. If you are sleepless and wake tired mornings, with dull head, bad taste in the mouth, no appetite, depression of mind and extreme nervousness, this wonderful remedy will clear your head, tone up your nerves, invigorate your blood and put vim and life into you.

Read This, Nervous Sufferer.

For eight years I have been constantly under the care of doctors, five years under eminent allopathic, and three with homœopathic physicians, but found no relief, nor, from what the doctors told me, did I expect to get any better. I was convinced they did not understand my case, so I thought I would try Dr. Greene's Nervura, and the result has been truly wonderful. I now feel in better health than for the last 20 years. During all this time I have been suffering with Malaria, Heart Disease, Kidney and Liver complaints, nervous prostration and sleeplessness. For the three months before taking Dr. Greene's Nervura I had been confined to my room, and most of the time to the bed. I feel, with the blessing of God, Dr. Greene's Nervura has given me a new lease of life and health, and that I am cured of all my troubles. I have a great desire that others may be benefited as I have been, and take every opportunity to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura to the sick.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

"My Ruthers."

I tell you what I'd ruther do—
Ef I only had my ruthers—
I'd ruther w'ork when I wanted to
Than be bossed round by others—
I'd want to kind o' git the swing
O' what was needed first, I jing!
Afore I sweat at any thing!
Ef I only had my ruthers—
In fact, I'd aim to be the same
With all men as my brothers;
And they'd all be the same with me,
Ef I only had my ruthers.

I wouldn't likely know it all—
Ef I only had my ruthers;
I'd know some sense, and some base-ball—
Some old jokes, and some others;
I'd know some politics, and 'low
Some tariff speeches same as now,
Then go and hear Nye on "Brains and How To Detect Their Presence."—T' others
'At stayed away, I'd let 'em stay—
All my dissentin' brothers
Could choose as shore s kill er k-yore,
Ef I only had my ruthers.

The pore 'ud git their dues sometimes—
Ef I only had my ruthers—
And be paid dollars 'stid o' dimes,
Fer children, wives and mothers;
Their boy 'at stokes; their girl 'at sews—
Fer others—not herself, God knows!—
The grave's her only change of clothes!
Ef I only had my ruthers—
They'd all have "stuff" and time enough
To answer one-another's
Appealin' prayer for "loving care"—
Ef I only had my ruthers

They'd be few folks 'ud ast fer trust
Ef I only had my ruthers,
And blamed few business men to bu'st
Theirselves, or hearts of others;
Big guns 'at come here durin' fair
Week could put up jest anywhere
And find a-full-and-plenty there,
Ef I only had my ruthers,
The rich and great 'ud 'sociate
With all their lowly brothers,
Feelin' 'y done the honorun—
Ef I only had my ruthers.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

A Backward Glance.

Were all the ways wherein you went,
In plentitude of calm content,
Of old,
Without my presence, lone or cold?

Were all the flowers that, year by year,
You watched, and kissed, and held so dear,
Less sweet,
Before God willed we two should meet?

Was every song and sweet refrain,
Whereof your lips are now so fain,
Unsung,
Or meaningless, without love's tongue?

For now, in looking backward, I
Discern no light nor melody,
Nor find
Any dear memory soul-enshrined;

Nor can I see aught blest or bright,
Aught of loveworthy, aught of right
Or true,
Until the day that brought me you.

To Slumberland.

The lights burn dimly where we sit,
The dancing shadows round us flit;
The stars that wink with sleepy eyes,
The winds that breathe but drowsy sighs,
The frog-songs hoarse and hollow—
They call to Slumber's Island bright,
And you must go alone to-night.
I may not follow.

What will you find in Slumberland?
Fair sights, if I can understand
The smile that curls your lip sometimes,
When I have lulled you with my rhymes,
And you are softly sleeping.
But what those happy sights may be
My waking eyes can never see,
Their vigil keeping.

I only know that something sweet
Awaits the coming of your feet;
That somewhere in the warm moonbeams
A flock of little fairy Dreams
Reach joyous hands of greeting;
And somewhere, somewhere, far away,
You with the little Dreams shall play,
Till night is fleeting.

Your head grows heavy on my breast.
Go, then, and find out all the rest!
Soft from my clasp I let you slip,
That dawning smile upon your lip,
And, patient, wait your waking;
All night through Slumber's Island roam,
And to my happy arms come home,
When day is breaking!

Because at night the babies cry
And wives a-wishing they might die

SLIMSEY'S LUCK.

He Wasted His Money and Got Licked Besides.

[Written for This Paper].

OCCASIONALLY misfortune tries to find out how many disasters of assorted sizes she can unload on a single individual in a single day. She tried an experiment of this kind not long since on a young man who went to Coney with ten dollars and his best Peri.

Although the season was drawing to a close when the gate on the pier was opened, quite an avalanche of typical Coney Island resorters poured over the gangway into the steamboat. There were Harlemites, East siders and people of both sexes, and dwellers on Cherry Hill, and swells from Pat Divver's ward and the region round about city hall. Italians from Mulberry street, Ethiops from Boulevard de Thompson, Jews from Chatham Square, girls from Macy's and other big female shopping rinks, a sprinkling of wilted dudes, proselytes, strangers in New York from the South and the hill country round about New Jersey.

Several brigandish-looking Italians were soon sawing away at their fiddles with as much earnestness as if the fiddles were the necks of belated travelers in the Apennines, the object of the serenade being to afford the passengers an opportunity to subsequently stab an upturned hat with a reluctant penny. They were, however, only executing Little Annie Rooney, but mixed up with the agonized squeaks of the tortured fiddles were crescendo gasps and B-flat gurgles of a human voice. It was not, however, the voice of Miss A. Rooney, but the wails proceeded from a gawky youth who was leaning far over the rail, and talking earnestly to the Atlantic ocean.

As the sea was very smooth the theory of seasickness as the cause of the young man's gastric disturbances was not seriously entertained by the other passengers, who made the sufferer the subject of their gibes, one young man going so far as to say that he was reminded of the title of a book he had read, entitled "Lifted Out of Himself."

There was, however, a good Samaritan on board, a clerical-looking gentleman, who, feeling for the young man, went over to him and held his head until he got through saying what he had to say.

"Not been drinking, I hope?"

"Not tonched a drop," responded the youth, whose features had somewhat readjusted themselves, wiping his eyes.

The young man was touched by the kindness of the stranger, and they became quite confidential as the boat sped on toward New York. The name of the young man was James Slimsey, and he lived on a farm in New Jersey. Near by lived a beauteous maid whom he loved. He said he was bound to have her.

"KICK HIM AGIN, BILL."

"Bound to Havre? You mean you were bound to Coney Island," interrupted the stranger, who was evidently of a humorous disposition.

"Same thing," replied Slimsey, who went on to say that he found it much easier to love the girl than to make the girl love him. Moreover, he had a rival, a fellow named Bill Pike. Slimsey had watched for an opportunity to steal a march on Bill Pike, but lacked capital. Fortunately he had found a purse containing ten dollars in the road, so he grasped the golden opportunity before it had time to turn the corner. He saw Katie at once and arranged for a trip among the chowder jungles of Coney Island.

"Could you not find the real owner of the money?" asked the clerical-looking gentleman.

"I think it belonged to dad," replied James.

"You should never take even a pin that does not belong to you."

"I had to. Bill Pike is a perfect spellbinder among the female sex."

Young Mr. Slimsey went on to tell about the progress of his courtship. "After she had wrapped herself around fifty cents' worth of doughnuts, hot sausages and other tropical fruits," to use the homely expression of the New Jersey swain, he could feel her grip tighten on his arm. "O! Jim, don't you smell that clam chowder," she said, with a beaming glance. "How about Bill Pike?" asked Jim, cautiously, before he made any more permanent investments. "You know I despise him," she replied, tossing her head scornfully. They immediately visited a clam-chowder laboratory, and there were several encores to the first plate. Subsequently there were ice-cream duets, in which the accomplished Miss Kate Shuckers—for that was her name—played the big spoon. The young man felt pretty sure that he was solid with Katie, and he came very near popping the question at the pop-corn stand, but to make certain, remembering the unreliability of the sex, he invested more of his capital in candy, hobby horses, lemonade, peanuts, two trips on the roller coaster, a tin type of them both in a group, and finally to clinch matters he took her to the large, stationary, artificial cow, into which the milk is let down through a trap door on her back just west of the spinal column, the milk being kept on tap in a queer-looking reservoir studded with large protuberances like young rolling pins. They quaffed numerous glasses of the delicious beverage, followed by some more lemonade and a round of boiled green corn, after which they had some cakes and had also to run the length of the pier to catch the boat. Owing to the motion of the boat both of them became ill, the young lady having sought the seclusion of the ladies' cabin.

As soon as the boat bumped against the New York landing the good Samaritan jumped ashore, and Jim undertook to conduct his dulcina to the Jersey City ferry. He noticed that Katie had not been as frisky as she had been during the day. In fact it was a "don't come near me" air about her that filled him with apprehensions. When they were seated in the cars on their way home, Jim—to use his own words—"got his dandruff up," and demanded:

"What's the matter? Haven't you had enough ter eat?"

"Nothing's the matter, Mr. Slimsey," was the short reply of that lady, as she peered out of the car window into the gloom. The fact was, that Katie (womanlike) blamed Jim for the motion of the boat, etc. "If he hadn't badgered me into it I never would have ate so much," she argued with herself. She was, moreover, angry because Jim had talked to the good Samaritan on the boat instead of consoling her.

"Got no use for me now that you are not hungry," said Jim bitterly. "Why didenter yer look at me thater way before I busted that ten dollar bill. Now you've got enough vittles at my expense to last you for a week, you don't keer whether school keeps or not."

"It's no sech thing," she replied with a scornful glance. "Mr. SImsey, you forget yourself."

"Oh, yes, I was 'dear Jim' this morning when bang! went a nickel every few minutes at every pop corn and sassidge stand on the island, but now I'm 'Mr. Slimsey.' Mebbe you are mad because I don't give you what you haven't gobbled up," said Jim producing the debris of the ten dollar bill.

"O, don't you worry. Bill Pike will pay you back," retorted Katie scornfully.

As the train approached the station the young man indulged in sad reveries. Among other things which he liked and had hoped to retain, but which he had lost that day, was the warm, parboiled affection of the only girl he loved. To him the future would be dull and monotonous. He would take no interest in any thing that happened.

In this, however he was mistaken, for a reception committee, composed of Bill Pike and a club was patiently waiting for him at the depot.

The ceremonies at the depot were very impressive, and consisted principally of exclamations of anger and pain, and the silvery laughter of Katie who incited Bill Pike to "give it to him good," and clapped her hands with joy.

Whack!! Whack! Go to Coney Island with my girl, will you! Whack!! Take that!! Kick him again, Bill, that was a good one! Whack-whack-whack!!!!

As Bill Pike was disappearing down the road with the young lady on his arm, Jim, who looked as if he had been trying to ride a bicycle, was cheered up by his younger brother who also got him at the depot, who told him to get home as soon as possible, as his father had been waiting fully two hours with a cart rung to ask him where he got that ten-dollar bill.

There was, however, a gleam of hope. He might appease the old man by giving him his gold watch. He felt for it, but it was gone. When the good Samaritan on the boat felt for James he also felt for his watch.

Doubtless other complications overtook the victim of circumstances before the day was entirely over, but enough has been written to demonstrate that not only the man who begins to descend the pole of success finds it easy work, but he who strives to climb also discovers that it is greased with the oleomargarine of adverse circumstances.

Verily, as the man said, when a bitter aloes pill rolled into a hollow tooth where he had no facilities for dislodging it: "There is no telling how bad things may go when they once get the hang of it."

ALEX. E. SWEET.

Took Him Literally.

Major—I think, Uncle Eph, it's high time for you to haul in your horns—that is, stop drinking. It will kill you sure.

Uncle Eph—Majah, I feared I been too long at it, an' cain' stop.

Major—Eph, it's never to-late to mend.

Uncle Eph (after a long spell of thinking)—Ef dat's so, Majah, I guess I'll keep on awhile longah.—Puck.

THE RULING PASSION.

Hollis Holworthy (Harvard '91)—Have I a rival?

Bella Sands—I think you have. George Betts is very attentive to her.

Hollis Holworthy—Is Betts a Yale man?

Bella Sands—No; Columbia.

Hollis Holworthy—Then he is no rival. We never admit of rivalry except with Yale men.—Puck.

Past Understanding.

Ada—It is strange what a long article a reporter can write on a mere trifle.

Lulu—I should say so. The other day one of them wrote a whole column on a bathing-suit.—The Jury.

Why She Wanted Him to Chew.

Mrs. Jones—You should make your husband quit chewing tobacco. If you ask him to do it I reckon he will do it.

Mrs. Brown—I dare say; but I'm not going to ask him to quit chewing tobacco.

"When your husband kisses you don't the taste of tobacco make you sick?"

"Yes; but I want him to keep on chewing tobacco all the same. He kisses three or four more women, and the tobacco makes them sicker than it does me, for they haven't got used to it yet, like I have."—Texas Siftings.

Forced Upon Him.

The poor man was inconsolable for the loss of his wife.

"I will do it now," he cried, in a tone of anguish that melted his hearers' hearts; "I must do it!"

They tried to dissuade him from all thoughts of self-destruction, but their efforts seemed in vain.

"No, no!" he cried. "'Twas she alone that kept me from it. I can not avoid it since she is gone. I'll have to go to work at last myself!"—Philadelphia Times.

A Change of Circumstances.

Mrs. Lonely Widder—I brought you three weeks ago a number of books to have engrossed upon their first blank pages: "From my husband, my first and only love." Have you finished the work?

Artist—I have been ill and am sorry to say that I have not yet commenced the work. But I will—

Mrs. L. W.—All the better; as you have not begun the work, substitute "From my first husband, Charles Widder."—American Stationer.

A FATAL DEFECT.

He—What! You reject me?

She—Yes; I am going to marry General Sawmills.

He—What; a man with a crippled arm?

She—You are a worse cripple than he is.

He (indignantly)—How so?

She—You are crippled financially.—Light.

He Was Very Good Indeed.

Merchant—You say you are a good bookkeeper.

Applicant—Yes, sir; I go to church at least twice on Sunday and whenever occasion calls.

Merchant—I think the real-estate agent next door wants a bookkeeper. I want an expert rather than an angelic one.

Applicant—But you advertised for a good one, and I am very good.—American Stationer.

A Question of Joggerfy.

"Pop," said Willie, "our joggerfy says there ain't nothin' but snow and ice at the north pole. Is that so?"

"Yes."

"And is it the same way at the south pole?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, that's why these men you read about are constantly talking about being frozen out at the polls, ain't it?"—Washington Post.

Taking the Clock Out to Strike.

Having observed Mr. Wilson on several occasions come out of his door with his clock in a mysterious manner, we ventured to inquire into the matter, and received the following reply: "You see, dat clock of mine hez got a mighty loud strikah, so sometimes, when de baby's asleep, I take it out de doo' an' let it strike, soze not to wake de chile."—Harper's Bazar.

The Landlady Could Wait.

Bob (to room-mate)—The landlady just dunned me for our last two weeks' rent. We ought to settle up.

Bill—All right, let's pay it; but (reflectively) if we do we won't be able to bet on a race for at least a month.

Bob—Oh, in that case let it stand. The old pelican can wait—until the races at Linden are over, any how.—Texas Siftings.

No Danger.

Jamser—What are you doing nowadays?

Spacer—I am writing the lives of great men for a biographical dictionary that is being compiled.

Jamser—Aren't you afraid to undertake work of that sort?

Spacer—Oh, no! The men I am writing about are all dead.—Puck.

A Recommend.

Mrs. Kimper (to New Boarder)—I'm glad to know that one of my former boarders referred you here. He spoke quite strongly in praise of my house, understood you to say.

New Boarder (who came for a purpose)—Yes; he said he lost twenty pounds in the six months he boarded here.—Puck.

An Easy Place.

"Hullo, Bill," said Tramp No. 1, "whatcher going to do for the winter?"

"I've got a place in the post-office."

"What do you have to do?"

"Keep an eye on the police, so's I won't get put out."—Puck.

Prosaic.

Miss Rosalie—Isn't it too bad that the leaves have begun to turn?

Trotter—Oh, I don't know; it's only natural. Even a worm will turn.—Judge.

MUCH LIKE OTHER TRAMPS.

Baboony—Aw—Tom—Cawn't you lend me a ten? I find myself short and I want to get a bite of dinner.

Wiggins—Yes; here's ten cents. Go and get some pork and beans.—Texas Siftings.

Generous.

Mr. Schaunburger—More monish, Moses! Vat do you do mit it all?

Moses—Play billiards, pa!

Mr. Schaunburger—Vy do you blay so much ov dose pilliards, mine poy?

Moses—Oh, to spend the time, pa!

Mr. Schaunburger—Vell, Moses, you can spend all de dime you vand, put nod mine monish, Moses.—Judge.

A Reason.

He—Why are bears your favorite animals?

She—Because they hug.—Munsey's Weekly.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

The Best Remedy

In this world, says J. Holbert of Syracuse, N. Y., is Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son who was partially paralized three years ago and attacked by fits, has not had any symptoms of them since he took one bottle of the remedy. I most heartily thank for it.

Nervous Prostration Cured.

CROGHAN, N. Y. June, 1888.

I was not able to do anything for 19 months, was confined to bed most of the time, couldn't eat nor sleep, was so nervous and dizzy that I could not walk from the house to the garden, I was all run down by what the doctors called nervous prostration. No medicine seemed to help me. Then I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and now I can eat and sleep and have no more sinking spells, can do my housework again. I am very thankful for this and recommend the Tonic to all sufferers.

SUSIE VERSHNEIDER.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

THE BARKER CRASH

Great Sympathy Expressed for the Old Banking House.

THE ASSIGNMENT UNAVOIDABLE

The Liabilities Estimated at $3,000,000 and Creditors Not Numerous.

Wharton Barker's Son-in-Law Appointed Assignee—Official Reports at Washington Show an Improved Financial Condition at Money Centres—Rumors About the Union Pacific Road.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—The failure of the well-known banking firm of Barker Brothers was a surprise to the street. The liabilities are said to be about $3,000,000 and the creditors are not numerous.

The firm consists of Wharton Barker, Abram Barker and Joseph Wharton. Mr. Wharton Barker is President of the Finance Company. The firm also controls the Wharton Switch Company, and gained a world-wide reputation some time ago by the Chinese inter-telegraphing banking scheme. They are also the Philadelphia correspondents of the Barings, the great London bankers. It is said the failure was due to their inability to put acceptabe collaterals with the banks. They were largely interested in outside ventures, which did not command a ready market.

The firm has of late been doing very little business through the Stock Exchange. An assignment has been made to Edward Mellor, who is the son-in-law of Wharton Barker.

The names of the Investment Company of Philadelphia, of which Wharton Barton was a prominent director, and the Finance Company of Pennsylvania, of which he was the president, were connected in various alarming ways with the rumors succeeding the assignment, but the reports were highly exaggerated in all important particulars. The Finance Company is, however, indirectly involved. A syndicate has agreed to advance $1,000,000 to protect its obligations and no further apprehension regarding its affairs is felt.

Much sympathy is expressed for Abraham Barker, the venerable head of the firm, and many well-known men in all kinds of business called on him to assure him of their sympathy and esteem. Mr. Barker was very much affected. He said he thought it very hard after a business career of 53 years to be thus overwhelmed by a financial cyclone. During the past few days he said he had devoted all his time and financial ability to raising money for the help of others, and when his own time of need came those who were indebted to the house failed to meet their obligations, and suspension became inevitable.

MONEY EASIER.

Reports Received at Washington Show that the Financial Condition is Better.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Assistant Secretary Nettleton of the Treasury Department said that reports received at the Treasury Department from its official agents show that the financial condition at money centers is improving. Money is easier at New York, but is still tight at Boston and Philadelphia. The Western money centers have at no time been seriously affected, and what stringency existed was more of a sympathetic nature than real.

The Union Pacific Trouble.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—President Adams of the Union Pacific and President Hughitt of the Northwestern have been in this city since Tuesday, and it is said that some important developments will soon occur. Gould's people state that the board of directors of the Union Pacific will be reorganized within ten days, and a statement is circulated that President Adams has signified his willingness to hand in his resignation if it is asked for. It is also said that if he finds that the large stockholders are opposed to him he will resign.

Money Scarce in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Money is so scarce in Buffalo that holders of grain, finding that they have no chance of raising money on it readily, are sending it forward to New York, where the chances, though not good, are still much better than they are here. One dealer with a $70,000 draft and plenty of grain behind it, failed to raise any money at the banks and sent his grain forward.

Improvement in the London Market.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—There is great improvement in the stock market all around and it is thought that the worst is over, although sharp fluctuations are inevitable. American securities showed a slight advance. At the regular meeting of the Bank of England no change was made in the bank's discount rate. In the open market the discount rate is nominally 7 per cent.

Bank Officers Will Stop the Run.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 21.—The run continued on the Howard Savings Bank. All accounts have thus far been paid in gold. It is understood that after to-day the bank will refuse to pay out accounts until it has received thirty days' notice as required by law.

The New Hampshire Legislature.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 21.—Prominent Republicans say that the Governor and Council will this afternoon decide to call a special session of the Legislature early in December to consider important questions in connection with the organization of the next House of Representatives.

Liberal Contributions to Booth.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Gen. Booth has met with a gratifying reception thus far in his tour of the provinces in advocacy of his scheme for the relief of the poverty-stricken masses of England. At Bradford the amount contributed was $15,000 and such enthusiasm was manifested.

STOLE $25,000.

Arrest Soon Follows the Commission of a Brilliant Theft.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The Flour City National Bank officials had a surprise sprung upon them shortly after opening for business. A letter from the National Bank of Commerce in New York city was received announcing that $25,000 han been sent by express, "as per telegraphic order."

As the bank had not sent any order of the kind, there was the liveliest kind of hustling to find out who had perpetrated the fraud. A clerk was sent to the express office, where it was ascertained that at 9 o'clock one Moses S. Marks, formerly an attache of the bank, had called and received the money in $10 and $20 bills.

Inquiry established the fact that Marks had wired for the money yesterday, signing Cashier William A. Waters' names to the message. The Bank of Commerce sent the money without hesitation, as it is the New York agent for the Rochester bank.

Marks disappeared with the boodle. He is a young man who has hitherto borne an excellent reputation, and the express people, believing him still to be still connected with the bank, handed him over the money at once, as he was well known to them.

The Thief Arrested.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Marks was captured in a dance house in this city by Chief of Police Dagwell and Detective Cleveland, who had traced his movements from a hotel. Marks' satchel containing $24,650 of the stolen money, in the original package, was recovered. Marks had shaved off his moustache. He positively refused to make any statement. The Rochester officials have been notified of his capture.

"THE POOR MAN'S PRIEST."

Cardinal Gibbons Sues the Author of the Book for Libel.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21.—Cardinal Gibbons has served papers on Hyacinthe Archibald Ringrose, of Yale University, summoning him to appear in the Federal Court of the Eastern District of Maryland on January 25 next, to answer in a suit for damages, presumably on a charge of libel.

Mr. Ringrose's book, "The Poor Man's Priest," which is the life and endorsement of Dr. McGlynn, is dedicated to Cardinal Gibbons, but, it now appears, without the Cardinal's consent. The Cardinal has also communicated with the publishers here restraining the use of his name in connection with the book.

Mr. Ringrose is a communicant of the Catholic Church and has a brother a priest.

The Jewelers' Annual Dinner.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The 16th annual dinner of the New York Jewelers' Association was held at Delmonico's last night. Covers were laid for 200. President Henry E. Ide occupied the chair. Among those present were ex-President Cleveland, H. E. Hastings of Hartford, Charles W. Harcher of Wheeling, A. P. Bigelow of Boston, Col. Sheafer of Washington, W. H. Hennegan of Baltimore, George B. Jaques, James H. Hart and Clement Weaver of Philadelphia, J. Harvey Wattles of Pittsburg, and L. D. Cole of Newburyport, Mass. The speech of the evening was delivered by ex-President Cleveland.

Probably a Murder.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 21.—What may turn out to be a murder was done on Main street, near the Scajaquada Creek bridge, yesterday evening. John Cranchfield, a milkman, while passing that point, turned out for another team and ran too close to a gang of electric railroad track laborers to please them and they assaulted him with their tools, beating him badly and inflicting injuries which may prove fatal. Cranchfield has a fracture of the skull and other serious injuries. Several arrests have been made.

Brutal Work of Burglars.

OIL CITY, Pa., Nov. 21.—Burglars entered the residence of John Anderson, in this city, during the night. He had drawn $1,000 from the bank to buy a city bond yesterday. The robbers evidently thought he had not yet made the purchase, but they were mistaken. They pounded him brutally on the head, choked his wife, knocked his step-daughter insensible and left all tied hand and foot. They got about $50. They were in the house an hour, but were masked. There is no clue to their identity.

FIGHT WITH INDIANS

A Report that Sixty Redskins Were Killed.

LONGPIPE FULL OF REFUGEES.

The Entire Country Around Pine Ridge Agency Thoroughly Aroused.

General Miles Telegraphs the War Department that There Are Signs of an Uprising—The Ghost Dancers Working for an Outbreak—General Brooke Arrives on the Scene After a Heavy March.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Secretary Proctor and General Schofield have been in receipt to-day of many dispatches from General Miles indicating that the Indians at Rosebud and Pine Ridge agencies are still giving signs of an uprising. Though the War Department doubts very much that a revolt will occur, orders have been issued for the concentration of troops at the two agencies mentioned, and the utmost care is to be taken that the white settlers shall be protected. General McKeever said to-day that the Government would within the next 24 hours have troops enough upon the scene to suppress any outbreak.

Just after noon General Miles telegraphed that the ghost dancers at the Rosebud Agency had left the reservation and visited the Pine Ridge Agency, where they were doing their utmost to provoke an uprising. He also stated that the Indian agent at this point had been compelled to abandon his post on account of the hostile attitude of the Sioux. He added that more troops have been ordered to Pine Ridge, and he believed the force available would be sufficient to quell any rebellion.

SOLDIERS ON THE MARCH.

They Suffer Terribly from Cold on Their Way to Pine Ridge Agency.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Nov. 21.—General Brooke and the military, numbering a few less than 400, arrived at Pine Ridge Agency at 7 a. m., after the roughest forced marche ever experienced by the oldest members of the command.

The troops suffered terribly from the cold during the march of 25 miles, which was begun at 12 o'clock. The roads are so rough that several wagons were overturned on the way, and a teamster named Burke, from Fort Omaha, was buried under one of them, his hip being broken. Many long delays were caused by such accidents. There were no hostiles to meet the soldiers when they arrived at the agency, and they at once went into camp on a plateau commanding the entire valley.

Jack Red Cloud and a lot of the fanatics were at Wounded Knee, 25 miles away, putting the finishing touches on a four days' ghost dance.

The Indian police have all resumed their duty. There are seldom any Indians about the agency excepting on issue days, consequently there is a lack of hostiles about the post, most all of them being down on the reservation at the various villages, where they are holding their horses in defiance of the orders of the agent. The next issue day is Monday.

AN INDIAN FIGHT.

Ghost Dancers and Anti-Messiah Reds Slaughter Each Other.

VALENTINE, Neb., Nov. 21.—The Ghost Dancers and anti-Messiah reds were in collision 20 miles from Pine Ridge. The row seems to have been desperate.

Two runners reached Rushville with the news that during the fight between 50 and 60 Indians were killed. These runners were unable to give details, however, and the probability is that the above number may represent the number injured. Indians do not usually slaughter each other under such circumstances.

Attorney-General Dollard of South Dakota had heard the rumor of the fight and the killing, but he could not confirm it.

Longpipe, he said, was full of refugees. At a rough estimate, 1,200 men, women and children have fled from the country north of the railroad and about the Pine Ridge Agency. Every freight train that stopped at the small side tracks west of here was besieged by people demanding to be carried East. The entire country is thoroughly aroused, and everybody who can get away is doing so.

Gov. Hill's Reception to Young People.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Governor Hill gave a brilliant reception to young people at the Executive Mansion last night in honor of his military secretary, Col. E. L. Judson and wife, upon their return from their wedding tour. There were about 250 persons present, most of whom were from Albany and Troy. The two spacious halls on the upper floors were given up to dancing, and the house was handsomely decorated with flowers.

Winter in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 21.—A severe frost prevails here. Heavy snow has fallen and the River Neva is full of drift ice.

HARVARD OR YALE.

Excitement Over To-Morrow's Football Game at Springfield.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 21.—All is excitement and enthusiasm at Harvard just now, and the only topic of conversation is the Yale game at Springfield to-morrow. That the feeling is high was evidenced by the enthusiasm shown at the last practice game of the season. Every man was loudly cheered and every individual play was applauded. Lake and Fearing played a magnificent halfback, and Lane played so brilliantly that he received a regular ovation. He never failed to make his 10 or 15 yards, and often with two or three men clinging to him. Cumnock played in his old form at end and both he and Hallowell tackled to perfection.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the Harvard eleven and substitutes leave Boston for Springfield in a private car attached to the regular express. It was the idea at first to pass through Springfield and stay over night at Hartford, thus surely avoiding the excitement and notice which permeate Springfield on the eve of the game. But this plan has been rejected, and the eleven will pass the night at Springfield in a private house, in a retired part of the town. To-morrow forenoon they will take a short walk around the town, and after lunch proceed directly to the grounds, where they will "do or die."

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—"I don't attach much importance to the dispatch," said Dr. McGlynn to a reporter. "It's all news to me. I have no reason to believe that I am soon to be reinstated in my ministry as a priest. I cannot believe that Bishop Moore has given his authority for any such statement."

WORKING FOR DR. M'GLYNN.

A Report that He Is Soon to be Reinstated as a Priest.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—A morning newspaper says that the Rev. Dr. McGlynn is soon to be reinstated as a priest in good standing of the Church of Rome. This is learned upon good ecclesiastical authority.

Bishop Moore of St. Augustine, Fla., has been working in Dr. McGlynn's behalf incessantly. His efforts have at last been so far successful that Dr. McGlynn's case will soon be reopened at Rome.

Wholesale Poisoning.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 21.—A startling report comes from Clinton, a small place a few miles north of here, to the effect that a case of wholesale poisoning has startled that town. It is said that eight persons have been poisoned—a man and his wife, two children and four brothers. Particulars have not yet been learned, but it is known that at least one man is dead while others are seriously ill. Coroner Wilson has been called out there and nothing definite will be known until he returns, as Clinton is out of the reach of the telegraph and telephone.

Grave Charges Against a Minister.

KEYPORT, N. J., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Alonzo Armstrong, daughter of Cornelius Button, a leading family of this town, charges Rev. Robert Chew, the pastor of Methodist Episcopal Churches at Cliffwood and Jacksonville, N. J., with attempting to assault her. The Presiding Elder of the district will investigate the charges. Chew is a married man. Mrs. Armstrong's husband is the associate editor of the Keyport Enterprise.

The World's Fair Site Question Settled.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The vexatious site question for the World's Fair was finally settled by the adoption of the report of the National Committee on Grounds and Buildings. The report provides for the main portion of the fair to be located in Jackson Park, the art gallery, music hall and electrical display to be placed on the lake front, and Midway Plaisance and Washington Park to be used for the overflow.

Two Freight Trains Wrecked.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 21.—A broken car wheel threw the cars of a freight train off the tracks of the Boston & Albany Railroad at Milbury Junction. Another freight was passing at the time and the result was the two trains were piled together. About 35 cars with contents were sprinkled over the tracks. Some of the passengers were transferred around the tracks. No one was injured.

Burglars Rob a Postoffice.

SILVER CREEK, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Burglars broke open the postoffice safe early in the morning and got away with money, registered letters and stamps amounting to about $1,000. The work on the safe indicates that the robbers were professionals. The postoffice is on the main street, and the robbery was a nervy undertaking.

Killed at a Crossing.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Nov. 21.—Merwin L. Stowell, aged 20, a clerk in the Third National bank of Pittsfield, was killed by an express train last night at the Hinsdale crossing, while walking across the track. He was on his way home, which is in Hinsdale. His brother, who was with him, narrowly escaped.

Sudden Death of a Telegraph Operator.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Thomas G. Kennedy, the well known telegraph operator, and for many years chief operator and assistant night manager in the main office of the Western Union Telegraph Company in this city, was stricken with apoplexy during the forenoon and died within an hour.

Two Men Killed While Fooling.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 21.—Samuel Klingensmith and W. H. Mathias, members of a shifting crew, were killed on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Rankin Station. The men were fooling on the cowcatcher of the engine, when suddenly both fell off on the track in front of the engine and were killed. Mathias leaves a widow and [illegible]

DAVITT TO PARNELL

He Asks for the Retirement of the Irish Leader.

THE NATIONALISTS ALL LOYAL.

They Meet in Convention and Pass a Vote of Confidence.

Enthusiastic Remarks by Justin McCarthy and Mr. Healy—Fifty Priests Attend a Galway Meeting and Listen to Words of Praise for the Irish Statesman—A Government Surprise Coming.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Mr. Davitt's advice in the Labor World to Mr. Parnell is attracting more attention than similar utterances on this subject, owing to Davitt's undoubted freedom from prejudice and his great reputation for fairness in such discussions.

Mr. Davitt maintains that those who argue that the control of the Irish party is the sole affair of the Irish people, and that nothing will be involved or jeopardized if they do not repudiate Parnell's leadership, unconsciously play into the hands of the enemies of home rule. "Others," he continues, "with surpassing, extraordinary ignorance of the necessities of this political crisis, say that Parnell, as a Protestant, is not morally responsible to the Catholics. Those who advance the latter argument are shaking the very foundations upon which home rule stands in England.

"Mr. Parnell is asked," says Mr. Davitt, "to make a small sacrifice in return for the sacrifices that a confiding and generous people have made for him. He must not consider his own political future in this crisis, but what is the best course to adopt in the interest of home rule in England. He must remember that he defied Irish popular sentiment when he rode rough-shod over the feelings and opinions of his own party when in 1886, in the presence of another serious crisis, he thrust O'Shea upon the electors of Galway. The wounds thereby inflicted upon the minds of his ablest followers are yet unhealed. Loyalty to the union, fidelity to the cause, compelled his colleagues to gulp down their indignation. Will Mr. Parnell now ask a similar sacrifice from his home rule friends in England? He should retire."

LOYAL TO PARNELL.

A Resolution of Confidence Passed at the Leinster Mass Meeting.

DUBLIN, Nov. 21.—It is stated in Nationalist circles that Mr. Parnell will resign at the end of the approaching session of Parliament, and offer himself as a candidate for re-election.

At the mass meeting in Leinster a telegram from the Nationalist envoys in America was read expressing their staunch loyalty to Mr. Parnell.

The Mayor of Leinster read an address in which he declared that the only crime which Ireland would ever condemn Mr. Parnell for was one of which he was incapable, namely, treason to Ireland.

Justin McCarthy, in moving a vote of confidence in the leader of the party, said that they did not ignore the serious nature of the question they had to encounter, but they were sure it would not cost them a single friend who had supported them from the first. Mr. Healy said that for Irishmen Mr. Parnell was less a man than an institution.

The Mayor of Cork and other speakers supported the resolution of confidence, and it was carried amid great enthusiasm. The meeting was very largely attended.

GLADSTONE'S ATTITUDE.

Liberal Leaders Intend to Treat Mr. Parnell as a Political Figure.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—John Morley, speaking at Sheffield, said that the Liberals had a duty toward Ireland which stood on its own merits. This was no time to consider the case of Mr. Parnell. Right Hon. A. J. Mundella, of Mr. Gladstone's former ministry, also made a similar statement in the course of an address to his constituents.

These speeches are taken as giving the cue to Mr. Gladstone's attitude on the subject. If so, they would indicate that the Liberal leader intends to treat Mr. Parnell as a political figure entirely, ignoring his personality and paying no attention to the developments in the divorce case. In this he would have ample precedent in English political history.

Parnell Endorsed.

DUBLIN, Nov. 21.—At a convention of League delegates in County Galway Mr. Esmonde, M. P., declared that the Irish people would be the greatest of fools if they changed their leader at this juncture. Mr. Sheehy, M. P.; Colonel Nolan, M. P., and others endorsed this view. There were 50 priests present at the meeting.

Stanley Denounced by Troup.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—On his arrival from America Lieutenant Troup denounced Stanley as a retailer of messroom gossip and hearsay tales about dead men. The Lieutenant added that he would avoid any further personalities unless he was compelled in self defense to to face the issue.

Parnell Must Lead.

DUBLIN, Nov. 21.—The Irish Catholic newspaper thinks that while Mr. Parnell has sinned nearly as much against Ireland as against morality, grave political exigencies demand that he be continued as the leader of the Irish party.

Pellegrini Will Not Resign.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—There is no truth in the rumor that President Pellegrini of the Argentine Republic is going to resign.

Mr. Spurgeon Attacked With Gout.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Rev. Dr. Charles H. Spurgeon, the famous preacher, is confined to his house with an attack of gout.

HIS DEATH WAS ORDERED.

The Removal of the Murdered Russian General Decided at a Nihilist Meeting.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The excitement over the death of General Seliverskoff, the Russian Police Agent, continues unabated. All sorts of rumors as to the motive of the crime are advanced.

The Eclaire to-day says that it was decided at a meeting of the Nihilist committee, held several days ago, that if Sophia Gunsberg, who was tried in St. Petersburg this week for having bombs in her possession, was sentenced to death, General Seliverskoff would be killed as soon thereafter as possible. The woman was sentenced to be hanged last Monday and the assassination of General Seliverskoff took place on the following day.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—The short-hand class will meet as usual at the Y. M. C. A. to-night.

—The Syracuse papers of last Tuesday had long extracts, duly credited to THE PRESS of Plainfield, about the Mills meetings here.

—There is no doubt that Winter has come. A plumber's horse slipped on the ice and fell at the corner of Park avenue and Front street, at seven o'clock this morning.

—Owing to a confusion of dates, the Dottie Pine Company were compelled to stay over two nights in this city. To-night the Company will open in Westchester, Pa.

—The spectacle is presented today of THE PRESS urging the people of the first ward to vote for both candidates. This will however be understood as the voice of the advertiser, paid for at so much an inch.

—John J. Kenney positively refuses to run for City Assessor, and emphatically insists that no one shall vote for him. Of course, if there was any hope of his defeating Assessor Hubbard—but that's different.

—The incidental expenses attached to the revival meetings recently conducted in Plainfield by Mr. Mills, for carpentry work, printing, advertising, and other details, amounted to about $700, all of which was raised by contributions at the churches the morning of the first Sunday.

—Some one has figured out that the daily cost of operating a street railway by electricity is twelve cents per mile, while the cost of operating the same road by mule power is a fraction over five cents per mile. Nevertheless, Plainfield's electric road will not be run by mule power.

—There will be a special service at the Congregational church, this evening, at 7:30, to which the pastor cordially invites all the young people of the congregation and Sunday school, especially such as have signed cards in the Mills' meetings, and any others who may be interested to come whether at present members of the congregation or not.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Rev. Dr. Carroll of this city, preached from the pulpit of the M. E. church in Westfield on Sunday morning last.

Among the hosts of belles and swells at Elizabeth's charity ball, Wednesday evening, was David S. Wotherspoon of this city.

Judge John Ulrich of this city, is negotiating for one of the corners of Park street and the Boulevard, Ripley Hill, Mount Ararat, N. J.

The first of the season's series of Seminary lectures was delivered last evening. It was by the Rev. Wm. Hayes Ward of The Independent, on Explorations in Babylon.

Drs. Wm. C. Boone, of this city, and John M. Randolph, of Rahway, the newly elected coroners of this county, were sworn in as such at the County Clerk's office, Wednesday.

The Rev. T. Logan Murphy of North Plainfield, and the Rev. S. P. Simpson of Netherwood, were among the guests at the ninth annual festival of the Choir Guild of the Diocese of New Jersey at Elizabeth, Tuesday.

Edward Kimball, the famous debt raiser, who helped lift the mortgages from the Park Avenue Baptist and Crescent Avenue Presbyterian churches, was one of the prominent figures on the platform at the young people's meeting conducted by Mr. Mills last Sunday.

Miss Jennie Houghton, who will skate at The Crescent Thanksgiving afternoon and evening, has been preparing herself for the stage under the best known instructors for some months past. She will make her debut early in next year. Her charming person and attractive ways admirably fit her for success in the profession she has chosen.

The Fire Gong Soon to Toot.

Mr. Blackall, constructing lineman for the Gamewell Fire Alarm Telegraph Company, with T. O. Doane, Chief Engineer of Plainfield's Fire Department, has been making a tour of the city to arrange for the construction of Plainfield's fire alarm system, and the work of stringing the wires will be begun at once.

He is a Presbyterian.

To relieve the curiosity of a large number of people, THE PRESS would state that the Rev. B. Fay Mills is a Presbyterian, and was a member in a lower class in Hamilton College at the same time that the Rev. Mr. Cadwell, now of Westfield, was a student at that institution.

Colored Voters Announce Their Independence.

The colored voters of Plainfield have organized themselves into a "Colored Independent Club," with the following officers: President—Wm. Douglass; Vice-President—Wm. Mayhew; Secretary—Wm. Kline; Treasurer—Samuel Wilson.

Seventh-Day Baptist Yearly Meeting.

The "yearly meeting" of the Seventh-Day Baptist churches of New Jersey and of New York city, will open at New Market this evening. There will be no services at the Seventh-Day Baptist church in this city, to-morrow.

The Army That's Coming to Plainfield.

The Salvation Army, which is perfecting plans to open a barracks in Plainfield and open up a local war on Satan and his cohorts, is a standing puzzle to most people. It of course excites only the amused contempt of the average conventional church members. Mrs Modish, who gracefully confesses herself a miserable sinner, in a $500,000 church, in accordance with the form set down in her silver-bound hundred-dollar prayer book, is much scandalized because the horrid vulgar creatures have the audacity to call themselves Christians. Really, she declares, the presumption of the lower classes is dreadful. Old Putancall, who is worth a dozen or so millions, and who is the munificent patron of the Church of the Rich Sinners, thinks that the members of the army are either fools or knaves, and wonders why the police don't break them up. And dear old Dr. Toady pastor of St. Nabob's church, waxes eloquent at many a swell dinner party as he shows how the Army disgraces the cause of religion. "As a gentleman"—he says—"I disapprove of any movement which allows coarse, uneducated men and women to speak for the church." So it goes. And yet in spite of all the Salvation Army continues to grow, and is now so important a fact that the churches must reckon with it. In England, even more than in this country, it has proved its right to exist, by doing what the churches, with their dignified traditions and their cumbrous machinery, cannot possibly do, until at last it has gained the respect and sympathy of a Cardinal of the Holy Roman church and of some of the greatest dignitaries of the Anglican establishment. An eminent New York clergyman says: "Don't crack jokes, either good or bad, at the Salvation Army, ridiculous as some of its practices may seem to you. The Christian church is responsible for the Army; for if it had done its duty in preaching the Gospel to every creature, the Army would have had no excuse for being."

A Boulevard Maiden Paralyzes a Borough Youth.

It came to pass that Algernon Sniggle-fritz of the Borough, walked down Park avenue.

On the arm of Algernon Sniggle-fritz leaned the angelic maiden, Cleopatra Nancy McMulligan, of the Boulevard.

As they journeyed the couple drew near to a drug store, and the damsel slackened her pace that she might listen to the merry and tumultuous fizz of the soda fountain.

But the young man was loath to linger, as he was short of lucre, and his pockets held but a small quantity of the coin of the realm.

"Let us walk a little faster, Cleopatra," —he suggested.

"Oh, Algernon,"—replied the damsel—"I thought you were fond of astronomy."

"I am."

"But you are not."

"How so; what meanest thou?"

"If you were you would manifest a stronger interest in the soda act."

And as Algernon murmured "zodiac—soda act" to himself he fell to the pavement a limp and apparently lifeless mass, and Sergeant Lynch was called to bear him hence.

Knights Wear Their New Uniforms at a Knightly Feast.

The Knights of Honor of Wetumpka Lodge were out in their new uniforms and with a drum corps last night, to escort a number of guests from the railway station to their lodge rooms, where a first-rate entertainment was provided. The musical programme included selections by Miss Gussie Walcott on the zither and piano, Mr. L. Baxter on the violin, Miss Clara L. Bowlee, contralto, and Miss Edith Mason, soprano. Miss May Colyer, recitationist, was unable to be present, and an excellent baritone took her place. Among the visitors were Grand officers of the State, and people from Brooklyn, Newark, and other neighboring cities. Everyone was royally treated. The banquet at the close of the other entertainment was of surpassing excellence.

Mr. Murray to Stir Up Mt. Ararat's Young Men Christians.

Among other prominent speakers who will address the third convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of the Fourth District of New Jersey to be held in Westfield, Friday and Saturday of next week, will be Wm. D. Murray of this city, whose subject will be "Encouragement to Fidelity on the part of Directors." Westfield has no organized Y. M. C. A., but the expectation is to stir up the young men in the place to form an organization.

The associations in the Fourth District comprise those of Asbury Park, Cranberry, New Brunswick, Plainfield, Rutgers College, Rutgers Grammar School, and Rahway. A movement to start a Y. M. C. A. in Elizabeth will be begun soon.

Mills Coming Near Again.

As first stated exclusively in these columns as probable, it has since been definitely arranged that the Rev. B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, will be in Westfield on March 20, 1891. Final arrangements to that end were made by the Revs. J. K. Folwell and N. W. Cadwell at a meeting with Mr. Mills in this city, on Monday last.

As a cough remedy, Hires' Cough Cure is, perhaps, the best medicine that science has ever discovered. It cuts the phlegm and mucus, relieves the lungs and chest, breaks up cold as nothing else will do. In croup and whooping-cough its prompt action is like magic. No family should be without it.

Somerset's Senator Gives His Friends a Grand Good Time.

Senator-elect Keyes of Somerset county, gave a large number of his friends a sumptious time at his spacious home at South Branch, last evening. Mrs. Keyes proved herself a charming hostess, and her daughters assisted her in making everybody glow with the warmth of their welcome. There were present, Gov. Abbett and his staff, Senator-elect Fred C. Marsh of Union, Assemblyman-elect Jas. Bergen of Somerset, ex-Congressmen Clark and Pidcock, ex-Assemblyman Klotz, the Senators-elect of Hunterdon, Passaic, Essex, Camden and Monmouth, James E. Martine of this city, the Hon., "Uncle" John Veghte, Judge Bartine and a hundred others among whom were some of the host's Republican friends.

Governor Hill sent his regrets, but Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, who was Mr. Keyes opposing candidate at election, came not nor sent a declination of the invitation that was extended him. In the large carriage house where a big open fire place was blazing, three tables were spread with all the choicest things a New York caterer could think of. Gov. Abbett occupied the seat of honor, with Somerset county's new Senator and new Assemblyman at his side. There was a flow of wit and wisdom and a grand old time, all around. The extensive grounds were illuminated with Japanese lanterns, and a stack of hay was lighted for a bonfire. Mr. Keyes displayed with great pride a magnificent stallion, the choicest of all his high bred stock, whose name was "Governor Abbett." On their way home the Governor rendered this decision: "Keyes is a dandy!" There was no appeal taken.

What Observant High School Girl Wrote This!

From a composition on "Man," picked up by a Plainfield commuter near the High school yard, the following extracts are made:

"A man is an animal who would scorn divided skirts, and yet spends two hours selecting the kind of cloth he wants used for his trousers.

"A man is an animal who can be flattered and coaxed into anything, but once you start to drive him the mule-like nature is uppermost.

"A man is an animal who thinks he is a little tin god on wheels, and never realizes that he isn't until he is down flat on his back with the malaria and a woman has to wait on him.

"A man is an animal made for the benefit of woman, and the more she can get out of him in the way of kindness and love the more has he fulfilled his duty in life, but—with all his faults we love him still."

A Building You're All Criticised.

The estimated cost of the new building of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at the foot of Liberty street, New York, is $1,000,000. The granite and brick of which it is built are entirely of home production, and not of foreign importation as reported. The granite comes from Connecticut, and the bricks were all made by the Sayre & Fisher Company, of Sayreville, N. J. The building is as nearly fireproof as it can be made. It will be heated by steam and lighted by electricity. The offices of the Central will be in the eighth or the ninth stories of the building, while the lower portions will be let to other corporations, and to bankers, brokers, etc. The tenth story, the object of so much remark on account of its peculiar construction, will be used as a restaurant and as quarters for the janitor.

Let Those Who Must Loaf Stand Below the Curb.

The reason that so many Plainfield women wear skirts fringed with mahogany-colored material is that so many Plainfield loafers cover the pavements with tobacco-expectorations. The sidewalks near the junction of Park avenue and Front street are constantly crowded with corner hangers in fair weather, and the result of their industry is the chronic filthy condition of the flag stones. Those who are paid to protect the public interests owe it to the men and women of the city to keep the corners clear and the pavements clean. In places of meaner reputation than Plainfield loafers are made to stand below the curb, in the street itself, and their own desire for safety from flying hoofs and whirling vehicles soon ends the nuisance.

Hands Across the Sea.

"Hands Across The Sea" has been pronounced by the ablest critics the best play that Henry Pettitt has written. This is no small praise when is remembered "The World," "Harbor Lights," "The Soudan," etc.

It will be presented here Monday evening, with all of the original company, and realistic effects, comprising two large car loads of scenic appointments. "Hands Across The Sea" is remarkable for its entire freedom from any suggestion of vulgarity or low life. The language being crisp, graceful and carefully chosen. The sale of tickets opened this morning.

The Common Lot.

There is a place no love can reach,
There is a time no voice can teach,
There is a chain no power can break,
There is a sleep no sound can wake.

Sooner or later that time will arrive, that place will wait for your coming, that chain must bind you in helpless death, that sleep must fall on your senses. But thousands every year go untimely to their fate, and thousands more lengthen out their days by heedful, timely care. For the failing strength, the weakening organs, the wasting blood, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a wonderful restorative and a prolonger of strength and life. It purifies the blood and invigorates the system, thereby fortifying it against disease. Of druggists.

THE TALE OF A JEALOUS NURSE.

Miss Steers of This City Is Accused of a Hopeless Passion That Was Born and Died in the New York Hospital.

According to the New York News, one of the most amusing and yet, withal, one of the most disappointing terminations to a realistic but hopeless passion, occurred recently in one of the wards of the New York Hospital, the operating surgeon of which is a remarkably handsome man. The lady in the case is Miss Steers, of this city, but she told a PRESS reporter this morning that the whole story is false and inspired by a jealous nurse called Miss Price.

The New York paper goes on to say that the dark heroine of this narrative was a patient of the brunette type, of massive proportions and generous amplitude of figure. Her hair was a veritable profusion of glossy curls, as black as a raven's wing. Her eyes were as lustrous as twin stars.

Her teeth were large, white and irregular. Her age was uncertain. Her nose wasn't exactly chiseled after the classic models, but had it not been for her nose this story would not have been written. It was neither Grecian, Roman nor aquiline; it was rather of the composite order.

It was on account of its deformity that the lady came to the hospital to undergo a surgical process of reconstruction.

In other respects, however, the lady's characteristics were of the most positive kind. So it was determined, after consultation, to resort to a series of operations which, by the aid of a chicken bone and science, would make it far more presentable than when she came into the hospital.

The first operation was a decided success. The foundation of the new nasal structure was laid, and the patient suffered but little pain.

It was during the healing of the initiatory period that a marked change came over the patient. She breathed deep sighs, became absent-minded, and whenever Dr. Bull was present other patients in the same ward would observe that Miss Steers would endeavor to detain him by conversation.

If he smiled, she blushed. If he spoke kindly, her eyes would sparkle with unwonted brilliancy. If he pressed her hand in sympathy for her misfortune—as doctors often do—her massive frame quivered like a jelly. Her secret, whatever it was, was too intense to carry areund alone, so in a burst of confidence she told a fellow patient that she had fallen in love with the handsome operating surgeon.

In less than an hour every other woman patient in the ward knew it, and the lady enjoyed the sweet sympathy of her fellows, with commendations for selecting so handsome a man. "The lady with the chicken bone nose," as she was called, was only happy when the doctor was around. At other times she fed and fattened herself upon contemplation.

But alas! the seeds of her passion fell upon stony ground, and she lacked the courage to tell him of the strong storm of emotion that agitated her study figure like a sapling in a storm. The doctor was oblivious of the effect he had created upon her, and growing weary of her frivolous attempts to detain him, he somewhat sharply reminded her that other patients required his attention.

Thus was the sweetness of her love turned to the bitterness of gall, and she fumed and fretted under the painful consideration that it was all wasted upon the object of its plentitude. Still she did not entirely abandon hope. Her nose healed, and the time approached for a second operation. Her indifference at the prospect was in marked contrast, however, with the former eagerness. Indeed she admitted to more than one patient that she would just as soon go through the world with no nose at all than have the handsomest organ that surgery could produce without possessing the love of its creator.

This about describes the state of her mind when the second operation was performed—a process that was to provide a couple of nostrils preliminary to the third stage of grafting the skin that was to cover them. The second effort was also successful, but her appearance was only interesting to the cold, practical operator, who pronounced it to be a "good case."

Her fluency of speech was somewhat impaired by the operation, and absolute rest and freedom from unnecessary conversation was imposed. Alas! that cruelty should be added to deformity, and despite the operator's stern injunction that she should talk less, she made a frantic and final effort to detain him by the practice of those minor arts of coquetry in which all women are more or less experienced. But they were a failure, and she was finally convinced that her affection was wasted.

Then did her love turn to fury. Angered by disappointment she burst out one morning into a tirade of bitter denunciation of the handsome surgeon. She accused him of disfiguring her for life; of making her a laughing stock among the community; of wrecking her prospects and making her life a wide waste. Having thus freed her mind she obtained access to the clothes closet during the temporary absence of the nurse, changed her dress, put on a heavy thick veil over her face, and left the institution after having expressed her intention of suing the handsome surgeon for $25,000 damages.

Such is the story published, but Miss Steers says its all false. She is not in love with any surgeon, and has no intention to sue anybody for damages. She says the first operation she underwent was at the hands of Dr. Sands in the Roosevelt Hospital, Feb. 14, 1887. It was a success. There have been two since, and there are two to come.

How Many Bites Your Dog May Take.

The responsibility of owners of dogs—remarks the Paterson Guardian—comes up every once in a while, and it is well settled that a man has no right to shoot a dog which annoys or injures him, even on his own property; his remedy is in a suit against the owner of the animal, and in this respect the law is anomalous on account of the difference between the statute and the common law. According to the common law every dog has a right to one bite, as it is generally put; that is, a man is not responsible for what his dog may do unless he is aware of the fact that his dog is vicious. If your ordinarily well-behaved dog should take it into his head to chew up one of your neighbor's children he has a perfect right to do so, and you could not be held responsible for the first child; if the dog were to extend his operations to the rest of the family you will have to pay damages. The same principle at common law extends to damage done by dogs or other animals to property. But the Legislature some years ago passed a law, which is conveniently tucked away in an obscure corner of the statute books, that a man shall be responsible for damage done by his animals to property without making it necessary to show that the dog was vicious. The common law is repealed by statute as far as personal property is concerned. The state of the law accordingly is that a dog may chew up one specimen of humanity without anybody being held responsible therefore, but if he should injure a chicken, or if a goat should make a breakfast off a fence rail, the injury must be paid for, no matter how well behaved the dog or goat may have been in the past. This may sound ridiculous, but the law relative to personal property damaged by animals was recently discovered by a Judge in this city; hitherto cases of this nature have been decided under the old common law rule. Dogs will please govern themselves accordingly.

If North Plainfield Was Included, This City Would be a Class Higher.

An important bearing of the late census will be its effect on the cities of this State, in regard to the class in which they belong. By the act of 1885, the Legislature provided that for the purposes of municipal legislation, the cities of the State should be divided into three classes—those of 100,000 population and over, to be of the first-class; between 12,000 and 100,000, of the second-class; and under 12,000, except seaside cities, to be of the third-class. The report of the population of the cities of this State, by the census of 1880 and 1890, shows Atlantic City, Bayonne and Passaic have been promoted from the third-class to the second.

According to the report, the cities of the State, are thus classified:

First Class—Jersey City and Newark.

Second Class—Atlantic City, Bayonne, Camden, Elizabeth, Hoboken, New Brunswick, Orange, Passaic, Paterson and Trenton.

Third Class—Plainfield, Bordentown, Bridgeton, Burlington, Gloucester, Harrison, Lambertville, Millville, Perth Amboy, Phillipsburg, Rahway, Salem, Vineland and Woodbury. Plainfield is just 751 short of being a second-class city. Her population in 1870 was 5,095; in 1880, 8,125: in 1890, 11,250.

Westfield's Kid Bugs Still at it.

(From the Westfield-Leader.)

Another attempt to set fire to out-buildings for the purpose of seeing a big fire, and having the engines called out was made by three little boys on Sunday afternoon. This time it was the out-houses in the rear of the Chinese laundry that was the scene of operations. The little fellows had just got a paper fire fairly started when they were fortunately discovered in time to save the buildings from destruction. The little culprits are the same boys who last week attempted to set fire to the barn of Baker J. J. Schmitt, for the same purpose, and it is high time that they be prevented from attempting any thing more in the same line. If not, the time may come when their fun will not meet with such timely interruptions, and a disastrous fire may be the result.

Maybe the Hospital Would and Maybe it Wouldn't.

In copying without credit from the Plainfield papers the news of the amicable settlement of the Burlingham will case, the Elizabeth Journal adds this more or less probable tale: "It was generally believed that the primary cause of the contest was on account of the legacy of $3,000 to the Muhlenberg hospital. Such, however, was not the case. Had the case been continued and the will broken, the hospital would still have received the legacy which Mrs. Burlingham's heirs knew represented the wishes of the late husband and herself. In justice to the relatives who instituted the suit this fact should be made known."

Young Men's Rally.

A. C. LaBoyteaux will lead the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Sunday, at 4:15 P. M. The meeting not only had an average attendance of 78 for the month of October, but also resulted in the professed conversion of some who had not decided the question of question. There will be spirited singing and live talks by young men, on Sunday. All men are invited.

FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

A WISE SAYING.

"Early to bed and early to rise—"
When the sun has slid from the mellow skies,
And purple shadows like soft wings fold
Over the world, with their tranquil rest,
And brush the scattering threads of gold
Out of the tenderly glooming west—
When the stars are out and the daylight fled,
Then little folks all should go early to bed.

"Early to bed and early to rise—"
When the pink unfolds in the morning skies,
And cowslip and harebell and buttercup
Lift fresh, sweet faces afar and near,
And every bird in the woods set up
A melody that is good to hear,
Then sleep should vanish from clear, young eyes,
And little folks all should be early to rise

"Early to bed and early to rise—"
'Tis a proverb old and a proverb wise;
The peaceful sleep of the early night
Has power to soothe fatigue away,
And the early hours of dawning light
Are fairest far of the livelong day;
So "Early to bed and early to rise,"
Is a proverb old and a proverb wise.

HER TEN DOLLS.

How a Little Girl's Family Went With Her on a Summer Picnic.

"No, Dorothy," said Mrs. Prindle, "I can not make room in our trunks for your ten dolls; I will try to take two, and the others you will have leave at home."

"Only but just two! sighed Dorothy. "I have been telling every one of them what nice times they would have up in the mountains, and how I would take them all to ride and every thing, and I have heard you say yourself that it is not right to disappoint children — O Mamma Prindle!" Dorothy ended with a wail.

"Come, don't cry, girlie;" said mamma, cheerily. "I do not believe that one of your children will know the difference if she stays at home all summer, so you need not mind on that account. And I think you can be very happy with two; I will take any two you may choose, so run and make up your mind which it shall be."

Dorothy ran away to her play-room, where her ten dolls were quietly passing the warm June day.

But it was so hard for Dorothy to decide.

There was pretty Maud Elise, the little lady from France, who could walk about the floor or stand quite still without falling.

There was the old little Indian boy, that Uncle Ralph sent from Oregon.

There were the beautiful twin babies, with the long white dresses and cunning little caps, and black, Dinah, their nurse, who could dance the funniest jig you ever saw.

There was the dear little china doll that belonged to mamma when she was a girl, and the bisque dolly with the sweetest face in the world—at least so Dorothy thought.

There was Old Nan, poor Old Nan, who had lost her hair, part of her nose, two fingers and a toe—how could Dorothy leave Old Nan at home! She felt that it would be too cruel.

Then there was Anna Louise, the big doll that Dorothy always slept with, and treated with as much tenderness and consideration as if she had been a real little girl, and, last of all, there was the darting, curly-haired treasure that came to live with Dorothy last Christmas, and who had such beautiful gowns and hats, besides a real fur cloak and a tiny watch and chain.

What could Dorothy do? What could any little mother do, under such trying circumstances?

It was a sorrowful hour for kind-hearted, loving little Dorothy.

But think as hard as she could, reason as long as she might, she could not make up her mind to take any two of her dear children away into such pleasure, and leave the others in loneliness at home.

At last she sat the ten in a row on one side of the room, and dancing across from the other side with tight-shut eyes she grabbed two dolls, and held them resolutely behind her till she reached her mother's room; then she tossed them on the bed and ran away.

Mrs. Prindle looked in surprise, and not without a smile, at the two that Dorothy had brought—they were the Indian Boy and Old Nan.

A few days afterward a merry party set off for the White mountains.

Besides Dorothy herself, there were Papa and Mamma Prindle, Dorothy's big brother Frank and her grown-up sister Alice, Uncle Charlie and Aunt Olive, Grandma, Nurse Dora and Baba Max.

They arrived at the great hotel in Bethlehem late at night, and Dorothy was so very tired and sleepy that she did not miss her usual bed-fellow, Anna Louise.

The next morning, as Mamma Prindle was unpacking her trunks, there was a knock at the door, and in walked Uncle Charlie, Aunt Olive, Grandma, Nurse, Frank and Alice, each carrying one or two dolls.

"Oh, I forgot my children!" cried Dorothy, jumping up.

"What does this mean?" asked Mrs. Prindle, in astonishment.

"It means," answered Uncle Charlie, with a laugh and a pinch at Dorothy's cheek, "that your small daughter has beguiled every one of us into taking one of her numerous family in his trunk, because her mamma could take but two, and Jane Maria or Lucy Anna or Betsey or Polly would feel so doleful if she were to be left at home. So, as we unpacked our trunks at the same time, we happened to meet in the hall with our babies—"

"Why, Uncle Charlie," said Dorothy, interrupting, with a puzzled look, "I haven't any Jane Maria or Lucy or Polly; I only gave you the twins, and their names are Rose Evelyn and Violet Blanche, and," she added, "I think it was a very nice way to get them all here, don't you, mamma, when you could not take only but just two?"

"A capital way!" said mamma, laughing, though Dorothy could not see any thing very funny about it.

"But you did not bring your French dolly, after all, did you?" said mamma, running her eyes over the array at Dorothy's feet.

"Oh, yes," replied Dorothy, quietly, "she is in papa's trunk!"

Then they laughed more than ever, and the story of how the ten dolls reached Bethlehem was told more than once that summer.—Emma C. Dowd, in Youth's Companion.

REMARKABLE TREES.

Numerous Plants That Aid Mankind in Various Parts of the Globe.

The butter tree was first discovered by European travelers in the center of Africa; from the kernel of the fruit is produced a nice butter, "which," says Livingstone, "will keep for a year." On a par with this is the manna tree, found in Calabria and Sicily. In August, when it is the custom to tap the tree, a sap flows out. It is then left to harden by evaporation, after which the manna, of a sweet but somewhat sickish taste to any but those accustomed to it, may be gathered. In Malabar is the tallow tree. From the seeds of this, when boiled, is produced a firm tallow, which makes excelent candles. The guava tree of the Indies bears a fruit giving large quantities of rich and delicous jelly.

But the most remarkable tree yet discovered flourishes on the island of Fierro, one of the largest of the Canary group. The island is so dry that not even a rivulet is to be found, yet there is a species of tree the leaves of which are narrow and long and continue green throughout the year. There is also a constant cloud surrounding the tree, which is condensed, and, falling in drops, keeps the cistern placed under them constantly full. In this manner the natives of Fierro obtain water, and as the supply is limited the population must of necessity be limited too.

In Japan and some islands in the Pacific there is the camphor tree. The camphor forms in the trunk of the tree in concrete lumps, and some pieces have been found as thick as a man's arm. There is another curious tree in Jamaica known as the life tree, on account of its leaves growing even after severed from this plant. Only by fire can you entirely destroy it.—Advance.

A STRANGE PAIR.

How the Little Rain-Bird Befriends the Great Crocodile.

We have all read many beautiful and pathetic stories about the devotion of friends; but what do you think of a crocodile for a friend?

Some day, if you should go to his home-country, you might perhaps see what an acquaintance of mine saw—a little black-headed plover riding about on the huge upper jaw of a great crocodile. These two are trusted friends and comrades, and help each other as friends should. Indeed, the little plover is indispensable to the saurian giant. Shall I tell you in what way? I am sure you would never guess. The crocodile has the very bad habit of sleeping with his vast mouth wide open. Into this horrid cavern multitudes of gnats and other little insects go exploring, and conclude, it seems, to settle on the waste spaces represented by the monster's jaws and palate. These latter are soon covered with a black coating of gnat and fly pioneers. The crocodile wakes up and finds himself woefully uncomfortable. Now comes the little feathered friend to help him out of his difficulties. Straight into his big friend's mouth he flies, and proceeds to operate upon the patient by means of his sharp little beak. By and by the old crocodile's mouth is all right once more; then little plover hops on his friend's head and takes a ride, by way of payment doubtless. How wonderful are the ways of our good old Mother Nature! The more she is studied the more she astonishes us.—Christian Union.

Tommy at School.

Little Tommy had spent his first day at school.

"What did you learn?" he was asked on his return home.

"Didn't learn any thing."

"Well, what did you do?"

"Didn't do any thing! A woman wanted to know how to spell 'cat,' and I told her."—Pansy.

NOVELTIES IN FURS.

Late Styles in Boas, Pelerines, Matinees and Jackets.

Furs are liberally shown in the stores, and furriers are displaying a large variety of boas, pelerines, matinees and jackets. Astrakhan and seal in combination will again be fashionable. Many familiar shapes appear, but fashion has introduced a number of new ones. The old all-round flaring shoulder-cape is entirely out, but there are countless modifications of that style. Closely-fitting pelerines ending just below the waist, and large fur collars with flat Spanish stoles are common. Some of the capes are made quite short, with just a fur band about the throat and no high arching collar. These curve at the lower edge; there is a point at the back; then the cape is curved in an upward direction and over the shoulders; thence, describing a downward curve, the fur ends in a corresponding point a few inches below the bust. Some of the expensive seal jackets are made with very exaggerated collars and high sleeves, but the shrewd woman who is now about to purchase a seal wrap, has a strong suspicion that these are the remains of last year's stock, which the dealer wishes to dispose of before he exhibits his less eccentric styles. The high fur collar is certainly very protective, and, on a winter coat or cloak, desirable, but the type which rises above the tops of the ears is ugly and inconsistent, and it is likely that such exaggerations have had their day. The fact that the high collar and towering sleeves have been repudiated by royal leaders of fashion will certainly have an effect on future modes. Among models in pelerines now displayed is one the lower half of which was of sealskin, the upper part of silver-gray astrakhan. The Medici collar of seal was lined with gray feathers. En suite were Russian cap and muff, the crown of the former and the center of the latter of the astrakhan.—N. Y. Post.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

LIQUID GLORIES UNCONCEALED

I have tasted of the grape's rare juice that poets eat, divine
But Deshler's fruit that quenches at last the lips that thirst for wine
I sing of better vintage—liquid glories unconcealed—
In a jug of cold spring water on a summer harvest-field.

An old stone jug I'm singing of, a corncob stopper, too;
Of fading lines of sapphic grain whose roots are dipped in dew;
And darkest gleam of emerald among the tasseled corn;
And sunburned faces smiling when they hear the dinner-horn.

When the rain of molten sun-flakes beats on flower, tree and leaf,
And you twist a golden girdle round each heavy-laden sheaf,
Then, as you press along the slope, across the sandy clods,
Your lips grow parched with waiting for the nectar of the gods.

The shorn, broad field is lying like a yellow carpet spread,
And the mid-day sun is streaming from heights far overhead;
While the only sound or echo on the hill-side or the glades
Is the passing of the reaper and the rattle of its blades.

And as on gallant steed appears a bare-foot country boy
And hands you down his burden there, what words can tell your joy
As you press it to your dusty lips, the common, old stone jug,
And cool, clear water rushes out with "gurgle, gurgle, glug!"

Ah! then through all your being steals a calm, delicious bliss!
For sky and earth and sunshine seem commingled in a kiss;
And that kiss has steeped your senses as with some magician's drug,
As the cooling eddies greet you, bubbling downward from the jug.

And when you set it down at last, reluctant, yet content,
You realize what water is—God's greatest blessing sent;
For, all that man can ever brew the victor's palm must yield
To a draught of cold spring water in a summer harvest-field.

—Ernest McGaffey, in Judge.

SPECIOUS ARGUMENTS.

Two Questions Put by the Liquor Crowd Answered in the Right Way.

A correspondent at Clermont, Ia., writes us as follows:

I am greatly interested in the brave and noble stand you have taken to "Pulverize the Rum Power;" but, as this Temperance movement presses on towards its final triumph, new obstacles will be continually thrown in its way. Here are two questions which have been propounded, and I would be pleased if you would discuss them through the Blade's columns.

They say: "How does it come, if strong drinks are so destructive, that the Germans, who drink more beer and distilled liquors than any other Nation, are the healthiest people? In olden times, when people drank more beer and whisky (this was in Norway and Sweden), the men were giants in strength, and the people were stouter and healthier than now?"

We infer that there is a general circulation of the statement embodied in these questions throughout Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska, as they have been made to us before. It is hard to say whether those who circulate them believe them or not. Those to whom they are propounded should at once pose the questioner by asking for the proof, as to the first question, that the Germans are "the healthiest people"—a statement untrue in fact; and regarding the second, by asking for the proof that the Scandinavians of ancient times drank either whisky or beer similar to the beer of the present; for proof that the mass of that people were either stouter or healthier than now; and that there ever was a giant in strength among them. You will be surprised to find that they can give no proof of any one of these things. The reason is this: They are not true in the specific sense in which they are asserted in these questions. We challenge any one to produce the proof of the truth of the assertions in the questions submitted by our correspondent.

Some general discussion of facts that are often lost sight of by both the advocates of Temperance and their opponents will be found useful in this connection. First, with regard to the drinking habits of the people of Germany. The Germans imbibe but comparatively very little of distilled liquors; their drinks are beer and light wines. They use them as we use tea and coffee—drinking them with their meals, and not taking them on an empty stomach. They do not drink as Americans do—swill down glass after glass within a few minutes. The drinking is moderate compared with that to which we are accustomed in America.

As to the Scandinavians (the people of Norway and Sweden), it is absurd to quote the legendary stories of their heroes of a semi-historic period as sober truths. The early history of all nations shows the idealization that seems inevitable in the process of handing down stories of the prowess and courage of ancestors. Such stories always increase in the telling, and never diminish. The doings of a brave man are magnified in the course of generations until they become impossible to a man of ordinary strength and stature; and then the enlargement goes on by representing the hero as a giant in size and strength. Again, the old Scandinavians knew nothing of whisky or any other distilled liquors. They drank a rude kind of beer, of which but two things are certain: One, that it must have been a horrid slop, and the other, that it could not, from its mode of manufacture, have contained nearly as great a per cent. of alcohol as modern malt liquors.

The fact must never be lost sight of, in estimating the value of facts bearing on the Temperance question, that the climate of the country, the mode of life, the occupations and surroundings of the people all have an important bearing on the effect of alcoholic liquors upon them. The people of a country with a cold, damp climate like that of Great Britain, Scandinavia and Northern Germany, can drink with less harmful results than can the inhabitants of a dry climate (such as ours) or of any hot country. As regards occupation, the backwoodsman, whose life is passed in the open air, can drink for years a quantity of liquor that would kill a city resident. His example is no rule for the dyspeptic clerk whose whole life, practically, is spent in-doors—the day in store or office, the night in his room—with a lack of fresh air and active exercise.

The point is settled beyond debate that the use of rum in any form is, sooner or later, harmful to the drinker; that the harm in any liquor is in direct proportion to the quantity of alcohol contained in it, and to the amount drank; and that the steady drinking of any alcoholic drink is even worse than periodical drinking; that is, the man who puts alcohol into his system every day by drinking beer, wines or any other form of rum, does more harm to himself each year than the man who goes on periodical "sprees," with intervals in which he drinks nothing. The testimony of the highest medical authorities of Europe and America is unanimous on these points, and they may be justly considered as so thoroughly established that controversy over them is out of the question.

This being the fact, our correspondent, and any one else to whom such silly arguments are advanced, need not waste effort in controverting them. Our dry, brilliant climate is against drinking. An Englishman accustomed to drink on coming to this country finds that he must diminish the size and frequency of his potations or he will be drunk continually. This has been frequently shown in New York City among fast young Englishmen. Coming direct from London they are astonished to find that the same amount of rum appears to produce a much greater effect on them. The difference is one of climate. And because some people, living in a different climate, or those whose life is spent out of doors, can drink with apparent impunity, is no reason that all should drink, nor does it follow that they themselves would not be healthier, stronger and happier if they did not drink at all. So far as America is concerned, non-drinking is the only safe rule. Our friends in the West should not allow themselves to be deterred by any such specious arguments as those quoted above from continuing the effort to pulverize the rum power.—Toledo (O.) Blade.

MODERATE DRINKING.

Accumulation of Evidence Against the Use of Alcoholic Liquors.

According to a German medical journal, Drs. Donnet and Marandon have been studying the diseases of wine-tasters, and find that they frequently suffer from "disturbances similar to alcoholism, although the claret-tasters do not swallow the wine, but on the contrary, reject it, and even rinse their mouths afterwards. In one case of Dr. Donnet's, a man thirty-two years old used to taste, every day, thirty or forty samples of wine, occasionally liquors and rum, without ever swallowing any part of them. After two years he became very excitable, lost his appetite, did not sleep well, and suffered with disturbances of sensibility, pains in the breast, a feeling of weakness, difficulty in breathing. He improved after abandoning his profession, although a nervous debility still remained, as noticeable by the facility with which he was set in tears. Another statement made by Dr. Donnet is that there are a great number of apoplexies in Bordeaux, where many persons drink one and a half litres of wine with each meal. This number exceeds the number of apoplexies in any city in the world. Dr. Marandon did not notice any symptoms of intoxication in Burgundy tasters, although some of them would swallow the samples. He remarks that tea-tasters always swallow some tea, and this, he says, explains the nervous symptoms they are affected with."

Wine-tasters must certainly be considered as moderate drinkers, although they swallow very little of the wine; and hence the study of the physical condition of wine-tasters evidently has a very important bearing upon the question of moderate drinking. The accumulation of evidence against the use of alcoholic liquors, either moderately or immoderately, has become so great that it would seem that no ground whatever is left for those who still attempt to maintain their use upon scientific principles.—Good Health.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

The money paid in one month for two glasses of beer a day, would buy a ton of coal.

Dr. B. W. Richardson declares that alcohol causes a mortality more enormous than even consumption.

Sir Morel Mackenzie attributes the reason why men more than women suffer from sore throats, to smoking.

Tolstoi's latest crusade is said to be against tobacco and alcohol. It is stated that he has a work nearly ready for the press in which he strongly inveighs against gluttony and drunkenness, and shows in a vivid manner the effect of narcotics and intoxicating drinks on the human system.

Should the tobacco-users of the United States abstain from its use for a period of five years, and place the amount so saved in a common fund, dividing equally, it would give the head of each family a sum sufficient to purchase an eighty-acre farm in the Western States or Territories.—Good Health.

A Striking Illustration.

The doors of Bellevue Hospital swung open recently to admit as a patient a shoeless man, who had in a drunken frenzy attempted suicide by shooting himself. This unhappy man, Colville by name, educated in this city, was at one time a prosperous pastor in the Methodist Episcopal church. Overcome and disgraced by the liquor habit he was obliged to leave the church. He was supported in his subsequent idle and drunken career by his wife, as a dress-maker, until finally threatening her life and chasing her with a loaded revolver, she was obliged to leave him, taking their children with her. His case, inexpressively sad for his family and friends, as well as himself, furnishes another striking illustration that even ministers can not indulge in the use of intoxicants without the risk of ruin, body and soul. It is an added, emphatic object-lesson for total abstinence.—National Temperance Advocate.

LOVE AND MARRIAGE.

A Farce Tragedy in Two Short Acts.

[Written for this Paper.]

ACT I. BEFORE MARRIAGE.

Scene I—Morning. Parlor in the Bane mansion. Enter Mortimer Jones; embraces Clara, who is "discovered" seated on the sofa.

Mortimer—Ah, Clara, how glad I am to see you once again. It seems an age since I saw you yesterday.

Clara (tightening her arms around his neck)—It was just the same with me, dear Mortie, although I dreamt of you all night long.

Mortimer (with sparkling eyes)—And did you dream of me? Oh you darling! you pet! you angel! [Excessive osculation.]

Clara (arranging her disordered bangs)—Yes, I dreamt we were in a millinery store, and I selected a fall hat.

Motiner (removing a long, light-colored hair from his mouth)—I hope you picked out the most expensive one in the store.

Clara—I hesitated, but you, like the noble man that you are, insisted.

Mortimer (holding up his head proudly)—Of course I did. Is there any thing in the world too costly for you? I would be worse than a brute to deny you any thing—from the priceless gems of the Orient down to a chunk of chewing gum.

Clara (hysterically)—My own darling true love!

Mortimer (with equal emotion)—I am! I am!

* * * * * * *

Scene II. Noon. Dining-room of the Bane mansion. Clara and Mortimer seated at the table.

Mortimer — Where are your folks, Clara, dear?

Clara—Oh! they won't be home to-day. [Mortimer has an uncontrollable desire to annihilate himself for not asking that question before. However, moves his chair up, and starts in on the dinner. Takes a spoonful of soup and makes a wry face.]

Clara—You seem disturbed, darling. [Anxiously.] Don't you like the food?

Mortimer (got the raptures once more)—Ah, Clara, dear, when you are near every thing tastes good. But (tasting soup once more) I think your cook must be in love, for she has forgotten to put salt in the soup.

Clara (coyly)—Of course she is in love, and with you; for, knowing that you were coming to dinner I attended to the cooking myself.

Mortimer (tasting soup again)—Why, there's plenty of salt in this soup. Too much if any thing! [Gulps it down.]

Clara (suddenly dropping a chop and gazing at him with soulful eyes)—Oh! you dear, dear old boy!

Mortimer (getting them very bad again)—Sweetest of sweet! come to my arms! [Earnestly.] You are quite sure none of the folks are at home?

Clara—Quite sure. [Buries her face in his newly laundried shirt bosom.] Whose angel is 'oo?

Mortimer (ecstatically) — I'se 'oos! 'oos! Whose angel is 'oo?

Note. Orchestra to play soft music, with twittering bird accompaniment.

ACT II. ONE YEAR AFTER MARRIAGE.

Scene I. Morning. Sitting-room. Mortimer, with a scowl on his face, reading morning paper. Clara, darning socks, in another part of the room. The door-bell rings.

Mortimer (looking up from his paper)—There goes that bell again. I'm scarcely out of bed before the bill collectors are around. It's enough to drive a man crazy!

Clara (sarcastically)—Well, you can hardly expect to be furnished with whisky and cigars for nothing.

Mortimer—More likely it is for face powder, some new bangs, or some of the other flummery that you hang on yourself every time you go out.

Clara (fiercely)—If you can't afford to pay for such trifles, why did you ever marry me? That's what I would like to know!

Mortimer (in slow and measured tones)—Now you have got me! I ask myself that question forty times a day. It's a conundrum which I have to give up.

Clara (coming up close and shaking her head savagely in his face)—Ugh! you contemptible monster! How I hate you!

* * * * * * *

Secene II. Noon. Dining-room. Mortimer and Clara at dinner.

Mortimer (with a sneer)—I suppose I might be able to worry down a little of this alleged soup—it is soup, is it not?—if you would only manage to keep your hair out of it. [Extracts a hair.]

Clara—As you have so little hair left on your head, perhaps it would be well for you to attend to the meals. Or you could find some restaurant where you could probably be suited.

Mortimer—I couldn't find them any worse than this. Why, this isn't fit for a dog to eat.

Clara (with the air of a woman scoring a point)—Then it's no wonder you don't like it.

Mortimer (through his teeth) — Oh, that is so like you, you little pink and white angel.

Clara—Just a little more of that kind of talk and I'll leave the house and go back to mother.

Mortimer (eagerly) — You will, eh? For Heaven's sake don't make my mouth water with anticipation. If you will go, I'll get the finest turnout in town to take you there. Go get your hat and I'll go for the carriage!

Clara—I always did despise you from the first moment I laid my eyes on you!

* * * * * * *

Scene II—Night.

Clara (lighting light at bedside)—So you really decided to come home, did you? Oh, I suppose this is a good-enough place to get your meals and sleep in! What do you mean by making so much noise?

Mortimer—Who made any noise?

Clara—You did.

Mortimer—You're an infernal liar. Woman!—I mean she-dragon!—don't go too far! You'll make a lunatic out of me!

Clara—That would be impossible. You always were one.

Mortimer—There is no denying I was one when I married you.

(Prolonged silence.)

Clara (breaking the silence)—What do you mean by calling me a she-dragon? Now, that settles it. To-morrow I will see my lawyer about obtaining a divorce. That is my firm resolution.

Mortimer—Oh, yes, I know a place that is paved with good resolutions.

Clara—Well, you will see.

[Another silence.]

Mortimer (mumbling to himself as he falls off to sleep)—Divorce? * * eh? * * good * * very good * * good * *

CLEVER MEN'S WIVES.

An Article Which Could Not Possibly Interest Mr. Austin.

"You seem much absorbed in thought," said Mrs. Austin to her husband, as they were seated in the parlor after tea, the other evening. "What is the subject?"

"I have been reading an article on the subject of Clever Men's Wives."

"I don't see how that can possibly interest you any."

"Hey!" said Mr. Austin, turning sharply around.

"What did the article say about clever men's wives?" continued Mrs. Austin, without heeding the ejaculation. "Did it say that they were clever, too?"

"No, it didn't. It said they were generally dull."

"Then if the reverse of the proposition be true, what a smart wife I must be," laughed Mrs. Austin.

"I don't understand you, Mrs. Austin.'

"No, you never did understand me," replied Mrs. Austin, vehemently. "You are always boasting of your smartness and cleverness, but I have never seen it yet. And you hint in a vague way that I am dull. I will admit that I was very dull once."

"When was that?"

"When I married you. Oh, you needn't start to your feet. I'm going to have my say about this thing once. I too have read about the clever men, as they are called, and the kind of lives their wives led. There was Bluebeard—he was a clever man, I suppose. Killed every wife he had except the last one, and she was clever enough to finish him. Byron ran away from his wife and never returned. And there was Lot, who didn't earn his salt, so that his poor wife was compelled to turn herself into a pillar of it, or there would have been none about the house; and Peter, Peter, what's his name, who put his wife in a pumpkin shell, and kept her—while he sat around bar rooms telling how smart he was; and now you want to set yourself up for a clever man and hint that your wife isn't up to your level. But I am up to you, John Austin, and I tell you now"—

But when she looked around, John had fled.—Texas Siftings.

A DECIDED GAIN.

Hobson—How did you enjoy your summer trip, Bagley?

Bagley — Had a delightful time. Gained one hundred and thirty pounds.

Hobson — One hundred and thirty pounds! I don't believe it.

Bagley—Don't you? Well, here it comes down the street. Just wait a moment and I'll introduce you.—The Jury.

Art Note.

Smirk—What do you think of my photograph?

Candid Friend—Is this your photograph?

"Of course; does it not look like me?"

"Not a bit. By Jove, I don't believe you were there at all when that picture was taken!"—Texas Siftings.

Gone to Join 'Em.

Snooks—There were very few people at the funeral of Dr. Soonover.

Skaggs—No wonder; hardly any of his patients have survived him.—Texas Siftings.

Logical.

McCarthy—Oi say, McGinnis, is tin years the wood or the shilver weddin'?

McGinnis—Naythur, you fule. T-i-n spholls tin. It's the tin-weddin', begobs.—Judge.

"WHY, ARE YOU SICK?"

"I know precisely how you feel; it is that nervous, irritable feeling, your back troubles you, and when you try to read a little, your head aches. Isn't that so? I knew it. Oh, bother the doctor! Get a bottle of Vegetable Compound, and take it faithfully, as I have done. I've been through this thing myself, but am never troubled now. Do as I tell you, dear."

MORE BROKEN BANKS

The Young City of Guthrie Has a Financial Panic.

A BANKING SYNDICATE FAIL.

The President Runs Away to Escape the Vengeance of the Mob.

Four Saving Institutions Close Their Doors—Angry Depositors Raved and Cursed and Women Cried—The Officers of the Philadelphia Investment Company Silent About the Barker Failure.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Nov. 22.—The Commercial Bank of this city, which is the largest bank in the Territory, made an assignment late last night for the benefit of creditors to the Sheriff as assignee. The proprietors have all left town.

The first stir was made when Sheriff Shirky rode up to the door of the bank and tacked thereon seven different notices of attachment aggregating in sums from $500 to $25,000 to a total of $100,000. From that time attachment after attachment was tacked on, covering the front of the building, the doorway, the door steps, the window casings and other wood portions of the building.

Angry Depositors.

Men who had the day before made deposits raved and cursed and women cried. A shout went up demanding entrance to the bank building and a desire to see the president, J. M. Ragsdale, who resides near the bank. The mob designed to do him bodily harm, and if he had been in the vicinity of the bank at the time he would have been harshly dealt with. His family became alarmed and took the north bound express for Kansas, Mr. Ragsdale having left on a freight train before daylight.

More Banks Suspend.

The Bank of El Reno, the Stillwater Bank and the Bank of Norman were operated by the same syndicate—all of which closed their doors, as did the Newton National Bank of Newton, Kan. The Bank of El Reno was operated in El Reno, Canadian County, this Territory, which is tributary to the rich farming lands along the Canadian River, and reports come that many farmers and cattle men suffer greatly from the failure of the Bank of El Reno. The Stillwater Bank was operated in Stillwater, the county seat of Payne County, in the northern part of this Territory, and many farmers and ranchmen from the adjoining reservations did extensive business with this bank. The Bank of Norman was operated at Norman, the county seat of Cleveland County, 50 miles north of here, and the heaviest losers are the cotton dealers, that county's principal product being cotton. From all of these respective points come reports of stormy scenes.

THE BARKER FAILURE.

The Investment Company Officers Will Not Talk About the Suspended Firm.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—The officers of the Investment Company of Philadelphia maintain their policy of almost absolute silence in regard to the company connection with the suspended banking firm. The only thing that they would say was that Barker Bros. & Company were largely indebted to the company, but that the indebtedness was secured by ample collateral. They also claim that the Investment Company is absolutely unaffected by the failure of Barker Bros. and is perfectly able to meet all obligations.

By the failure of his firm Mr. Abraham Barker has also been made liable to suspension from the Stock Exchange. Some time ago he contracted to deliver to a certain brokerage firm 100 shares of stock of the Finance Company of Pennsylvania. At the time Mr. Barker contracted to deliver the stock it was selling at $99 a share, Yesterday 302 shares of it was sold at 61 and 60. Mr. Barker has until Monday to fulfil his contract and if by that time he has not done so, under the rules he will be suspended from the Exchange.

It is said that an effort will be made to persuade the brokerage firm with whom the contract was made to become one of the creditors of Barker Bros., and to save Mr. Barker from the necessity of delivering the stock.

In view of his possible suspension, Mr. Barker tendered his resignation as chairman of the finance committee of the Exchange, but the committee would not accept it, as they are in hopes that the claim against him will not be pressed and he can retain the office.

The Knights Adjourn.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 22.—The Knights of Labor convention continued in session until nearly daylight. There was a prolonged wrangle over the report of the committee on political action, then over the place of holding the next meeting. Three cities were reported by the committee, New York, Toledo and Milwaukee. It was decided to select the place by mailed vote 30 days before the next meeting. The assembly then adjourned sine die.

Result of the Lottery Law.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The action of the lottery law has greatly decreased the business of the New Orleans postoffice and on this account Chief Postoffice Inspector Rathbone to-day dismissed nine employes of that office. The withdrawal of the lottery business from the mails made a decrease of about $120,000 a year in the postal receipts of the office, or about one-third of its entire business. The salaries of the employes dismissed amounted to $6,300 a year.

Trial Trip of the Newark.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The new cruiser Newark will have her trial trip on November 25. Secretary Tracy appointed the trial board with Captain Henry Erben as president.

20,000 MEN MAY STRIKE.

The President of the Erie Will Not Recede from His Position.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The engineers, firemen and other train hands on the Erie Railroad have not given up the hope that the company will see fit to make some sort of a compromise on their demands presented last September. The committee of 40—three representing each branch of train service—is again in this city, and a sub-committee, headed by Chairman Youngson, visited the officers of the company.

President King, Vice-President Felton and General Manager Thomas met the committee. Mr. Youngson stated that his constituents expected a more favorable answer to the demands than was given in October. He again said they wanted 10 hours as a limit of the day's work. He and the committee had been over the road and held meetings of the men, and there was widespread dissatisfaction among the men, who were grumbling at having to work more hours than on other railroads.

President King, in reply, said they had given every item in the bill of particulars careful study, and had replied accordingly. Further discussion was now out of the question. They had, once for all, given their answer, and could not recede from it. The committee left, crestfallen but determined.

Judging from the talk of members of the committee a strike is not very far away, and may take place at at any moment. When it occurs it will involve some 20,000 men, and be one of the greatest that ever took place in this country.

DROPPED FROM THE ROLLS.

The Law and Order League After High Officials.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 22.—At the session of the National Law and Order League the name of Hon. C. A. Boutelle of Maine was dropped from the list of vice-presidents and the names of Postmaster-General Wanamaker, Pennsylvania, and Rev. Merrill E. Gates, D. D., New Jersey, from the executive committee without consent. It was ascertained from private interviews, however, that Mr. Wanamaker's name was dropped because it is thought he does not conform to the rules of the League in regard to mail employes working on Sunday.

Two Victims of Escaping Gas.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 22.—Mrs. Linnie Tolman was found unconscious in bed at No. 201 Sumner street, and a little boy, James Haley, 8 years old, was dead, having been suffocated by escaping gas. The gas was left turned on, and there is a suspicion that Mrs. Tolman intended suicide. It is said a boarder whom she expected to marry left town yesterday, and this desertion is said to have unbalanced her mind. She is at the hospital.

Thacher Not a Candidate.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 22.—John Boyd Thacher of this city, who is now in Chicago, telegraphs that he is inclined to laugh at the Eastern reports which say that Governor Hill has named him as the probable winner in the Senatorial race in New York. He says he has never hunted for public or political honor and never will. The Senatorship would have to come to him, for he would not lift a finger to get it.

THE GHOST DANCERS

Redskins Working Themselves Into a Religious Frenzy.

LATE REPORTS ARE ALARMING.

Sitting Bull Has the Power to Create a Bloody War.

Troops to Move on the Dancers Immediately—Everything Points to a Long Campaign—1,500 Armed Warriors Within a Radius of Forty Miles of Pine Ridge Agency—General Miles Criticized.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, Nov. 22.—It is probable that the troops will take the field against the ghost dancers tomorrow. Everything points to a long campaign against the Sioux, who are now inflamed at the presence of the colored troopers of the Ninth Cavalry, and who are growing more fanatical every day over their religious dances. The situation is so grave that even old Indian fighters and scouts refuse to express an opinion as to the final outcome of this trouble. This is certain, that if the Sioux on Pine Ridge were to take a notion to attack the troops now in camp here there would not be a soldier, civilian, woman, or child left to tell the story of the onslaught.

There are 1,500 heavily armed warriors within a radius of 40 miles of the agency, and the available force to place in the field against them would not amount to 500 men, and 100 of these are Indian police, agency employes, and half-breeds.

It seems to be the present programme of the army to call in all the friendly Indians, and then go after the hostiles without quarter. Last night 35 Indian police were sent on fleet-footed ponies to warn the friendly Indians to come to the agency, and since sunrise the Sioux who have not taken part in the religious craze have been riding into camp. Sixty of the best of the friendly Indians will to-morrow be drawn up in line in the Government beef corral and will be heavily armed. Then the Indian police, under command of One-Who-Has-the-Sword, a captain and Lieutenant Fast Horse, will lead the friendly Sioux to the camps of the ghost dancers and demand that the dances cease. If the hostiles refuse to comply with this demand they will be warned again. If the order is disregarded the soldiers will take the field and put down the rebellion by force of arms.

SITTING BULL THE BOSS.

The Authorities Afraid to Arrest the Noted Chief and Put Him in Irons.

MANDAN, S. D., Nov. 22.—A correspondent obtains information from the Sioux Agency from two absolutely reliable sources, one via Hettinger County, from the western part of the reservation, and one from Standing Rock, via Bismarck, as follows:

Chances are against an immediate uprising unless Sitting Bull makes up his mind it would pay. Sitting Bull would be arrested and put in irons, but the agent is afraid this would precipitate trouble. Agent McLaughlin has lost control of Sitting Bull and other leaders. At Bull's camp a dance of 200 braves keeps up day and night.

All reports that come by wire from Fort Yates are colored. A rigid censorship is exercised on every message by the military authorities. My agents found it impossible to wire the facts they wanted to wire contained in this message. Indians with Sitting Bull do not welcome even friendly whites and won't shake hands with them. They say all white men will be turned into Buffalo and catfish in the spring. The Indians from Pine Ridge are now with Sitting Bull inspiring his followers with Messiahic heresy. There are insufficient troops at Standing Rock to justify the taking of such measures for the suppression of Sitting Bull as prudence would demand. In regard to the former report that the Indian police had thrown down their uniforms the facts are: Agent McLaughlin sent them to arrest refractory Indians, and instead of obeying orders, they threw off their clothes and joined in the dance.

It is rumored that numbers of Indians are moving through the Powder River country toward the Shoshone reservation.

HARVARD-YALE FOOTBALL.

Great Interest in To-Day's Game at Hampden Park, Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 22.—Immense crowds are going to Hampden Park today to witness the great meeting of Yale and Harvard football teams. There is intense interest in the game and betting has been lively this forenoon.

Not since 1887 has the Harvard eleven stood such a good chance of winning.

That year was the first in which Arthur Cummock played on the Harvard team. He was a Freshman then, but he knew the game of football. He is a Senior now, and has captained the Harvard team for two years. This means that he has taught them the game.

In practice and against the minor teams this year Harvard has played a genuine "Yale game" in point of dash, confidence and determination.

It has piled up considerably larger scores than Yale against the same teams.

Just where Harvard was a little weak last year she has been strengthened. The rush line is stronger than last year's. The men tackle and block with the same quickness and skill shown by the Yale rushers.

The Yale men are confident, and their thousand of supporters predict victory for the New Haven eleven to-day.

THE PASTOR ON TRIAL.

Rev. Robert Chew Says an Effort is Being Made to Ruin Him.

KEYPORT, N. J., Nov. 22.—The trial of Rev. Robert Chew, pastor of the Cliffwood and Jacksonville Methodist Episcopal Churches, charged with attempting to assault Mrs. Alonzo Armstrong, was held by Presiding Elder James Moore.

Chew denied the charges and requested a few days' time to enable him to procure important witnesses. He claims that it is an attempt among parishoners to ruin him. Mrs. Armstrong is very emphatic in her charges and is determined to have him punished.

The trial was adjourned until next week. Great interest was manifested in the proceedings.

The Injunction Dissolved.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 22.—In the superior Court Judge F. B. Hall heard the arguments on the motion of the New York & New England Railroad to dissolve the injunction recently granted by him restraining the New York & New England from taking up 860 feet of track north of Church street. The New York and New England has planned to change its entire yard, and claims that it is necessary for it to temporarily sever connection with the Central New England. The judge decided to dissolve the injunction.

The Late Justice Miller's Successor.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Alfred Russell of Detroit is the latest candidate for the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench. He has the indorsement of Secretary Proctor and a large number of prominent men and when in Washington last week called at the White House in company with Secretary Blaine. Among politicians, however, the impression generally prevails that Attorney-General Miller will be appointed to the Supreme Court and Senator Spooner of Wisconsin made Attorney-General.

Will Start a Gingham Factory Here.

NORWALK, Conn., Nov. 22.—Mr. Whitelaw, principal owner in the Whitelaw Gingham Company of Scotland, and an agent were at Westport looking for a site for a factory on the Saugatuck River. Negotiations for the purchase of a site are expected to be opened at once. The Westport Board of Trade will offer every inducement. Owing to the new tariff law the company claims that their business necessitates a removal to America. The company has a working capital of over $1,000,000, and employs constantly over 600 hands.

INDIAN FIGHTER MILES.

An Army Officer Says He is a Candidate for the Presidency.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Indian Bureau officials quite generally discredit the threatening reports that come from the Sioux country. Acting Commissioner Bell of the Indian Office does not believe that the Indians contemplate hostile action towards the whites.

The promised Messiah that they are looking for to lead them in their destruction of the whites, has not and will not materialize; but when they discover that he is not likely to be forthcoming, disappointment may make them troublesome. They will then turn upon the medicine men who have made these predictions, and there may be difficulties that will spread beyond tribal limits. He thinks, however, that the precautions already adopted in sending troops to the reservations will be ample to prevent any serious outbreak.

General Miles' scary dispatches meet with the following comment from a prominent army officer who had in mind what is alluded to as "General Miles' Presidential boom," started at a banquet in San Francisco last summer:

"Miles is predicting a general Indian war, and virtually asks that the command of the entire army be turned over to him. He wants to create a scare and pose as the savior of the country. In fact, he is almost in the attitude of a political Messiah, such as the Indians themselves are looking for. I have no doubt in the world that he is honest in his candidacy. He has shrewdly enlisted the favor of nearly every newspaper man in California, and has by his agreeable manner and the expenditure of his means managed to make himself very popular in a certain way in the West. He is one of the most ambitious men in the army, and he is pulling his wires shrewdly."

CROWDING PARNELL

England Greatly Stirred Up Over the Irish Leader.

EDITOR STEAD'S ULTIMATUM

He Demands the Statesman's Immediate Withdrawal from Politics.

The Archbishop of Canterbury's Decision in the Bishop of Lincoln's Case—Two Men Murdered and Robbed on a Mail Train—Koch and Pasteur Exchange Compliments—Davitt to the Tories.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Political interest here centers about Mr. Parnell. The storm is becoming more violent daily. It was at first thought that the decision would rest with the Irish Nationalists, but now it can be seen that the real question is, What will the English Liberals do? The Tories are silent, but the storm is raging in the Liberal ranks.

The dilemma is most serious, and Mr. Gladstone cannot keep silent much longer. If he accepts Mr. Parnell as a colleague, as before, the Nonconformists will oppose it tooth and nail. If he advises Parnell to retire the latter must go.

Mr. Gladstone's advice will be given in a few days, if he has not already privately given it to Mr. Parnell.

If the latter then refuses to retire it is generally admitted that Home Rule will be put back a decade.

Mr. Stead called at the London office of the Freeman's Journal. His object was to present an ultimatum to Mr. Parnell, whom he wished to have it conveyed that unless Mr. Parnell intimated within 24 hours to Mr. Stead that he had resigned the leadership of the Irish party he, Mr. Stead, would proceed to open the batteries of the social purity movement on him.

It is not the offence against morals that excited Mr. Stead's wrath, who says in his ultimatum:

"I am prepared to allow, if you like, that your offence is no worse than taking a glass of whisky."

What Mr. Stead does allege to be the cause of his wrath is that Mr. Parnell has deceived his friends.

THE BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

The Archbishop of Canterbury's Judgment on His Ritualistic Practices.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has delivered judgment against the Rev. Dr. Edward King, Bishop of Lincoln, who was charged with ritualistic practices.

The Archbishop suspended judgment in regard to the Bishop's rubrical irregularities. The mixing of water with the wine used in the consecration, the Archbishop holds, infringed the law of the church, but the use of a mixed chalice prepared beforehand did not offend the ecclesiastical law.

The Archbishop decided that Dr. King's action in turning his face to the east during communion and thus making his manual acts invisible was illegal. The singing of the hymn "Agnus Dei" during communion was not illegal.

Robbed and Murdered in a Mail Train.

WARSAW, Nov. 22.—The dead bodies of two passengers found in the Vienna mail train yesterday on its arrival at Kutno have been identified as those of cashiers of a Warsaw bank, who were traveling to Berlin in charge of funds amounting to £35,000. There is no clue to the person or persons who robbed and murdered the men.

Davitt's Advice to the Tories.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Michael Davitt, in an address at Southport, said that a cloud rested on the Irish cause at present, but with God's help and that of the honest Liberals of England the cause would still prevail. Let the Tories attempt to gain a point by an election surprise and they would soon be undeceived.

An English Paper Surprised.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Saturday Review expresses surprise at the tactics of the Unionist papers in seeking Mr. Parnell's political head, which course has naturally led to a reaction in Mr. Parnell's favor.

BLUE LAWS REVIVED.

The National Sabbath Association to Stop the Sale of Sunday Papers.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 22.—At the meeting of the National Sabbath Association in this city a radical programme was mapped out.

In connection with Captain Wishart of the Law and Order Society, they propose to revive the blue laws of 1794. The first attack is to be on the Pittsburg Sunday newspapers, and then on those of Philadelphia. Pittsburg Sunday papers have an aggregate of 150,000 subscribers. These will be stopped from selling, and the carriers and newsboys will be arrested and fined for distribution.

The Rev. Mr. McCrary says it will be just as easy as falling off a log to stop all the Sunday editions of papers in Pennsylvania. Lawyers who have been interviewed say that they can stop every form of employment on Sunday unless the blue laws of 1794 are modified or repealed

The balance will be raised by assessment on the churches which united in the revival. The statement that the sum has all been raised is an error.

—VanEmburgh & White are offering 500 Lithoed Water-colored Engravings by Ida Waugh. Price, 13 cents each. Read what Oliver Wendell Holmes has to say about them: "I have received a collection of pictures of children's heads. I am very much pleased with this little gallery of childhood, which represents it with all its untaught grace and unconscious beauty. They will carry sunshine to the walls of the darkest room—one that gets all its daylight from a northern window."

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. M. J. Coyne, of Park avenue, is visiting her uncle at his home in New York city.

The home of Union County's Warden, Charles W. Dodd, formerly Chief of Police of this city, was invaded Thursday evening by a large party of merry young people, who had gone to surprise Miss Maria, daughter of the warden, the occasion being the fifteenth anniveraary of her birth.

By special request the prize race horse pictures exhibited by Ernest Marx at the last exhibition of the Camera Club will again be on the walls during their present exhibition. This will afford many people the opportunity to see these curiosities in the photographic art, that did not see them before.

Mrs. Augustus VanDeventer, of Washington Park, gave a breakfast to-day, in honor of her guest, Miss Rodman, of Astoria, niece of Archdeacon Rodman. Among the ladies present were Mrs. Geo. Dupee, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. Chas. McCutchen, Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. James Middledith, and Mrs. J. H. VanDeventer.

The late Daniel Runkle a few years ago purchased the Hugh Rehill farm, west of Bound Brook, for the purpose of erecting an iron foundry at the junction of the Jersey Central and Philadelphia and Reading railroads. He even went so far as to have the land staked out for the buildings, but his health failed and the work was abandoned. The farm is now occupied by William Emery. Mr. Runkle had many warm friends in Bound Brook who lament his death.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

Caring for the Motherless.

The "Mothers' Meeting" held Thursday afternoon was very largely attended, and full of deep and special interest. There are motherless boys and girls in shadowy homes in Plainfield, and the mother-hearts reached out for these as they talked over the coming Winter's work. These meetings are held every Thursday afternoon at 3:30 in the W. C. T. U. rooms, 73 West Front street, to which everybody is welcome. A different programme is expected each week.

Those present Thursday are already looking forward to the next meeting, which will be devoted to mothers and elder sisters. They ask you to bring the little children if you cannot leave them home; —but don't lose the helpful influence of that one hour a week—an influence which, like the waves of the sea, will surely reach out to unknown shores, and into Christian homes.

As a cough remedy, Hires' Cough Cure is, perhaps, the best medicine that science has ever discovered. It cuts the phlegm and mucus, relieves the lungs and chest, breaks up cold as nothing else will do. In croup and whooping-cough its prompt action is like magic. No family should be without it.

THAT WON'T HELP MR. GILBERT.

Misrepresentation Will Out, and Do a Candidate More Harm Than Good.

In writing of "Our Candidate for Mayor," the Central Times of this week says: "It seems almost unnecessary to tell the Plainfield voters anything about Alexander Gilbert"; and thereupon the Times goes on to tell a lot of things about him that are not so.

Some of the errors of statement are of no matter; as, for instance, that he was "again made a councilman in 1881;" and that he "has been connected with the Market National Bank for twenty one years" yet "has held the position of cashier for twenty-seven years." But the following unfounded misstatement of facts may mislead somebody:

He early identified himself with the town's best interests and was elected to the Councils of 1872 and '73. As Chairman of the Special Railroad Committee Mr. Gilbert represented the young city when the Central Railroad elevated its tracks. It is hard to believe now that this improvement should have been opposed by Plainfielders. But the inhabitants of the city were very conservative. In spite of the evils of the grade crossing, there was such a fear that the railroad might overreach the taxpayers in this improvement that it was with the greatest difficulty that the work could be carried out on account of the very general opposition; mainly through Mr. Gilbert's personal efforts this was accomplished, however, and the grade crossing in Plainfield was made a thing of the past.

Mr. Gilbert was not in the Council in 1873, and had no more to do with the accomplishment of the grade crossing than any other simple citizen. It was all done by a bare majority of councilmen of whom Mr. Gilbert was not one. Our contemporary is labeling him with a virtue he would not himself have the assumption to claim.

Honesty is the best policy even in politics. Mr. Gilbert is President of the Music Hall Association and the one who has personally done for it about all that has ever been done. He is the originator of the Hillside Cemetery Association, and is to be credited with a large share of its success. He was as good a councilman as ever served the city, in his time. He is a shrewd business man, a philanthropic one, and an model citizen. All this and more may be said in his favor, truthfully. Therefore there is no need of the Times stooping to misrepresentation for the sake of electing a Republican.

END OF A TIME-HONORED CUSTOM.

Mother and Children Churches No More to Meet Together in Re-union.

The "annual meeting" of the Seventh-Day Baptist churches of New York City and New Jersey, held last night and today at New Market, will probably—says a local member—be the last of those time-honored assemblages. The first of the meetings was held years and years ago in response to the wishes of the older generation who had been Seventh-Day worshipers when there was only one Seventh-Day church, that at New Market, or Piscataway; and the meetings continued annually with great interest. Of late few of the original Seventh-Day people are left to conduct the meetings with their accustomed fervor, and their descendants do not seem to care so much for this religious re-union, so that the old-time spirit is greatly lacking. It is therefore deemed best to discontinue the meetings, and those who met together this week seemed to consider the occasion as much a farewell as a renewal of greetings. The four churches of New Jersey—Plainfield, New Market, Shiloh and Marlboro—and the one of New York City, are all descendants of the one old historic Piscataway Seventh-Day family, and the "yearly meeting" in days gone by was really an affectionate exchange of good wishes and a review of past prosperity, between the founders and members of the Piscataway mother church and those of the four offspring churches. Now much of that feeling of close attachment between the churches has been lost, through the death of the old members to whom all of the interests and personalities of the children churches were so dear, and though a kindly sentiment is of course still maintained each church has become more of a unit by itself. The "yearly meetings" have as a rule been attended only by the pastors and some of the older members of the several churches.

Where the Difference Lay.

One day last Summer—says Life, and gives a picture which may or may not represent a prominent citizen and a well-known domestic—a gentleman at Plainfield, N. J., had notice served on him by his cook.

"Why do you leave me?"—he asked.

"It's too hot here for a Chistian in Summer."

"It's no hotter for you than it is for me"—observed the employer—"Yet I have to stay."

"That's the difference between you and me,"—returned the cook—"I havn't."

His Invitation Failed to Reach Him.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your report yesterday of the banquet given Thursday evening by Senator Keys, of Somerset, you do injustice to both Senator Keys and to me. You say that Charles A. Reed of North Plainfield did not appear nor send a declination of the invitation extended him. I never received an invitation to Senator Keys's banquet, and therefore was in no position to "appear" or to "send a declination," and I feel sure that Senator Keys did not sanction the publication of the statement.

LAWYER GILMORE'S GREAT CASE.

How a Young Plainfield Attorney Defeated a Famous Conspiracy Which Hoodwinked Even Hudson's Astute Prosecutor.

Edward DeRussey Gilmore, who up to a year ago was a resident of this city, whose widow was formerly Miss Louise Coussen of West Second street; and who called away four weeks ago in the prime of ambitious manhood, and at the height of honored citizenship—is now one of the silent inhabitants of a Plainfield churchyard, will long be remembered by the legal fraternity of New Jersey for his untiring energy and extraordinary success in his profession. His greatest achievement was perhaps the defeat of the great conspiracy that was formed in Jersey City several years ago to capture the $1,000,000 fortune which old Miser Lewis, of Hoboken, left to the Federal Government to be applied to the reduction of the national debt. Gilmore was at that time the partner of the late Robert Gilchrist, one of the most splendid lawyers New Jersey has ever known. When the newspapers announced the miser's singular bequest, a woman from New York attacked the will. She set up a claim of widowhood and demanded her dower rights, if nothing more, in the property.

The Government was suspicious of her weeds, and retained Attorney-General Gilchrist to dispute her claim. The "widow" made a remarkably strong case, producing the certificate of her marriage to the old miser, and being aided by the defective memory of the minister whose signature it bore, and by the testimony of witnesses who claimed to have seen the ceremony performed. Gilmore became well satisfied that the widow had been put forward by a gang of conspirators. In the course of his investigations he went to Jamaica, in the Indies, whence the old miser had come. When he came back with the information that Lewis had abandoned a wife and three children there the conspiracy was not staggered by this blow. It prepared even to attack the regularity of the marriage to the Jamaica woman, and was making considerable headway when Gilmore struck the convincing proofs that settled the case. He had for years been hunting for the plate from which the blank marriage certificate had been printed. When, after a long search, he discovered it, he established the fact that the plate had not been engraved till two months or more after the alleged wedding. It could not, therefore, have produced the certificate at the time at which the woman swore that the blank had been filled out.

The woman was the first to make her peace with the State when she heard that exposure was certain. Charles H. Winfield, brother-in-law of Charles H. Schermerhorn of this city, had been her counsel. He created a great sensation by throwing up the case in open court one morning, and the next day "Mrs. Lewis" went upon the stand to confess her perjury. She was but the stool-pigeon for a skillful gang of forgers, who looked to Charles Sacia as their chief. Sacia and his crowd, as well as Mrs. Lewis, were indicted for conspiracy, and all were sentenced to long terms in State Prison.

The Government had utilized Mrs. Lewis as a witness, and she had testified on the faith that she would not be prosecuted. The Federal authorities refused to sanction the bargain, and she was indicted, convicted and sentenced with the rest. On the morning that she was to have been removed to the prison to serve her term, however, the door of her cell was left open—accidentally, of course. Before the pursuit began she had escaped to the Pennsylvania woods on the other side of the Delaware, and she has never been heard from since. There was a general suspicion, at the time, that she disappeared with the connivance of her keepers, and it is probable that neither the Trenton nor the Washington authorities made any strenous efforts to recapture her.

Warrenville Warblings.

Somebody is fond of potatoes and turnips. Wm. Miller had seven bushels of potatoes stolen from the field Sunday night, and Geo. Bower had some turnips stolen.

Thanksgiving services will be held in the Warren Congregational church Thursday evening, November 27, at seven o'clock.

Mr. Barr has sold his farm, and he and his family have moved to New York city.

At the recent election Warren Township polled 175 votes. Of these, 112 were Democratic, 48 Republican, and 12 Prohibition. Three were rejected.

BEN BOLT.

No Wonder She Was Pleased.

"I heard the sweetest compliment
Last night," said Floy with air of pride,
"What was it, love?" with look intent
Her steady company replied:
"'Twas this," she answered; "Count de Vines
Remarked that I—he said it o'er—
Was pretty as the new designs
In jewelry at Collier's store."

The Common Lot.

There is a place no love can reach,
There is a time no voice can teach,
There is a chain no power can break,
There is a sleep no sound can wake.

Sooner or later that time will arrive, that place will wait for your coming, that chain must bind you in helpless death, that sleep must fall on your senses. But thousands every year go untimely to their fate, and thousands more lengthen out their days by heedful, timely care. For the failing strength, the weakening organs, the wasting blood, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a wonderful restorative and a prolonger of strength and life. It purifies the blood and invigorates the system, thereby fortifying it against disease. Of druggists.

ANOTHER BANK FOR MR. HYDE.

A Plainfielder at the Head of the Project to Give Westfielders a Place to Discount Their Notes.

The Westfield Standard is able to give the following particulars and correspondence, by authority:

"Charles L. Hyde, of Plainfield, and his associates, have taken the preliminary steps to form a bank of discount in Westfield, to be known as 'The County Bank.' The Hyde family are well known in our town as financiers of large means and of great experience and success. They are supposed to be connected with Warren Ackerman in the Netherwood Hotel and other enterprises. One of the family is the president of a bank in Plainfield, where some of our citizens have long kept their deposits; another is president of a bank in Uniontown, in Pennsylvania; and all of them have had considerable experience as bankers. If the bank should be a State bank it is understood it will be under the supervision, necessarily under the State law, of the Bank Commissioners of the State of New Jersey; if it should be a National bank it will have the well-known safeguards of such institutions. In either case the stockholders should see to it that the Board of Directors are men of both integrity and capacity in banking matters.

"Mr. Hyde has written the following letter:

Nov. 18, '90.

Messrs. R. A. Fairbairn and W. G. Peckham:

DEAR SIRS:—You may state to the Westfield friends of the County Bank that my idea for its formation and character are about as follows:

First—The bank should be capitalized at fifty thousand dollars, fifty per cent. of which must be paid up.

Second—We intend to have a cautious and conservative Board of Directors and to pursue a very conservative policy. We shall loan a smaller percentage than usual of our deposits, and shall rely largely on the experience and assistance of some one of the officers of the bank at Plainfield in which my family is interested.

Third—If the people of Westfield will subscribe ten thousand dollars or more worth of stock, myself and friends will take the balance, and although we desire that the Westfield friends of the bank take a large amount we deem it essential to its welfare and success to retain the majority of the stock to insure its good management.

Very truly yours,
CHAS. L. HYDE.

"The gentlemen who furnishes us with this statement says that Westfield people can have all the stock they want to take; but they must take all of it if they desire to take the control in their own hands, and not to share it with Mr. Hyde. The Westfield parties interested in this enterprise undertake it largely as a public duty and are willing to yield to any other parties who will undertake the matter on this basis, or will get up another bank. Mr. Hyde says that he can make this a dividend paying investment, and he says further that under his plan parties in Westfield will have to take stock at once, as they can get it, or else all but the $10,000 will be taken up by outside parties. It is considered necessary to get at least $10,000 subscribed in Westfield in order to get local connections. Among the original subscribers are Messrs. C. L. Hyde and partner ($10,000 first subscription), J. H. Vail, R. H. Fairbairn, A. D. Shepard and W. G. Peckham."

More Parlor Politics.

The following, printed in graceful script, with poor ink, is being sent through the mail indiscriminately:

Plainfield, N. J., 1890.

DEAR SIR:

You are hereby earnestly requested to interview your personal friends whose usual custom has been to vote the Democratic ticket, and to do your utmost to influence them to cast their ballots for the Republican candidates in the coming City election.

By request of the
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Temperance Wine.

No matter what may be said about the use of wines, it is the adulteration and trash mixtures that does the mischief. Where pure wines are used we hear no complaint of inebriation. We never hear of intoxication from the use of Speer's Wine of New Jersey. This wine and also the Unfermented Grape Juice is held in high estimation by the best doctors in this country for the use of the sick.

Firemen Overcome by Smoke.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Nov. 22.—Fire in Samuel Payne's livery stable on McKay street destroyed the building with a large amount of hay and grain and 15 sleighs. Loss, $2,500; insured. F. S. Smith and George Messers, members of the Greylock Hook and Ladder Company, were overcome by smoke and were rescued from the burning building with difficulty.

The Yan Phon Lee Divorce Case.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 22.—The sensational Yan Phon Lee divorce case was smothered in the Supreme Court, Mrs. Lee being granted a divorce with the custody of the two children on the ground of adultery. There was no opposition.

Williams Defeated Dartmouth.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 22.—Williams won the inter-collegiate football game from Dartmouth by 6 to 0. The teams were evenly matched, but Williams was the stronger back of the line and showed more head work.

PRACTICALLY ENFORCED.

The Process of Subtraction Illustrated to the Teacher's Satisfaction.

MISS SWALLOW had been all the morning explaining by means of various examples the process of subtraction; but in spite of her faithful endeavor to make the matter understood by the fourteen distended little brains before her, one point remained hopelessly dark. "My dear children," finally exclaimed the worthy Miss Swallow, in that full contralto which never failed to make itself heard in the Sunday choir, "it is as clear as water. Georgie, pay attention! If I take five out of five what will remain?"

George stared blankly at the questioner and dared not answer. The rest of the class were hopelessly entangled and a few attempted to escape the questioner by falling asleep. Another teacher might have lost patience; not so Miss Swallow. She glanced at her watch, and finding it near dinner-time, opened her sachel and took therefrom a peach—large, luscious, tempting. That excellent lady was right. The idiotic expression disappeared from the faces in front of her and the eyes sparkled. Mouths were opened expectantly; a little tongue smacked.

Miss Swallow was paring the peach. When she had finished it she proceeded with measured solemnity: "Here I have a peach. I will divide it into five parts." She did so.

"Now, I take one;" and she ate it.

"Two;" and the second followed the first.

"Three;" the children looked anxious.

"Four;" some of them rose impatiently.

"Five; ah-h! What is left?"

"The stone," sighed a disappointed, mournful chorus.—Judge.

THE CHILD-ACTRESS ILLUSION.

Little Earnestine (the infant phenomenon)—Can't I leave out that lullaby song to-night?

Her Manager—Why? It's very pretty.

Little Earnestine—I know; but it makes me think of my husband and five little ones up in Harlem till I get the blues.—Frank Leslie's.

The Thug Jests.

"Soy!"

"Well!"

"You'se de turnkey of this jail, ain'tcher?"

"Yes."

"Well, tend ter yer business, will yer? Just turn that key and lemme out."—Munsey's Weekly.

Baby's Looks.

Fond Father—Which side of the house do you think the baby looks like, Jim?

Jim—I dunno, Fred, but 'pears to me he looks 'bout as much like the outside as he does like the inside.—Munsey's Weekly.

A Ready Answer.

Allopath—Your homeopathy is all nonsense! Now, what would be the homeopathic remedy for a dog bite? Another dog bite?

Homeopath—The remedy for a dog bite is an infusion of bark; for a cat nip, catnip tea—see?—Light.

Won't Always Work.

Oldboy—Young man, don't try to fly too high at first. Always begin at the bottom, and work up.

Flippant Youth—That's all right if you want to climb a ladder; but what if you want to dig a well?—Light.

Anxious to Save Gas.

Stern Parent—Amy, it is time for every one to be in bed. I am going to put out all the lights.

Amy (whose beau is holding a protracted meeting with her)—Oh, I wish you would, papa!—Light.

Not in the Contract.

"Waiter!" called the customer.

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"I ordered Welsh rabbit," remarked the gentleman, holding aloft a golden strand, "but I didn't ask for American hair."—Munsey's Weekly.

A Deadly Suggestion.

Bertie—I hate that fellow Dudds, the tailor. I'd like to murder him!

Charlie—Why don't you pay his bill? He would probably die of surprise.—Light.

Overstayed His Time.

Mr. Dreary—How early it gets late these October evenings.

Miss Weary—Yes, indeed. It comes time to go home long before you realize it.—West Shore.

He Believed Him.

First Stranger—Say, that's my umbrella you have.

Second Stranger—I don't doubt it, sir; I got it at a pawnshop.—The Jury.

Attacking the Stewart Will.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Lawyer William Holt Secor, in the suit of Sarah Branagh to set aside the will of A. T. Stewart, swears that the instrument probated as Stewart's will is really not his will but a "fraud or worse."

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The following named fourth-class postmasters were appointed in New York State: C. B. Morgan, Aurora; W. H. Courter, Eddyville; D. W. Mead, Miles, and J. Frank, Jr., at North Boston.

Found Dead in the Canal.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 22.—The dead body of John Lynch was found in the Oswego Canal during the morning. He was once wealthy and the family was formerly a large owner of salt blocks. Generals Sherman and Sheridan have been entertained at Mrs. Lynch's home.

Crushed by a Falling Roof.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 22.—Patrick O'Hara, aged 60, was killed in the Pennsylvania Coal Company's mines at Dunmore. He had fired a blast and was returning after the discharge when the roof fell in and crushed the life out of him.

In a State of Terror.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 22.—A dispatch from Valentine reports that the dancing Indians have the surrounding country in a state of terror, and settlers are still coming in.

Are You a Nervous Sufferer?

Do You Have these Symptoms and Feelings?

Nervous affections are very prevalent, and are attended by restlessness and nervousness, an anxiety or depression of the mind, loss of interest in society and the daily affairs of life. There will be a tired, languid feeling, with a sense of exhaustion, upon waking in the morning. Persons so affected tire easily, having little power of endurance; there is often a bad taste in the mouth, with a faintness or sinking at the stomach; there may be a loss of appetite, or it will become variable, and digestion may be impaired. They gradually become nervous, restless and irritable, and there is often more or less loss of sleep.

There will be feelings of exhaustion, lassitude and lack of inclination for either physical or mental exertion. There is an almost constant sense of weakness, languor and dullness, often accompanied by strange and disagreeable sensations in the head and eyes, often followed by headache. The night's sleep, which should refresh the system and restore strength and vigor to the nerves and muscles, often leaves them in the morning more tired and exhausted than on retiring.

Persons thus affected are often despondent and suffer from gloom and depression of mind. The nerves become so weakened after a time that the least excitement or shock will flush the face and bring on a tremor of trembling, often attended by more or less palpitation of the heart.

If you have the above symptoms and feelings, or a portion of them, you are suffering from nervous disease, caused by an exhausted condition of the nerve power, which is slowly but surely sapping your life and energies; and it is absolutely necessary for you, if you would prevent insanity, paralysis, or total prostration, to use the great nerve invigorant and vital restorative, Dr. Greene's Nervura, which is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and for sale by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Refuse all substitutes, as this great remedy has no equal.

If you are weak, tired and nervous, with lifeless feeling and no ambition to work, or run down by malaria, it will restore your strength, vigor and energies. If you are sleepless and wake tired mornings, with dull head, bad taste in the mouth, no appetite, depression of mind and extreme nervousness, this wonderful remedy will clear your head, tone up your nerves, invigorate your blood and put vim and life into you.

Read This, Nervous Sufferer.

For eight years I have been constantly under the care of doctors, five years under eminent allopathic, and three with homœopathic physicians, but found no relief, nor, from what the doctors told me, did I expect to get any better. I was convinced they did not understand my case, so I thought I would try Dr. Greene's Nervura, and the result has been truly wonderful. I now feel in better health than for the last 20 years. During all this time I have been suffering with Malaria, Heart Disease, Kidney and Liver complaints, nervous prostration and sleeplessness. For the three months before making Dr. Greene's Nervura I had been confined to my room, and most of the time to the bed. I feel, with the blessing of God, Dr. Greene's Nervura has given me a new lease of life and health, and that I am cured of all my troubles. I have a great desire that others may be benefited as I have been, and take every opportunity to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura to the sick.

Mrs. E. S. BOGART,
Baptist Home, Sixty-eighth st., New York city.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

"MINE EYES TO THE HILLS."

Psalm cxxi., i.

"I will lift up mine eyes to the hills,"
The eternal hills of God,
Where Omnipotence Rises His camp
And angel feet have trod,
And where treasures unfailing abound,
As streams to Moses' rod.

To the hills "from whence cometh my help,"
Whence all our blessings flow,
As exhaustless as storehouse of God
In gifts which they bestow,
Which are ever sent down from their heights
To cheer the plains below.

"I will lift up mine eyes to the hills,"
Your promise will not fail;
Ye perpetual mercies distil
To dwellers in the vale,
And your clefts will a refuge afford
Whenever foes assail.

There is rest and repose in your shade,
Where down the weary lie,
And your streams they refreshing impart
To the valleys parched and dry.
But for which both the fields and the flocks
Would wither, parch and die.

Ye lift up the low lands on your side,
Else desert they would be;
Ye hold back the cold blasts which sweep down
From out the Northern sea
To condense the cloud mists overhead,
To scatter raindrops free.

I now "lift up mine eyes to the hills;"
Not always thus 'twill be,
For sometimes to the hills far above
From low lands I shall flee,
And shall dwell in the height of the hills
Which now by faith I see.
—Rev. J. Byington Smith, in Christian Inquirer.

THE SCOFFER'S DELUSION.

The Christian Is Sure of Another and Beautiful World.

"Your idea of another world, of a beautiful Heaven where our friends wait for us, is very comforting, of course," says the scoffer; "but it is all a delusion, simply a delusion." Is it? Did you ever watch a loved one go down to the river's edge, and wait while he crossed in full hope of a glorious immortality, and with a glimpse of that Heaven before he left.

I remember the dear old grandfather who, weary with his many years, had grown to have a childish fear of death.

"I know it will be all right," he said, "but I dread the change."

But when it came, he roused from what seemed like death, and raising his arms to welcome some one we could not see, cried out joyfully: "Home, home, bless the Lord," and that instant knew the great secret.

I remember the baby brother who stretched out his little arms to some one he saw over and above us, and with a sweet smile, that was on his face when they shut the coffin lid, went up to meet them.

And the other brother, who, in manhood's prime, with a look of peace on his face that was not of earth, said: "It is all right; I am no more afraid to die than to go into another room." Like a flash the summons came to him, but what did it matter?

The precious mother, who, when she knew she must go, told us so quietly: "I have been thinking it over; I don't know but I have as many there as here," and calmly made her preparations as for a journey. Was she going out to nothing, think you?

And the brother's wife, loved as our very own, who one short week later told us: "I am not better, as you think; but worse, and before to-morrow night I shall be in Heaven." Was she deluded? Was there no God to tell her, as she said He did?

Is it not rather those who doubt and disbelieve who are deluded? What is there in this world that proves to us the truth or falsity of a thing better than a personal test, and when one has put himself in communication with Heaven by accepting Jesus as his and receiving the answering message that comes back from Heaven, he knows there is such a place, and the belief in it is not a delusion. Hannah Whitall Smith beautifully illustrates this by what she saw at the Paris exposition. Ranged round a room were many people, their elbows resting on the velvet-cushions, their ears at the telephone receivers, listening to concert or lecture, while those in the room without this connection heard nothing. "So," said she, "the Christian hears what the worlding can not, because he has no connection with the Heavenly land."

Delusion? Oh, no! But the greatest reality to us who know that year by year we are getting nearer to this place that holds so many for some of us. And we shall not be afraid to cross over. The "raging river of death" will be but a rippling rill, and we shall pass lightly over the stepping stones, our eyes looking across to the waiting ones on the other shore, our hands in those that were pierced.—Emma Harriman, in N. W. Christian Advocate.

BEHAVIOUR IN CHURCH.

How Many Otherwise Agreeable Persons Make Themselves Obnoxious.

It is my privilege to attend regularly the services of a large and flourishing church.

The worship is intended to be helpful and spiritual, and a reverent and quiet manner prevails, of course. But in the pew exactly in front of me are two ladies of perhaps twenty-five and forty-five years of age. These ladies are so fond of each other that they think it quite necessary to manifest this fondness even in church. They sit so that each shall support the other, and they look into one another's eyes with much interest and affection, and occasionally the older will put her arm lovingly over the shoulder of the younger one.

While all this may only be in poor taste, and odd, and not exactly bad manners, yet the habit these same ladies have of not only whispering, but of carrying on a regular conversation during the preliminary services, is not only ill-mannered, but irreverent, and irritating to those near them.

Right opposite my home lives a family that does not regularly attend church. There are two boys, and these boys are allowed to go to church if they are so disposed. Of course they are not accompanied by their parents. The older one behaves quite well; the other, a boy of ten or eleven, lies at full length upon the seat, looks around, amuses himself with any thing he can get hold of, and disturbs the worship of all who have the misfortune to sit so that he comes within range of their vision.

Another boy, much older, who would be really offended if not called a young man, examines his hands and his cuffs, looks up to the ceiling, turns around in the pew, and swings his foot, till the gentleman behind him, in sheer desperation, has actually spoken to him, but, however, with no apparent effect. He is very regular in his attendance, often bringing a young friend with him, but as the friend is also apparently forgetful of the sacredness of the time and place, those near by are still more disturbed. And yet none of these persons do any thing which requires an invitation from the usher to leave the church. They only leave their best manners at home, and because they are not known by name to those sitting near by, they are thoughtless about disturbing and annoying them.

Two ladies, members of this same church, were evidently occupying an unaccustomed pew, recently, because of the unusual character of the service, which made it necessary for pew-holders to give up their seats to strangers. Thinking, perhaps, that they were unknown to those sitting in the part of the church which they chose for the evening, they, too, kept their good manners out of sight, and so annoyed others who were trying to be patient (because of the heat and the crowd), that the discomfort occasioned by Mrs. —— and her daughter during the time of the religious exercises will not soon be forgotten.

Good manners in church not only prohibit these annoying ways to which I have referred, but they require a respectful, worshipful attitude and a reverent attention to all the forms and ceremonies connected with the services. Especially should the head be bowed during prayer time, and the voice join in the singing, except with those rare people who have always been able to sing more sweetly with the heart than with the voice.—H. T. Conklin, in Golden Rule.

POOR APOLOGIES.

The Fact That Your Neighbor Sins Will Not Excuse You in the Least.

Some persons apologize for their sins by saying: "We are a great deal better than some people. You see people all around us that are a great deal worse than we." You stand up, columnar in your integrity, and look down upon those who are prostrate in their habits and crimes. What of that? If I failed through recklessness and wicked imprudence for ten thousand dollars, is the matter alleviated at all by the fact that some body has failed for one hundred thousand dollars; some body else for two hundred thousand dollars? If I have the neuralgia, shall I refuse medical attendance because my neighbor has virulent typhoid fever? The fact that his disease is worse than mine—does that cure mine? If I, through my foolhardiness, leap off into ruin does it break the fall to know that others leap off a higher cliff into deeper darkness? When the Hudson river railroad train went through the bridge at Spuyten Duyvel, did it alleviate the matter at all that instead of two or three people being hurt there were seventy-five mangled and crushed? Because others are depraved, is that any excuse for our depravity? Am I better than they? Perhaps they had worse temptations than I have had. Perhaps their surroundings in life were more overpowering. Perhaps if you had been under the same stress of temptation, instead of reading this you would have been looking through the bars of a penitentiary.—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

WISE SAYINGS.

—A holy life has a voice. It speaks when the tongue is silent.—Standard.

—If money could be borrowed as easily as trouble, the world would be full of round-shouldered people.—Ram's Horn.

—The Christian should serve the Lord with gladness. This is better for himself and for others. Joy, and not melancholy, is the fruit of the Spirit.—United Presbyterian.

—Our personal desires are no proper guide for our action. What we want to do, may be right, and it may be wrong. Unless we have some better reason for doing a thing than our desire to do it, we are without a satisfactory reason for its doing.—S. S. Times.

—Part of our every morning prayer should be that God would use our influence for Himself, and take the smallest fragments of power for good that drop from our lives, and employ them all for His glory, and as seeds to grow into beauty in some of this world's desert spots.—Faith and Works.

—No contrast can be greater than that drawn in the Bible between death as "the wages of sin," and "eternal life" as the gift of God "through Jesus Christ our Lord." The one is evil, and that, too, forever, as the punishment of sin; and the other is good, and that, too, forever, as the gift of God's grace.—N. Y. Independent.

—Christianity is a help in business. God issues a bond: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." When we fulfill the requirements, when we meet the conditions, we may be certain that God will pay the bond.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

—The Gospel is glad tidings of great joy. It was an outgush of song in a sad world—a burst of sunshine after ages of darkness. Paganism to-day is not jubilant, but gloomy and despondent. When, in a Christian land, any class of people discard Christ, their songs die out because their joy has withered. Spiritualism has no exultant songs, because it has no gladness in Jesus. It may gather in the tented grove, under the inspiration of waving trees, singing birds, verdant fields, glittering stars, and azure skies, but it confesses that it can not counterfeit the Christian psalmody which rolls down the ages, lifting the heart of the believer nearer to God.—Christian Union.

NOTHING BUT RHEUMATICS.

How the Old Skipper Relieved One of His Seasick Passengers.

E hadn't been out of the bay ten minutes, and had just got fairly to bowing and bobbing on the ground swell, when I was seized with a suspicion. The captain of the fish boat had assured me by all that he held sacred that I wouldn't be seasick—couldn't possibly be if I tried my hardest. It now occurred to me that he had made a sad mistake. My stomach began to roll, my head to swim, and as I hastened to stretch out at full length on my back, he queried:

"Chill coming on?"

"Chill! I'm seasick—sick from head to heel!"

"Can't be—can't possibly be," he calmly replied. "I noticed that you had a bilious look when you came down this morning. Ought to look out for your liver."

"But I tell you I'm in an awful way! I can't wait another minute. Here I go * * * !"

"Haven't the first symptoms of seasickness," he said, as he bit off an inch of plug tobacco. "Why, you ought to have seen the man I had—"

"Say! How much will you take to go ashore?"

"Now, hear him! This shows what imagination can do."

"Would a thousand dollars be any object to you?"

"Now, then, get out those fish-lines and open a few clams for bait. We'll be among 'em in less than five minutes."

"Great Jupiter, man! but my head whirls like a top!"

"Can't possibly whirl—couldn't do it for money. There isn't sea enough on here to spill a glass of water."

"And my stomach! Lands * * * !"

"Get out those clams!"

"Clams! Clams! I wouldn't look at a clam for ten thousand dollars! Take me home! Take me into a swamp—up a tree—under water—anywhere to get out of this! Shall I make it fifteen hundred—two thousand?"

"What's the matter now?"

"Matter? I'm dying."

"Can't be—can't possibly be. Not the slightest symptom of even being sick. A little bilious, and the glare of the sun does the rest. I'd try a pint of salt water."

"Heavens! but do you want to see my boots go overboard? Say, I'll give you * * *!"

"Oh, well, if your head aches you might lie down for awhile, but don't get any foolish ideas into your brain. Ocean a perfect mill-pond—not the slightest heave—boat seems to be spiked to a rock. Try a sandwich? No? Have a chaw? No? Like a raw clam to sort o' settle things? No? Well, lay down and keep quiet. I take out babies occasionally, but this time I forgot my nursing bottle. Did you bring a rattle-box?"

"Say, captain."

"Yes."

"I—I feel better."

"Certainly."

"And I'll—I'll get up."

"Of course. Now, then, over with that line; keep your eyes on the water half a mile away, pucker your lips into a whistle, and that rheumatis will go off. That's what it is. Can't possibly be any thing else. I'll give you some shark lie to rub your j'ints when we get ashore. There you are—you've got a whopper—pull—whoopee!"—N. Y. Sun.

He Knew What He Needed.

Mr. Hackensack—Have you any bars for windows that will keep mosquitos out?

Store-keeper—Yes, sir; here you are, just the thing.

Mr. Hackensack—What, those wire nettings? Why, bless your soul, man, I want iron bars! I live in New Jersey.—Puck.

A KID-GLOVE STRATEGIST.

Banks—I worked in my garden nearly all last week. How is that for the "horny hand of toil," eh?

Brown—But what in the world did you do it for? You'll ruin your hands.

Banks—That's all right, my boy. You know I'm running for Congress, and to-morrow I have to meet and shake hands with a delegation of working-men. I'm going to capture their votes, sure.—Munsey's Weekly.

She Had Asked Him.

Little Edith Brooks, aged three summers, was asked by her mother whether she had said her prayers, and owned that she had not.

"But," said the unwise mother, "God will be very angry with you."

"Oh! no, mammy; Dod 'ont."

"How do you know that?"

"Oh! I know, 'cos I ast Him and He say: 'Don't mention it, Miss Brooks!'"—Life.

A Perfectly Valid Excuse.

Judge Duffy—Prisoner, you were very drunk last night. Can you explain it?

Prisoner—I can not, sir. I passed a very quiet evening at your club, and—

Judge Duffy—Sufficient, sir. You're discharged.—Texas Siftings.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

The Best Remedy

in this world, says J. Hofherr of Syracuse, N. Y., is Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son who was partially paralized three years ago and attacked by fits, has not had any symptoms of them since he took one bottle of the remedy. I most heartily thank for it.

Nervous Prostration Cured.

CROGHAN, N. Y. June, 1889.

I was not able to do anything for 19 months, was confined to bed most of the time, couldn't eat nor sleep, was so nervous and dizzy that I could not walk from the house to the garden. I was all run down by what the doctors called nervous prostration. No medicine seemed to help me. Then I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and now I can eat and sleep and have no more sinking spells, can do my housework again. I am very thankful for this and recommend the Tonic to all sufferers.

SUSIE VERSHNEIDER.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the designating the streets of the City of Plainfield in and through which the posts and poles of the Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, may be placed and the manner of placing the same.

AN ORDINANCE

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That pursuant to an Act entitled "An act concerning Corporations, approved April 7th, eighteen hundred and seventy-five," which supplement was approved May 10th, eighteen hundred and eighty-four; and the streets, lanes and highways of the City of Plainfield are hereby designated as the streets in which the Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, may place and maintain posts and poles to sustain the necessary wires and fixtures for the supply and distribution of electricity, for electric lights, heat or power, for the period of ten years from November first, eighteen hundred and ninety, and the manner of placing the same shall be as follows:

The said posts or poles shall be located, placed or erected within and adjacent to the curb line as shown by official maps of the city of Plainfield, including the points or places now occupied by the posts or poles of the said Plainfield Electric Light Company; and said posts or poles may also be placed or erected at any other points or places upon said streets, lanes or highways as may be indicated for that purpose by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield or some committee thereof authorized by the Common Council, and all poles hereafter erected shall be erected under the supervision of said Common Council, or its authorized committee and in accordance with the rules and ordinances of said city, and shall be located within eighteen inches of the curb line.

Section 2. That on the first day of November, nineteen hundred, the rights and privileges hereby conferred upon or secured to the said Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, shall, at the option of the said inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, cease and determine, and said Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, shall upon request of the said inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by its Common Council, execute under the corporate seal of said Company and deliver to said inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, a surrender and release of all rights and privileges granted or secured by this ordinance, to carry out the true intent and meaning hereof. And said Plainfield Electric Light Company shall file with the City Clerk within ninety days next after passage of this ordinance its acceptance under its corporate seal and signed by its president, of the conditions, terms, provisions, restrictions and regulations hereof, and every of them, and in default thereof, it shall be understood and held that it declines to accept the same and thereupon the rights, powers and privileges to it granted or secured hereby, shall forever cease and be at an end, in the same manner and with the same effect as if this ordinance had never been passed.

Adopted by the Common Council Nov. 14, 1890.
Approved by the Mayor Nov. 15, 1890.

REDSKINS PLOTTING

A Plan to Entrap Gen. Brooke and Kill Him.

EXCITEMENT AT PINE RIDGE.

No Fighting Has Occurred Yet, But a Battle is Expected.

Settlers Are Rushing to the Large Towns on Account of the Scare—Troops Hastily Dispatched from St. Louis—Missionaries Receive a Warning from the Indians—The Ghost Dance Continues.

FORT NIOBRARA, Neb., Nov. 24.—The statement comes from Rosebud that all the warlike spirits of that agency are preparing to move to Pine Ridge, either to have a conference with the department commander or to fight.

It is alleged upon good authority that one faction, with a considerable following, has a plan of action prepared, which is to be inaugurated by stabbing General Brooke, and to follow this up with a general attack upon all the troops and civilians about the agency.

The command at Rosebud has removed its camp within the agency grounds for the better protection of the buildings and property and to insure safety to the various employes who are assembled at the agency from the different parts of the reservation.

The ghost dance still continues. From 300 to 500 warriors have been counted in the dance, with an audience of 2,500 or more men, women and children. The next few days will probably develop something definite.

SETTLERS ALARMED.

They are Rushing to the Large Towns on Account of the Indian Scare.

ABERDEEN, S. D., Nov. 24.—Reports received indicate that the Indian scare is becoming quite general all along the east side of the Missouri River north of Pierre, to Mandan.

Settlers are becoming very much alarmed and are fleeing eastward, leaving most of their possessions behind them. They are coming into the larger towns, such as Mandan, Eureka, Ellendale, Ipswich, Pierre and Gettysburg, in large numbers. At the latter point there seems to be the most excitement, and Governor Mellette has gone there with a large supply of arms and ammunition, hoping thereby to quiet the alarm.

Telegrams were received by him from Campbell, Walworth, Potter, Hide and Hand Counties, also from several points in the Black Hills, saying great alarm was felt and asking for assistance. Other dispatches from commanders at Forts Yates and Sully laugh at the report.

General Ruger of St. Paul has been wired by the commander of that post, and troops are ready to march at an hour's notice if wanted.

Rumors of bodies of Indians east of the river add greatly to the alarm, but Agent McLaughlin of Fort Yates says no Indians are absent from the agency. It is evident that nearly all the alarm is needless and will be quieted in a short time.

Troops Ordered to Move.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 24.—General Merritt, commander of the Department of Missouri at 2 a. m. received instructions from Washington to send troops at once to Pine Ridge Agency. He accordingly ordered a regiment of the Seventh Cavalry, consisting of eight companies of about 800 men, under command of Colonel Forsythe, and a company of artillery, with a battery of four guns, commanded by Captain Campron, from Fort Riley to the scene of trouble. The troops left by special train. It is learned that every soldier in the Department of Missouri is in readiness to start for Dakota at a moment's notice.

Missionaries Warned by the Redskins.

PIERRE, S. D., Nov. 24.—Two Indian missionaries of the Episcopal Church, Messrs. Ashley and Garrett, arrived in Pierre last night from the Pine Ridge Agency, having been warned by the Indians that it would not be safe for them to remain there.

Indians Charge on a Logging Camp.

SHAWANO, Wis., Nov. 24.—There is trouble on the Menominee Reservation. One hundred and fifty armed Indians surrounded the logging camp of Henry Sherry, on the 16th section near Evergreen River, and burned the camp after the men had retired. Eleven horses and 14 oxen and the camp outfit for 15 men were all destroyed. The 13 white men were all unarmed and fled for their lives. The Indians claim that the white men were trespassers, although the 16th section belongs to the State.

Nine Shipwrecked Seamen Rescued.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 24.—The steamer Earnford arrived at Sparrows' Point last night with nine shipwrecked seamen taken from the Russian barkentine Yautsen. On Thursday last, when 20 miles east-southeast from Cape Hatteras, the Yautsen was sighted in a dismasted condition and with distress signals flying. Although the sea was very rough, a boat was lowered by the Earnford and Captain Pihlman and his crew of eight men were taken from the Yautsen. The latter vessel was bound from Philadelphia to Fernandina, Florida. A heavy gale prevailed for some hours on Wednesday, which carried away the vessel's masts. The pumps were out of order and the barkentine was making water fast and about to sink when the Earnford rescued the men.

A Newly-Married Couple Drowned.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 24.—While crossing the Assiniboine River here at 9 o'clock last night on ice which only formed Friday, Alderman Andrews and wife broke through and were drowned. The couple had only returned from their honeymoon

HARVARD YELLS.

Cambridge Will Have an Enthusiastic Crimson Jubilee To-Night.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 24.—"The first time in 15 years, and Cumnock did it," is the cry in Harvard to-day over Saturday's great victory at Springfield. Every one agrees that football has by this feat taken an impetus that will last and grow for years to come.

Everybody is congratulating everybody, and everybody is happy and hilarious. Great care and preparation had been taken, the material of the team seemed of the finest, and its discipline was perfect. If under all these favorable circumstances victory would not be won, it was the general opinion that it never could, and that defeat would strike a heavy blow at the interest taken in the game.

Captain Cumnock's unflagging zeal and labor are regarded as prime factors in the result, and to-night a testimonial jubilee will be given in his honor and Cambridge will go mad with the pent-up enthusiasm of fifteen years just uncorked. Most Harvard men think that Princeton jibes and innuendoes of the past year have been fully answered, and that the crimson's work in withdrawing from the triple league can no longer be considered a "baby act." There is some talk of a game with Princeton after the big Thanksgiving contest, but this is by the hot-headed and enthusiastic element, and will not materialize.

IS IT BLACKMAIL?

A Young Girl Prefers a Serious Charge Against a Priest.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The Rev. Theophilus Koztowski, pastor of the Church of the Assumption, No. 347 Amherst street, was brought before the grand jury of the Court of Oyer and Terminer at its last session on a charge of rape.

The complainant was Marie Miklas, a 16-year-old girl, who had been employed by the priest about eight months ago to take care of his rooms. The evidence adduced before the grand jury at that time was insufficient to indict him on the charge, and his case was thrown out.

Yesterday Koztowski was arrested on a charge of bastardy, preferred against him by the same complainant, and he was taken before Justice King, who adjourned the case until this afternoon. The attorney for the defense states that it is a case of blackmail, which will be fought to the last, and that Father Koztowski is entirely innocent.

TO DIE IN THE CHAIR.

Preparations Commenced for the Electrocution of Jugigo.

SING SING, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Warden Brush of Sing Sing Prison has begun work on the electrical appliances for the execution of Shibuya Jugigo, who has been sentenced to death during the week beginning Dec. 1. The appliances used in Kemmler's execution at Auburn will not be used, an improved dynamo and chair having been made.

The instruments of death will be placed in position in the death chamber during the week, and will be tested thoroughly by expert electricians. The United States Supreme Court will render judgment in Jugigo's case this week, and Warden Brush is of opinion that the decision of the Supreme Court of this State will be upheld.

Winter in Earnest Along the Hudson.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Winter weather now prevails along the upper Hudson Valley. Snow fell throughout the night and the ground is covered. At points throughout the Catskills it is from two to four inches deep. Ice has formed on interior ponds and skating begun. It is generally believed that winter has set in in earnest and navigation is being rushed through fear of a sudden closing up of the river and inland streams. The thermometer is hovering around zero.

A Woman Commits Suicide.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Mrs. Sarah F. Henssler, aged 55 years, the widow of Frederick W. Henssler, late professor of music in the New York Institution for the Blind, committed suicide during the morning by shooting. Melancholia superinduced by ill-health was the probable cause. Mrs. Henssler was the daughter of the late Prof. Marcus Catlin, of Hamilton College, at Clinton, N. Y., and was a classmate and intimate friend of ex-President Cleveland's sister.

Married to a Museum Freak.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 24.—Capt. Clark, the life saver of Atlantic City, was married here to Amelia Hill, the fat beauty at the museum on Ninth and Arch streets, Philadelphia. She selected her future husband from among a large number of applicants by letter, and Justice Kerswell tied the knot. Miss Hill is reputed to weigh 500 pounds.

The Manchester Martyrs Remembered.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The anniversary of the death of the Manchester martyrs was celebrated at Chickering Hall last night. Gen. James R. O'Beirne was the orator of the evening. A remark of his that it was the intention of the Irish people to win the fight either by moral or physical force was received with applause. The meeting was well attended.

THE SHORT SESSION

Congressmen Will Find Plenty of Work Next Week.

APPROPRIATION BILLS READY.

The Pension Measure Will be the Most Earnestly Debated.

A Strong Lobby on Its Way to Work for the Disfranchisement of the Mormons—Mr. Mills Arrives and Talks About the Speakership and His Twenty Years' Service in the House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Nearly every train arriving from the West brings to the Capital one or more members of the Fifty-first Congress, the last session of which will convene on Monday next. By the middle of this week the Capital City will have settled itself for the usual gaities and hustling which invariably accompany the short session.

Work sufficient to keep the respective Houses busily engaged seven hours each day until springtime has been mapped out by different statesmen who have been interviewed upon their arrival here. At the present writing no definite idea can be given as to what will engage the time of the session, beyond consideration of the several regular appropriation bills. The indications warrant the assertion that the Pension Appropriation bill will be the most earnestly debated measure, owing to the enormous proportions it is reaching.

There are apparently many Democrats in the House of Representatives who desire an extra session of the Fifty-second Congress, and believe that it is their policy to work to that end. Leading Republicans stand ready to encourage such a move on the part of their opponents, believing that its effect will result in great benefit to the Republican party at the next election.

The silver men are determined if possible to force through a free coinage bill. They are strongly impressed with their ability to accomplish the work in the Senate, where they will have the assistance of the new Senators from Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. There will not be sufficient strength, however, to carry such a bill over a Presidential veto, which is almost certain to follow its passage, although some of the strongest adherents to free coinage express the belief that the President will not antagonize such a measure after giving it mature consideration.

Representative Lodge of Massachusetts is of opinion that the House will certainly pass an apportionment bill, and that the Senate will complete the work of the majority by passing the Elections bill. Mr. Lodge also ventures the opinion that "if the Democrats gets an extra session next spring it will be the beginning of the end for them." He thinks Mr. Mills will win the Speakership contest. Many Republicans entertain this opinion.

OPPOSING THE MORMONS.

A Strong Lobby to Work for a Bill for Their Disfranchisement.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The announcement that a strong lobby is on its way to Washington with a view to secure the enactment of legislation which will lead to the disfranchisement of the Mormons, has created quite a commotion in political circles. There are two bills now pending in the respective Houses which propose to take the privileges of the franchise from any person aiding, abetting or countenancing polygamy, or who may be attached to any institution that does.

Friends of the Mormons hold that to pass either of these measures would be very unjust, as the Mormon Church has sincerely acknowledged allegiance to the laws of the United States.

It does not appear, however, that there will be any time for the consideration of such bills during this session.

Congressman Mills and the Speakership.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Congressman Mills, who arrived in Washington late last night, talked freely about the result of the late Congressional elections and about the action of the next Democratic House of Representatives. On the Speakership question Mr. Mills is somewhat reticent, merely remarking that he has determined to retire from public life at the close of the next Congress, and says that if he should be elected Speaker he would feel that his 20 years of service in the house had been rounded off with the highest possible honors; but if he fails he will not lose an hour's rest.

A Negro Riot.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 24.—A negro riot occurred at Bishopville, Sumter County, yesterday, caused by the arrest of a disorderly negro. Troops have been ordered there.

Charged to the Mafia.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The mysterious murder of Diego Polisano, an Italian living at No. 400 East 113th street, is charged to the secret society called La Mafia.

IS HE IN A TRANCE?

The Body of a Man Removed from the Cemetery When About to Be Buried.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Nov. 24.—The little village of Hammonton, about 12 miles from this place, has been thrown into excitement by signs of life appearing in the body of George W. Fay, one of the most prominent citizens, who, it was supposed, died last Tuesday evening.

About 10 or 12 days ago it was found that Mr. Fay was suffering with an abscess of the brain. Later on dropsy supervened, and Tuesday evening he was pronounced dead by the attending physicians. At the time of his death his limbs were badly swollen and his face discolored. Thursday morning members of his family were surprised and horrified to find that the swellings had almost entirely disappeared and a healthy life-look had come back to his face. His cheeks assumed a red color, and under his left ear a bright red spot appeared.

The physicians could give no cause for these strange appearances, and his family delayed the funeral until Friday. On that day, as no other signs of life had appeared, his family were induced to have the burial take place, and the body was carried to the cemetery for interment. The funeral sermon was preached and the final arrangements all completed, when the casket was opened for the friends and relatives to view the body. The face was so lifelike that the family refused to allow the burial, and insisted that the remains be taken back to the house. It was done and now the family anxiously awaits further developments.

Some of the most prominent physicians of the county and State have been called to see the body. Many are of the opinion that Fay is in a trance, from which he will recover.

TO TRY PROF. KOCH'S CURE.

A Pittsburg Newspaper Man to Test the Lymph To-Morrow.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 24.—This city will probably furnish the first subject for the trial of Dr. Koch's lymph in this country in the person of Thomas E. Hewitt, a well-known newspaper man. Mr. Hewitt has been suffering several years from tuberculosis, and the doctors pronounced his case hopeless a year ago.

He has been in correspondence with Dr. Hare of the Philadelphia Medical Journal, and Dr. Hare has agreed to try the cure on him as soon as it arrives. Dr. Hare is the man who had Prof. Koch's article on the use of the lymph cabled from Berlin, and was the first to order a quantity of the lymph for trial in this country.

Mr. Hewitt has just been notified by Dr. Hare to start for Philadelphia to-morrow, as he expects to receive the lymph on that day or Wednesday, and wants his patient there promptly.

PRINCETON AND YALE.

Harvard's Victory on Saturday Has Created Excitement in the Coming Game.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—With the approach of Thanksgiving Day the enthusiasm over the Yale-Princeton football game is nearing its climax. Now that the Yale-Harvard game is a thing of the past, all interest centres in the final match between Yale and Princeton at Eastern Park, Brooklyn.

Yale's defeat by Harvard on Saturday has made the Princeton boys confident of victory.

All indications point to a larger gathering than has ever before attended a football match in this country, but, nevertheless, it is promised that there will be less friction and confusion than has been the case in former years with smaller crowds. The committee in charge has been at work ever since the contract was signed with the two college teams to prepare ample accommodation for a crowd as large even as 35,000 persons.

Filemaker's Big Jump.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Filemaker jumped 7 feet 2½ inches at the Exposition building, breaking his Friday's record of 7 feet 1½ inches. D. H. Harris, his owner, is desirous that Moorehouse & Pepper match their mare Maud against Filemaker. Harris says he will match the old horse against their entire stable, including Roseberry, for $1,000 a side and two-thirds of the gate receipts at any place in the United States.

Two Boys Killed While Playing.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 24.—James and Thos. McDonough, aged 6 and 8 years, were killed by the caving-in of a sand bank on 19th street, opposite their home. The McDonoughs, in company with two other boys, were playing in a pit when the sand bank over the pit gave way and buried them beneath it. The McDonough boys were taken out dead while the other two escaped with slight injuries.

Insists that He is Dead.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 24.—John C. Farrell, ex-Superintendent of the Wilkesbarre Water Company, is afflicted with a peculiar mania. He has not eaten a morsel of food for two weeks, insisting that he is dead and does not require food. Mr. Farrell's health has been failing for a number of years. The physicians here are puzzled over the case.

Sudden Death of a Journalist.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—E. W. Fox, a well known business man and journalist, died in this city last evening, suddenly, of dropsy of the heart. Mr. Fox was born 62 years ago in Buffalo, N. Y. He went to St. Louis in 1850 as traveling salesman for the hardware house of Childs, Farr & Co. He became in time a half owner in the concern which under the firm name of Pratt & Fox soon built up the largest hardware business in the West.

Acton Won the Wrestling Match.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 24.—A wrestling match took place here between Joseph Acton and Evan Lewis for $1,000. The conditions of the match were that Lewis was obliged to throw his opponent twice in an hour, while Acton won if he gained a fall. Acton won.

SALISBURY'S PLANS

A Rumor that He is Ready to Dissolve Parliament.

PARNELL'S TROUBLE THE CAUSE

Conservative Organizations Urged to Improve Their Organizations.

The King of Holland Dead—Queen Emma at His Bedside at the Final Moment—Result in the Elections in Italy—Serious Fight in Ireland Between Police and People.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The Members of Parliament are gathering for the session of to-morrow, and almost nothing else is talked of than the predicament of the Liberals over Mr. Parnell's case.

Lord Salisbury has invited the leading peers who are members of the Government to meet and dine with him this evening, and Mr. W. H. Smith has extended a similar invitation to the Commoners who hold places in the Cabinet.

A rumor is current—and is credited at the Carleton Club and other Conservative centers—that Lord Salisbury, deeming the time opportune while the Parnell scandal is fresh in the minds of the people, has decided to dissolve Parliament in the spring. Advices urging Conservative associations throughout the country to improve their local organizations immediately were issued from the central office of the Conservative party.

Lord Salisbury attended a council at Windsor, when the Queen signed the speech from the throne, which is to be read on the opening of Parliament. Lord Salisbury afterward went to Hatfield House, his residence, accompanied by Mr. Balfour, the Chief Secretary for Ireland.

THE KING OF HOLLAND DEAD.

Queen Emma Was at His Bedside During the Monarch's Last Moments.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 24.—The King of Holland died at 6 a. m. His illness took a sudden turn for the worse the previous evening, symptoms of uræmia appearing.

Queen Emma was at once summoned and remained with her husband until his death. The King's last hours were peaceful, life ebbing quietly away.

Immediately upon the announcement of the sad event the palaces and the public buildings were closed, and notices were posted of the cancellation of all amusements. The Ministers were summoned and held a council at noon.

Queen Emma is very popular, and will undoubtedly be continued as Regent until her daughter attains her majority. The States General has been called to meet on December 8.

FOUGHT THE POLICE.

Irishmen Defy the Authorities and a Riot Ensues.

DUBLIN, Nov. 24.—The citizens of Enniscorthy defied the proclamation against meetings in memory of the Manchester martyrs and assembled with bands and banners to celebrate the anniversary.

The police ordered the people to disperse, and on the command being disregarded they charged upon the crowd with drawn batons. The people resisted and attacked the officers with stones and clubs, but the riot was finally quelled and the streets cleared.

Friends of Parnell Assault a Minister.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Mr. Bannin, rector of the Italian Church at Hatton Garden, took occasion in his sermon yesterday to denounce Mr. Parnell. In the midst of his diatribe several of the congregation arose and left the church. Others shouted to the rector: "Mind your own business and let politics alone." There was much confusion. While Mr. Bannin was leaving the church after service he was hustled by a crowd around the church and received several blows. He was finally escorted to his home by policemen.

The Suspected Nihilist Murderer.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The police are confident that Padlewski, the Nihilist suspected of the murder of General Seliverskoff in Paris, is in this city. It is not believed, however, in view of the recent decision of the Court of Queen's Bench in the case of the Swiss political murderer, Castioni, that Padlewski if arrested will be extradited, even if France or Russia should request such action on the part of the British Government.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 24.—The two days' session of the second annual conference of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, in the diocese of Connecticut, began in this city yesterday with a good attendance. Rev. Lindsay Baker, of St. Peter's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., delivered the sermon at St. John's Church in the morning. Mr. C. J. Wills, of St. George's Church, New York, taught a large Bible class at Christ Church Chapel in the afternoon. In the evening, at the several services at Christ Church, addresses were made by Messrs. Westervelt, Wills and Sturgis.

Will Settle World's Fair Troubles.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—All differences between the World's Columbian Commission and the World's Columbia Exposition Company will probably be settled to-day. After the joint conference committees, appointed to define the authority of the two branches makes its report, about the only thing left for this season is to settle the fate of the bureau system and then adjourn. It is not probable that any decision will be reached on the bureau plan before Wednesday night.

Fell Five Stories to Her Death.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 24.—Five-year-old Mamie Degnan fell from the fifth story of her home, at No. 56 Sussex street, and was instantly killed.

GOULD'S GREAT ALLIANCE.

The Gross Earnings of His Roads Last Year Were $140,000,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The magic hand of Jay Gould has completely changed the situation in Wall street, and that financier has done in the past two weeks probably what no other man in the world could have done. A week ago the stock market was in a state of panic over the news of the trouble of the Barings. Now everything is buoyant, with prices 5 to 20 points higher than a week ago.

In a brief space of time he has obtained control of several of the largest railroads in the country, and has undoubtedly formed the greatest railroad alliance in the world. The alliance includes the Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Atchison, Wabash, Texas Pacific, Missouri, Kansas & Texas, Richmond Terminal, and several other roads. They expect the Rock Island, Burlington & Alton Railroad to act with them. With this powerful combination, Gould would be in a position to dictate rates to any other railroad in the West or break that railroad which refuses to comply.

Gould's sway, with the Pacific Mail steamship line, will extend from the Atlantic coast to China; will include 25,000 miles of railroad lines, whose gross earnings last year aggregated the enormous sum of $140,000,000.

The meeting of the Western railway presidents will probably be held in a few days at the residence of J. Pierpont Morgan. The circular calling the meeting will probably be sent out to-day.

Changes in the Union Pacific Railway are expected to take place. Sidney Dillon will succeed Charles Francis Adams as president. The special meeting will be held probably on Wednesday at Boston. Director Millard left Omaha yesterday to attend the meeting. S. H. H. Clark, formerly general manager of the Union Pacific, and now manager of the Missouri Pacific, has been called from Omaha to New York by Jay Gould.

Omaha is very much disturbed over the prospect of Mr. Dillon becoming president of the Union Pacific, as the citizens fear that he will boom Council Bluffs, across the river, in which he is heavily interested.

The great car shops of the road are now at Omaha, but they may be changed to Council Bluffs. Omaha depends chiefly on the money expended by the Union Pacific.

SUCCI'S NINETEENTH DAY.

The Italian Faster Has Lost Twenty-four Pounds.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Giovanni Succi is beginning to have some trouble with his stomach, and his facial appearance indicates a greater change than at any time since he began his 45 days' fast.

This is Succi's 19th day. When he was weighed in the morning he registered 123 pounds, showing an aggregate loss since the first day of 24 pounds.

His temperature was 96, his pulse 72 and his grip pressure 110 pounds. This grip test is one of the most extraordinary features in connection with Succi's fast, for the grip of a man of average strength does not exceed 100 pounds.

Yesterday afternoon Succi took 22 drops of his elixir in two ounces of water, and 12 ounces of water in the evening. Dr. Harold Raymond regards him as a wonder.

The attendance was much larger yesterday and to-day and Manager Stair was kept busy talking about Succi in French, English, German and Italian.

Over 2,000 Coal Miners on Strike.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 24.—A special from Brazil, Ind., says that the strike of drivers and day men employed in the block coal mines continues. The number of strikers is increasing daily, while the closing of the mines is practically complete. The operators refuse the advance demanded and a complete shutdown is feared. Over 2,000 miners are idle.

Did Birchall Confess?

WOODSTOCK, Nov. 24.—It is reported that Birchall did make a full confession to the Rev. Mr. Wade, his spiritual adviser, and that it will be made public as soon as Mrs. Birchall leaves the country.

Archbishop Corrigan's Brother Dying.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 24.—The Rev. James H. Corrigan, pastor of St. Mary's Church, brother of Archbishop Corrigan, is dying at the parochial residence, No. 152 Race street. A consultation of physicians was held and they diagnosticated his disease as fatty degeneration of the heart.

Bequeathed $1,000,000.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 24.—The wife of Judge of Probate Morris B. Beardsley has been bequeathed $1,000,000 by an uncle who died in New York city a few days ago. Shortly before his death the uncle gave Judge Beardsley a check for $150,000.

Cameron Carries Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—The Republican delegation of the Legislature from this city held a caucus and voted to stand by Don Cameron. The only member-elect who did not attend was ex-Sheriff Leeds. This means 34 votes for Cameron for Senator.

The Poisoned Boarders Out of Danger.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—All the victims of the recent attempted poisoning at Mrs. Mackey's boarding house, No. 2956 Wabash avenue, are now out of danger. George Harris, the colored porter who is suspected of poisoning the food, is still held until the analysis is completed.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—For New England and eastern New York: Fair; slightly warmer; westerly winds.

For Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey: Fair; warmer; southwesterly winds.

For Western Pennsylvania and Western New York: Fair; warmer; winds becoming southwesterly.

If every reader could understand what a remedy for coughs and colds Hires' Cough Cure is, every family in this land would talk its praise It is destined, for this reason, to be the greatest household medicine in the world. It is pleasant and agreeable. Try it.

HYMENEAL.

Schlief—Johnson.

Jabob Schlief, of Plainfield, and Miss Kate Johnson, of Westfield, were married last Saturday evening by the Rev. J. K. Folwell, of the Westfield Baptist church. John Johnson, brother of the bride, was "best" man, and Miss Ellen Johnson, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid.

Among the friends and relatives present were: Mr. Schlief and Miss Schlief, father and sister of the groom; the bride's family; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hyslip, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, Mr. Swanford and nephew, of Westfield; Mr. and Mrs. Geo W. Field, of New York City; and a great many friends from Elizabeth and Plainfield.

The ceremony was a very pretty affair. The young couple received many valuable gifts. After the wedding supper the bride and groom started on their wedding tour amid showers of rice and with a host of good wishes.

Mr. Gilbert Neither Paved Front Street nor Elevated the Tracks.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:

Again your paper sets the people right. Mr. A. Gilbert was not a member of the Common Council in 1873, as stated by the Central Times. As to the improvement of Front street, between Peace street and Central avenue, that improvement was made at the request of a majority of the frontage on said street as required by our City Charter. The work was superintended by the Street Commissioner and paid for by the property owners on said street.

As to the railroad elevation, Mr. Gilbert did not compel the railroad to change the grade crossing. The Railroad Company through their President J. T. Johnston, frequently urged through the local press, and at public meetings, the importance of this measure. The railroad authorities needed no pressure in this direction from Mr. Gilbert or any other citizen. With the citizens and council it was only a question of grades and character of bridges. The whole matter was settled by the Council of 1873. A committee meeting was held at the Railroad office in Liberty street, New York, of which committee the writer was a member, at which a profile of grades and bridges was agreed upon, subject to the approval of the Common Council. The Council of 1873—of which Mr. Gilbert would be a part, but was not—proposed and settled the whole matter of grade crossings, bridges, sewers, and detail.

A COUNCILMAN OF 1873.

Richard Lindabury Likely to Succeed Prosecutor Wilson.

It is rumored at Elizabeth that Richard Lindabury, the lawyer who took such an active part in fighting the race tracks, and who was the assistant to Prosecutor Wilson, is to be substantially rewarded for his work by being appointed to the Prosecutorship. Mr. Lindabury went on the stump for Senator Marsh, and his forcible speeches aided materially in electing the Democratic candidates. It is alleged the powers that be have decided that Prosecutor Wilson, having had two terms, must retire. Mr. Lindabury is well known in this city, in the suburbs of which he spends a part of every Summer.

Penny-Ante Players Disciplined.

John Dady, Thomas Fahey, Henry Harriman and William Peterson, the men indicted for gambling in playing penny-ante at Plainfield, were arraigned in the County Court at Elizabeth Saturday, and had nothing to say concerning the charge. Judge McCormick imposed a fine of $1 on each. He said the court wished to impress on the defendants the fact that they were guilty of an offense which often deserved severe punishment. Playing penny-ante is a crime in New Jersey, and cannot be committed and go unpunished. In this instance the court was exceedingly lenient, but cautioned the men against a repetition of the offence.

In Washingtonville.

Some miscreant shot a valuable collie dog, belonging to Jasper Wilson. The dog was a pet of the family. Thoughtless persons shooting valuable property of others, may some day be called on to pay a bill for damages.

Mrs DeCamp, of Newark, spent Sunday with her friends, the Misses Spencer.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Beeching of Basking Ridge, are visiting their relatives in the Valley.

John Bicknell will spend Thanksgiving with friends in Brooklyn.

Inspecting the County Roads.

Seventeen members of the Board of Freeholders, including Director Hubbard and Mr. Vanderbeek of this city, made a tour of inspection of the new county roads, to-day. They started from Rahway in five carriages, dined at the City Hotel here, and finished their trip from Summit into Elizabeth. It is rumored that the contractors will have $50 deducted from their price for each day's delay in completion beyond the specified time. The Board expects to find five of the contracts completed to-day.

The Firemen to Choose Their Own Chief.

One of the arguments used among the firemen to persuade them to vote for Alexander Gilbert, is to the effect that if he is elected he will appoint this or that one Chief.

If Mr. Cutter is elected he will let the firemen choose their own Chief.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Rebecca Pound, of Central avenue, is seriously ill.

Mine host George Demler, of the Notch, is seriously ill.

J. E. Mosher, of 23 North avenue, has been appointed a Notary Public by Gov. Abbett.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lyman and family will be at home at 2 Washington avenue, hereafter.

On Thanksgiving eve in St. Mary's church, one of Plainfield's fair daughters will change her name.

Jasper G. Cadmus's condition is so much worse today that there is cause for fear that he will not rally.

Martin I. Cooley and family are occupying the Wm. McCutchen house on Rock View Terrace, North Plainfield.

Miss Alice Ashmead of New York was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. MacClymont, Washington avenue, yesterday.

Mrs. Howard Hummer, of West Fourth street, returned to her home last evening after a week's visit with relatives in Newark.

H. Tiffany Spencer, late a member of Holy Cross church choir in this city, has joined the choir of the Church of All Angels, New York.

A. E. Bushnell, of Maplewood cottage, East Second street, has rented his handsome home and he and his wife will live in New York this Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Gayle returned from their wedding tour on Friday evening, and took up their residence in their new home, 18 Vine street.

Elkahna Drake, of Newark, was in town to-day, adjusting some fire losses. He is well-known as an ardent worker in the Young Men's Christian Association.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will preach at the union services to be held by several of the local churches Thanksgiving day.

One of the English periodicals has issued as its Christmas supplement, a handsome lithograph entitled "The Queen of the Roses." The portrait is a striking likeness of a young lady of Washington Park.

Other papers in telling the story in Saturday's PRESS about the starting of a bank in Westfield by Charles L. Hyde, lead people to suppose the latter is Charles Hyde senior. This is not so, it is Charles L. Hyde the son who is at the head of the scheme.

For many of the interesting facts contained in the biographical sketch of Evangelist Mills published in another column, THE PRESS is indebted to The Christian Herald of New York. Through the courtesy of the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, editor, and Louis Klopsch, publisher, THE PRESS is enabled to make use of that journal's copyrighted biography.

The Union County Standard says: "We observe, with profound satisfaction, that Dr. Chauncey B. Ripley is about to open up for sale about one hundred acres of his Westfield possessions, heretofore not in the market. This we hope means a rapid development for the South side; and the Doctor can certainly be depended upon to dictate a class of improvements that will materially advance the welfare of Westfield from an artistic as well as a commercial point of view."

The Good Work Resumed.

After an interim of two weeks meetings were resumed in Reform Hall last evening. President Harper presided, Mr. Fountaine conducted the devotional services, and the music was led by Mr. King, with Miss Doremus as accompanist. Mr. Fountaine was the announced speaker, and founding his remarks on Bible truths, in a clear and convincing manner showed what incumbent duty was to both God and man. Mr. Fountaine in conclusion bore valiant testimony to the worth of the temperance cause, and deprecated the awful effects of intoxicating liquor here in Plainfield. His address evoked earnest attention. George M. Anglemire followed with a few very appropriate remarks.

President Harper gave notice that Thursday next being Thanksgiving the regular meeting in Reform Hall that evening would be suspended; also, that next Sunday evening Aaron M. Powell will be the speaker, subject—"The Temperance Outlook." The offering of the pledge drew some signers to the Secretary's table. With the doxology the meeting closed.

Fireman on Hand, but Not Needed.

The fire department had a run to Netherwood Heights yesterday afternoon, in response to a summons by telephone. A defective flue had set fire to the attic of Aaron L. Jimmerson's house on Leland avenue near Berkley, but buckets of water extinguished the flames before the firemen arrived. The damage was about $40. While the firemen were still in the neighborhood they were told that the handsome new residence on the hill where Broadway climbs up was in danger from the burning leaves which were blowing about from a fire in the woods, but again no stream from the engine was necessary, as all the fire was quenched when the men responded to the call.

Driven to Desperation.

The latest campaign lie is that Joseph A. Haynes, candidate for councilman from the first ward, is deaf and could not take part in the Council meetings for that reason. Such silly and contemptible warfare only harms those who make use of it.

A Dream of Fair Women.

Tennyson in his exquisite poem, dreams of a long procession of lovely women of ages past. This is all very well, but the laureate would have done the world a greater service if he had only told the women of the present how they could improve their health and enhance their charms. This he might easily have done by recommending the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Health is the best friend of beauty, and the innumerable ills to which women are peculiarly subject, its worst enemies. Long experience has proven that the health of womankind and the "Favorite Prescription" walk hand in hand, and are inseparable. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

A PREACHER OF WONDERFUL POWER.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning the Life and Labors of Evangelist B. Fay Mills.

Readers of this journal are already familiar with the wonderful seasons of blessing which have resulted from the labors of the Rev. B. Fay Mills, evangelist. In nearly every section of the country, in cities and country villages, in churches of no less than twenty-one different denominations, Mr. Mills has preached, and wherever he has gone the results have been the same. God has blessed the word preached, and many souls have been converted. It will be an especial gratification to Plainfield people, among whom Mr. Mills has just accomplished such wondrous results, to learn some details of the life of one whose labors God has so signally honored.

B. Fay Mills was born in 1857 in New Jersey, where his father, the Rev. Thornton A. Mills, D. D., was well-known and loved, not less for his philanthropic than for his ministerial labors. After a boyhood spent among the hills of Hunterdon, the embryo evangelist began his college career at Andover at the early age of sixteen, and then proceeded to Hamilton College, N. Y. Subsequently he studied at Lake Forest University, Ill., and was graduated from that institution with high honors. After pursuing a course of special theological study under some of the ablest theologians in the Presbyterian church, Mr. Mills was ordained at Cannon Falls, Minn., in 1878. While there he added to his pastoral labors some very arduous work in connection with the American Home Missionary Society.

During an extended evangelistic tour in the Black Hills, Dakota, Mr. Mills broke down under the strain, and came East to recuperate. He did not, however, discontinue labor, but preached at Greenwich and Champlain, N. Y. To the surprise of all, a revival of religion ensued, and there was a time of great blessing. Now thought of evangelistic work was induced in the mind of Mr. Mills by this movement. He accepted an invitation to the West Parish of Rutland, Vt., and settled there in 1883. He found there a deplorable state of dissension, and much that made the prospects of success very dark, but he labored on in love and faith, and had the joy of seeing harmony and brotherly love take the place of unchristian feeling. Three years of happy successful labor followed before there was an unmistakable call to evangelistic service.

In January, 1886, the pastors of Middlebury had been praying for a deeper spiritual work in their churches, and were led, by the reports they had heard of the happy results which had followed the work of Mr. Mills in Rutland, to invite him to hold special services in Middlebury. He accepted, and held meetings for two weeks, in which all the churches united. Over three hundred persons, including nearly all the students in the college, were led to Christ at those meetings. It was a blessed time for Middlebury, and the service of thanksgiving was a time of great enthusiasm. A call to North Adams shortly afterward had a similar result, and then Mr. Mills recognized that God had appointed him to this field of service. He accordingly resigned his pastorate in May, 1886, and from that time to this he has continuously labored in this deeply interesting, but arduous work.

The scenes of his labors have been many and varied. They began in Vermont, at Burlington, Brandon, and Vergennes. In New Jersey he has held services in Washington, Morristown, Montclair, Jersey City, New Brunswick and Plainfield. In March, 1888, he was invited by Dr. Theodore Cuyler to hold services in his church in Brooklyn; and though Dr. Cuyler had never before asked the help of any evangelist, he thanked God that he had been led to invite Mr. Mills, when he saw fully six hundred persons stand up and pledge themselves, in Christ's strength, henceforth to live for Him who had died for them. Dr. S. M. Hamilton, of the Scotch Presbyterian church in West Fourteenth street, New York, also has given manly testimony of a similar experience, owning that he had been prejudiced against special efforts of this kind, but that he was sincerely thankful for the results of the meetings Mr. Mills had conducted. Only recently Dr. Hamilton again spoke with thankfulness of the permanence of the good achieved by Mr. Mills's visit.

At Charlestown, Lowell, and Fall River, Mass., the results of Mr. Mills's services were still more remarkable. Among the converts were some whose conversion seemed the most improbable of all events. They came from infidel clubs, from saloons and gaming tables, and from the haunts of vice. Cold, worldly Christians, the hardest of all men to move, became zealous, and a deep, earnest movement went through society. At Fall River four hundred new converts met at the closing service to join in the way appointed of celebrating the Lord's death "till He come." Still more remarkable was the harvest at Jersey City Heights, where no less than 1,250 persons made a profession of faith in Christ at his two weeks' meetings.

One important feature of Mr. Mills's work is the spirit of brotherly love between churches of various denominations which seems to spring up under his labors. Minor differences are forgotten; and pastors and people are surprised to find how much they have in common, and how readily they can work together in Mr. Mills's meetings. In Worcester, Mass., thirty churches joined in the work; in Providence, R. I., fifty churches; in Indianapolis, Ind., twenty-three churches; in Springfield, Mass., (to which city Mr. Mills has paid four visits), thirty-four churches; and in Philadelphia (where he has been five times) fifty-four churches.

Remarkable incidents are related in connection with Mr. Mills's work. The Rev. William H. Belden, of Bridgeton, N. J., writing to a contemporary of the work in his city, mentions among others the case of "a young man who went in an unbelieving, scoffing spirit, but was broken down right in the prayer, and then and there gave his heart to the Lord; he became, and is now, a consistent member of one of the churches. A very wild young fellow, who was thoroughly linked in with boon companions, was won by the judicious personal approaches of the evangelist himself—certain other providential causes co-operating—and broke the circle of his set by an out-and-out surrender. A gay, giddy girl, who had resisted the most zealous efforts of pastor and friends, came to the Lord through Mr. Mills's preaching, and she and her mother and four sisters renounced the world together. A man who confessed he had not looked into a bible for five years yielded himself; his sincerity has been demonstrated by the thoroughgoing way in which he has mastered and cast behind him his love for tobacco. A good man's bad son—two such—are reclaimed, gladdening their fathers' hearts and filling the streets with delightful testimony to the Lord's work. It is all the Lord's doings, and it is marvelous in our eyes; we rejoice that He sent us His servant, whom He so greatly owns and blesses for His appointed work."

The domestic life of Mr. Mills is one of great happiness. He is a devoted husband and father, and his wife often feels it a great personal sacrifice to have him so frequently absent from home. His evangelistic meetings are as a rule held only in the late Fall, during the Winter, and in early Spring. The Summer he takes for rest; and then his four children, the youngest four years of age, are beside themselves with joy, because "papa is home again."

Some Results of the Revival.

Fifty-five people were admitted on confession of faith and probation, to membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, yesterday. The meetings were of great spiritual interest. The pastor, the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, preached appropriate sermons of much power. The total number of cards signed, during the Mills revival meetings, signifying a preference for the M. E. church, was 190. Of these, some were duplicates, and some were not genuinely meant, as was the case of a small percentage among all the churches. The actual number of new church members out of these signers will, however, be more than 100 for the Methodist. The number of card-signers in some of the other churches was as follows: Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, 170; First Baptist, 160; Trinity Reformed, 152; Park Avenue Baptist, 45. The entire number of card-signers was nearly 1,000; and many at the Mills meetings signified a desire and intention to lead a Christian life and professed thorough conversion, who did not sign cards.

How Much is Your Boy Worth?

The rooms of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union were filled at the 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Rev. J. C. Fernald, after the scripture lesson, struck the key-note with a decidedly temperance ring in it. One after another caught the refrain and sang forth their determination with God's help to "Rescue the perishing—Duty demands it."—the pledge was offered and four new names were added to the list of white ribbon workers.

The startling statement was made that the merchants of the city, engaged in legalized liquor-selling, need the boys to guarantee them support for future profit. "Could we save these boys" was said "and keep them from the liquor dealers clutch, these men would early look about for more profitable business. And whose boys are the liquor dealers of our country counting? Surely it will pay us to look into these things, reckon up the price high or low that is offered for these brightest and best of boys they are depending on."

Yet There's Work to Do.

(From the Somerville Gazette.)

The extraordinary success of the Mills Evangelistic meetings in Plainfield, by which about 2,000 persons were led to profess a better life within two weeks, and which seems to have been not a sensational but a deep and real movement, affecting the whole city, shows that even in this day, when in our large centres of population there is a vast amount of irreligion or indifference, Christianity rightly presented meets men's needs. It finds them uneasy and very destitute; it supplies them with faith, peace and infinite riches.

Another Men's Meeting To-Night.

One hundred and fifteen was the attendance at the Y. M. C. A. meeting, yesterday afternoon. A large number both testified and signified their desire to become Christians. No doubt, however, some of the latter had so expressed themselves during the Mills meetings. E. L. Suffern will lead the meeting to-night at eight o'clock in the Association Hall. All men interested are requested to be present and to bring some young man with them.

—Praise and Thanksgiving service to-night at eight o'clock, under the auspices of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church. Visitors are always welcome.

HOUSEHOLD BREVITIES.

—To fumigate a room, heat an iron shovel and drop vinegar on it. Have the doors and windows open.

—Among the new settlers in Oklahoma are a man and his wife, who are respectively seven feet seven inches and six feet in height.

—Date Pie.—One-half pound dates. Let them simmer in one pint of milk until soft. Strain, add two eggs and a little salt. Bake with under crust only. —Boston Globe.

—One of the most simple and effective antidotes for bee sting is to moisten a piece of washing soda and rub the stung part with it. If this is done at once it will remove the pain and prevent swelling.

—Devilled Oysters.—Drain large oysters from the liquor; cover them with vinegar, melted butter and a little cayenne and ground cloves; let them remain in this about half an hour; turn them occasionally; dip them into beaten egg and fine cracker crumbs, salted, and fry in deep, hot fat.—Boston Herald.

—Pickled Onions.—Take little onions, put into weak brine twenty-four hours, then drain. Take vinegar enough to cover them and pour over scalding hot, and leave twenty-four hours. Drain vinegar off and scald again. Season with a little sugar, a few whole cloves and black peppers.—Detroit Free Press.

—Angels' Food.—Dissolve one-half box of gelatine in one quart of milk; beat together the yelks of three eggs, one cup of sugar and the juice of one lemon; stir into the gelatine and milk, and let it just come to a boil; flavor with vanilla. When nearly cold, whip the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, and stir through the custard.—Household.

—Summer Pudding.—Butter a plain charlotte mold and line it with neat slices of bread; then fill it up with any kind of stewed fruit (currants and raspberries, plums and apples, or apples and blackberries, etc.). Lay a piece of crumb of bread on the top, cutting it to fit exactly (all crust must be removed from the bread used for this pudding), and stand the mold in a cool place till next day; then turn it out, and serve with custard or cream poured over it. Choose juicy, well-colored fruit, so as to completely saturate and color the bread.

—Tomato Pan Dowdy.—Eight large tomatoes, four crackers. Scald ripe tomatoes by dipping them in boiling water so that the skin will come off readily, put a layer of the tomatoes, sliced, into a pudding dish, sprinkle with salt and pepper and put some bits of butter among them, then a layer of powdered cracker, then tomato, and so on till the dish is full. Let the last layer be crackers and put some bits of butter on top. Bake in moderate oven until nicely browned. In winter canned tomatoes may be used.—Yankee Blade.

—Have you noticed that the perennial joke about the alleged deadly effects of the green cucumber isn't circulating as much this season as formerly? This is not because the green cucumber has reformed, for it is still doing business at the old stand, but because even the funny men are finding out the truth about the cucumber. There may be potential possibilities of death in it, as there are even in mush and milk; but, when eaten in the proper way, and at the proper time, it is a royal dish, and, instead of being deleterious, is one of the most healthful vegetables known.—N. Y. Tribune

Feminine Fads For New Words Make the Colonel Miserable.

"Do you ever read the society columns in our newspapers?" inquired the Colonel, as a stylishly-dressed lady swept out of the car. "I hear my wife reading them," replied the Major, who was sitting opposite.

"Well, that's what I mean," said the Colonel. "Naturally, a grown man with signs of beard on his face wouldn't be expected to devour that kind of thing. I hear my wife and girls reading it occasionally, and I have listened patiently and learned some interesting facts. A man can always learn something if he'll sit right still and listen. Now, I'll bet a hoss that none of you fellows know what that lady had on."

"She had on a bonnet for one thing," said the last passenger.

"Correct," said the Colonel. "What else?"

"Well," said the Major, reflectively, "she had on a dress."

"O, no," exclaimed the Colonel, "there's where you are wrong. That's what you miss by not educating yourself in the society business. The lady didn't have on a dress."

"What do you take me for?" asked the Major. "I'll take my oath the lady had on a dress, and a very pretty one, too."

"You are mistaken," said the Colonel, emphatically.

"Well, what did she have on?" the sad passenger inquired, in his mild way.

"A gown," remarked the Colonel. "It's funny, but there are no dresses any more. Frocks went out of fashion when I was a boy, and now if a woman hasn't got on a gown it is because she is wearing a morning or an evening toilet. But generally it is a gown—especially in Atlanta. When I hear my wife or the girls reading the papers it looks like to me that the whole face of the earth is covered with gowns—morning gowns, evening gowns and tea gowns. Thirty years ago a calico frock used to be good enough for my wife, but now she has to have gowns just like the girls. I don't blame her much. She ain't quite as frisky as the girls, but she's lots better looking."

"Well," said the Major, "I expect it's the same way at my house, but my wife is so old-fashioned in her ways, especially when it comes to making egg-bread and waffles, that she don't pester with those new-fangled things. A frock is still a frock to her, and she don't want any flounces and furbelows on it either."

"My opinion is," said the sad passenger, "that if the women call a dress a gown they know what they are about. When my wife says gown, gown it is. A man that isn't out biased can afford to let the women have all the satisfaction they can get out of calling a dress a gown."—Atlanta Constitution.

DRESS AND FASHION.

What an Observer Saw Among Gotham's Well-Dressed Women.

There is something new in beads and net in bodices and waists. These are made entirely of beads on a foundation of net.

Small flowers, dots or stars, are powdered over cuffs, collars, bands, ruffles and plastrons. They are button-holed in scallops of color and wrought in pink, grayish blue or red cotton.

Small faceted studs of steel or jet are used to thickly stud camel's-hair summer cloth. It is combined with silk and very pleasing effects are produced. Indias or bengalines are mostly used with spaced trimmings.

Ecru-colored French batiste leads in midsummer dress material. It is very expensive, selling at three dollars a yard, and is made of pure flax, with fine grenadine mesh. It presents an elegant and dainty background for embroidery. Flowers and leaves are most freely used in the designs.

A bride's dress of much beauty was a gown of rich pearl-white brocaded peau de soie. The overgarment was in the Egyptian style in front, falling from the shoulder to the foot of the skirt, so arranged as to show an under-robe of pearl-white surah silk, gracefully draped in the Grecian style, and caught up on the right side by a thick, handsomely worked metal girdle. The bottoms of the skirt, neck and sleeves were trimmed with exquisitely fine Oriental gold lace. The bodice at the back was princesse shape, without seams, and falling into a long, full, square train. A tulle veil, caught by a spray of orange blossoms, myrtle, and jessamine, completed the costume.

Early autumn tea dresses are already being made up in camel's-hair princesse finished with Greek draperies. The colors are poppy red, pale olive, rosewood, silver gray, and apricot.

Large silk handkerchiefs of plaid are gathered over the crowns of sailor hats. The ends are knotted to form the trimming. A bird completes the effect.

The peasant waist is very much worn and is laced. Very few waists are plain.

Gold garniture is in high favor. In combination with white it appears in every style of material. Gold-colored ribbons are used with white muslin, while gold embroideries are used on evening gowns of white faille or silk mull.

In summer underclothing light washing silks are prime favorites. After them come French nainsooks, lightweight linen, and soft-finished cambric.

White mull, made up over waists and skirts of elaborate embroidery, makes a midsummer gown of which any young lady may be proud.

Light-colored reefers make a pleasing contrast to dark shirts. The prettiest colors in these reefers are tan gray. Facings in terra-cotta or red silk are especially becoming.

Lace-striped surah silk is a novelty. So far it has appeared only in black. Stripes about half an inch wide are woven across the surface of the plain black silk. These stripes resemble coarse net or lace. This produces a rich effect.

A bonnet displayed at a leading milliner's is of ostrich feathers laid lightly together to form a brim. A few softly curling tips complete the pretty effect with an aigrette set in front.

White flannel suits are worn both morning and afternoon. The skirts are full round. For yachting and tennis blazer coats are added. Some have bright faces in red, tan or blue. Gold or silver buttons are used with the double-breasted, while the single-breasted are held together with white or colored silk cord. Those of pure white are fastened with pearl buttons of a large pattern.

Dust cloaks of surah are popular. Surah comes plaided, striped, checked, polka-dotted, chined, shot, flowered and in bright and lustrous armure effects. The checked, striped and plaided are the most used for these cloaks, which the ladies find of great service in keeping their dresses clean while traveling.—N. Y. Cor. Chicago News.

A Fine Snake Industry.

For years many natives have made a snug living out of the hunting and killing of cobras and other reptiles for which head-money was offered. It was a perilous occupation and many men lost their lives at it. But now an easier and simpler plan has been adopted, which is also more profitable. This is nothing less than cobra-farming. The cunning Hindoos caught a number of the snakes alive and imprisoned them in a carefully constructed pen, from which escape was impossible but in which the cobras would feel entirely at home. There the snakes increased and multiplied at an amazing rate. From time to time the snake-farmers would thin out their stock and get the bounties on a few dozen heads. The business was conducted just as systematically as poultry raising. About two hundred cobras were kept as breeders and the yield of marketable snakeheads was large. But the Government officials became suspicious because of the business-like way in which the heads were brought in and their investigations soon exposed the whole scheme and broke up the enterprise.—Calcutta Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

A Point Well Taken.

She—You must not let any other girl rest her head on your bosom.

He—Why, of course not!

She—No, it would interfere with vested rights, you know.—Munsey's Weekly.

—He—"Dear wife, I wish you would——" She—"Yes, to be sure! Want another button sewed on, I suppose." "Not that, dear, but——" "Then your coat's ripped or something of that sort." "No, I was about to say that I wish you'd go and select a sealskin sacque to suit your own fancy, but I've changed my mind about it."—Chicago Post.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

MOTHER CRANE.

How She Found Her Wayward Boy at Camp Freedom.

HEN all the women and most of the men had left Camp Freedom, Mrs. Hetty Crane stayed on. She had been the first woman to come up the steep and rocky trail leading to the desolate and forlorn little mining camp, and now it seemed probable that she would be the last to go down the rocky mountain slope, leaving the deserted little camp behind.

The miners who had remained in Camp Freedom still cherished the fond but delusive hope that the little camp would yet have a "regular boom." But the boom did not come. At no time were there any more than four or five hundred people in the camp and in the narrow and gloomy gulch below, and but one or two of these had "struck it rich." One of these fortunate men was Bryce Hale. His mine, the Day Star, was a few rods above Camp Freedom, and was the only one in the whole gulch that had developed into a paying mine. He gave employment to the twenty or twenty-five men who stayed in Camp Freedom when all the others, disgusted and discouraged, packed up their few poor possessions and went away to more promising fields, leaving their few cabins and abandoned claims behind, as silent witnesses of hopes unrealized and of fair dreams that come to naught.

Mrs. Hetty Crane, a small, tidy, smiling woman, who had passed the fortieth mile-stone of life, seemed to have come to Camp Freedom aimlessly and purposelessly, like other nomadic and unsettled elements of humanity who wander restlessly from place to place in search of they know not what.

Mrs. Crane, who wore faded and frayed widow's weeds, did not seem to have any definite object in view when she came riding up Camp Freedom's one narrow and crooked street on top of the stage coach at the close of a fair day in June.

Like most of the other new arrivals, she spent the first few days in "looking around," although one could see all there was to Camp Freedom in a very few moments.

She wandered up to the Day Star mine one day and introduced herself to Bryce Hale. He was the best known and most influential man in the camp, and Mrs. Crane said she thought he would be the best person to ask about her probable success if she should open a boarding house in Camp Freedom.

Now the Irish man cook who had charge of the kitchen of the long, low, log house in which Hale and most of his workmen boarded was a shiftless, inefficient fellow, whose cooking was fast ruining the digestion of Hale and his men, and, instead of advising Mrs. Crane to open a boarding house of her own, he advised that she take charge of his for the present.

After ten minutes' reflection, Mrs. Crane agreed to this proposition, and that night Hale and his men ate such a hearty supper as they had not eaten in the whole history of Camp Freedom.

Mrs. Crane was unanimously voted "a brick," and the men blessed the fates that had sent her to the camp.

The dreary and offensively dirty old cabin took on a new look before three days, and at the end of a week Mrs. Crane had transformed it into a marvel of neatness and cleanliness.

"I think that the moral welfare of men depends largely on their surroundings," she said to Bryce Hale, "and I don't intend that any of the men in this house shall have their moral tone lowered by living in dirt and eating food that would ruin the stomach and temper of a horse," to all of which Hale said "amen," for he was himself a lover of cleanliness and good living.

But Mrs. Crane was as silent as the Sphinx regarding herself, and at the end of six months Hale and his men knew no more about her than on the day she first rode into the camp.

They did not know from whence she came nor where she thought of going in time to come. She seemed to be a woman without a past and without a future. But she was not sullenly reticent. She was always smiling and cheerful, with ever a cheery word for the men and a heart full of sympathy and kindness when they were sick or when misfortune of any kind overtook them, so that in time, although some of the men were older than herself, all of them began to call her "Mother Crane."

"I TELL YE, THIS IS COMFORT."

They feared she would go when the other women in the camp began to go before the long, dreary winter set in, but she did not, and when November came she was the only woman left in the camp, and all the men had gone excepting those who worked in the Day Star mine.

The nearest town was ten miles away, and the men from Camp Freedom seldom visited it. When they did go they went in a body for the express purpose of having what Hi Sharp, the wildest spirit among them, called "a high old time." They went on Saturday, stayed all night, and came back Sunday afternoon, bringing with them the news and gossip their eager ears had heard while gone. They came home one wind and stormy Sunday night in December, exhausted with their long, stiff climb up the mountain side through the drifts that had formed during the day.

Mother Crane had, as usual, a pot of strong, fragrant coffee, and a piping hot supper waiting for them.

"I tell ye this is comfort," said Jack Hixon, as he stretched his long legs under the table and handed up his cup for a third cup of coffee. "I tell ye, Mother Crane," he said, "it does all of us fellers good to leave home and go down to Quartz City once in awhile, because we're allus so etarnally glad to git back again. I don't b'leeve there's a cabin in the mountains quite so comfortable as this cabin, and I know, by Judge, that they don't git no sich grub nowhere else as we git."

"That's so, Jack," said Clem Likes, "and we'll lynch the man what tries to take Mother Crane away from us by matrimony or by other means, that's what we will."

"Speakin' of lynchin'," said Jack, "I've an idee that young hold-up they've got in jail down there in Quartz City will hang 'fore daylight. He's the first one they've ever caught and the boys say they're goin' to make an eggsample of him, no matter if he ain't but twenty or twenty-one years old."

"Is he young as that?" asked another of the men. "Well, I'm blamed if they'd ort to hang him then, pore devil. Lemme see, his name's Peterson, ain't it?"

"He's been goin' by that name, but they've found letters on him that proves that he went by the name of Hugh Dayton back in the States, and—"

"What did you say his name was?" interrupted Mother Crane, rising from her seat at the head of the table and leaning eagerly forward with parted lips and pallid face.

"Hugh Dayton," repeated Jack Hixon.

"Hugh Dayton!" Mrs. Crane's voice sank to a whisper as she spoke the name. Her breath came in short, quick gasps. She grasped at the table for support and said again in a whisper:

"Hugh Dayton! And they're going to hang him you say—to hang him."

"Why, yes; that's the talk down in Quartz City."

"They shall not!" Mother Crane's voice was loud and clear and firm now.

"Boys," she went on, "listen to me. I have done what I could to make you happy and more comfortable in this dreary place, and you have proved your true and hearty friendship for me in many ways: prove it now. I know how strong and brave you are. Are you strong and brave enough to go back to Quartz City on such a night as this and bring Hugh Dayton back to me—his mother? I am his mother, my name is Martha Dayton, I have been searching for him for two years. He wrote me that he was coming to Camp Freedom, and I have stayed on and on to meet him. I did not know where else to go. It is four years since he left his home, a young and untried boy, ignorant of the world and its temptations. He drifted into Leadville, and I heard nothing from him for two years, until he wrote me he was coming here, and I came on to meet him and save him from the evil companions I feared he was with. Go and bring him to me now. He may be innocent of this crime; he may be guilty. But innocent or guilty, bring him to me, his mother. He is my son, my only child. Bring him to me."

"BOYS, LISTEN TO ME."

In ten minutes she was alone in the cabin, her head bowed on the table and her sobs and half-spoken, half-silent prayers the only sound that broke the silence of the little room.

It was almost daylight when the tramp of many feet was heard outside and Mother Crane opened wide the door and peered out into the darkness, her face ghastly in its pallor and her trembling lips refusing to cry out the one question she longed and yet dreaded to ask.

She could see the forms of the men as they approached over the snow, but she had eyes for but one form and one face. When within a few yards of the cabin the men halted, and one man alone came haltingly forward with bowed head and trembling limbs.

The mother heart of the waiting woman told her who it was, and she ran forward to meet him with a cry of "Hugh, my son, my son!"

They went slowly into the cabin, their arms around each other, and the men silently went away leaving them alone.

Camp Freedom is only a memory now to "Mother Crane" and her son. They looked their last on it when the morning after that sorrowful night came. They turned their tear-stained faces toward the far West of the Pacific slope and began life anew, lamenting the mistakes of the past and atoning for it by the good and true lives they led in the future, the mother, with no grievous sins of her own to atone for, helping her son to make atonement for his own.—Zenas Dane, in Drake's Magazine.

—"Five o'clock teas are a nuisance," remarked Nuwed, who always found company in his house when he got home from his office. "Five o'clock vexations would be a more appropriate name for them."

A Proverbially Careful Man.

Impecunious Dudely (to his cobbler)—Aw, me good fellaw, couldn't you lend me a dollah? I—aw—am embarwassed this evening, and I'd like to take a cab home, ye know.

Cobbler—Excuse me, sir, I haven't got but one dollar left, and of course, like every other cobbler, I must "stick to my last."—Munsey's Weekly.

Undoubtedly a Liar.

Witness (testifying)—Then he tried to detain me longer by asking me to drink with him. I replied: "I never drink, sah, and, besides, the train leaves in ten minutes and I am in a hurry to get home to Kentucky. I—"

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That pursuant to an Act entitled "An act concerning Corporations, approved April 7th, eighteen hundred and seventy-five," which supplement was approved May 16th, eighteen hundred and eighty-four; and the streets, lanes and highways of the City of Plainfield are hereby designated as the streets in which the Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, may place and maintain posts and poles to sustain the necessary wires and fixtures for the supply and distribution of electricity, for electric lights, heat or power, for the period of ten years from November first, eighteen hundred and ninety, and the manner of placing the same shall be as follows:

The said posts or poles shall be located, placed or erected within and adjacent to the curo line as shown by official maps of the city of Plainfield, including the points or places now occupied by the posts or poles of the said Plainfield Electric Light Company; and said posts or poles may also be placed or erected at any other points or places upon said streets, lanes or highways as may be indicated for that purpose by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield or some committee thereof authorized by the Common Council, and all poles hereafter erected shall be erected under the supervision of said Common Council, or its authorized committee and in accordance with the rules and ordinances of said city, and shall be located within eighteen inches of the curb line.

Section 2. That on the first day of November, nineteen-hundred, the rights and privileges hereby conferred upon or secured to the said Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, shall, at the option of the said inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, cease and determine, and said Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, shall upon request of the said inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by its Common Council, execute under the corporate seal of said Company and deliver to said inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, a surrender and release of all rights and privileges granted or secured by this ordinance, to carry out the true intent and meaning hereof. INDIANS PEACEFUL Friendly Redskins Trying to Restore Order.

THE SITUATION IS UNCHANGED.

Military Preparation for Some Big Movement Continues.

Gen. Brook Ready for an Outbreak—Bands of Indians on the Way to Join the Ghost Dancers—Gen. Miles Says He Has the Situation Within His Grasp—Buffalo Bill's Movements.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Several dispatches were received at the War Department during the morning from General Miles. Secretary Proctor discussed their contents with the President and General Schofield.

The dispatches stated that the situation at Standing Rock Agency is improving. The Indians have started, in considerable numbers, from Rosebud Agency to Pine Ridge Agency presumably to join in the ghost dances.

General Brook says he has sufficient troops to preserve the peace in case of an outbreak. Friendly Indians are coming to the Pine Ridge Agency and are doing much by their influence to quiet the turbulent and to restore order.

STILL DANCING.

The Great Army of Indians Around Pine Ridge Are Anxious.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Nov. 25.—The hostiles are still dancing on Medicine Root and at the mouth of Wounded Knee Creek, on White River. They say they will come to the agency when they get through dancing. It is a fact, however, that their chiefs are now here, but they have had no conference with General Brooke or Agent Royer, and it is not likely that they will have. They are liable to arrest.

No Water and Big Road stalked past the soldiers in their paint and eagle feathers. They refused to be interviewed, and after surveying the ground rode back to their people, whose village completely surrounds old Red Cloud's house. There are reports that Little Wound is here, but if he is he is keeping himself under cover.

The situation is no better and no worse than it was yesterday. Agent Royer made this statement: "The great army of Indians now here remain quiet and anxious. Beyond on the hills are the ghost dancers, left for the moment by their leaders, as defiant as ever. Meantime the military preparations for some big movement continues.

GEN. MILES' WARNING.

He Says God Help the Indian Who Fires the First Shot.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Telegrams were received all day from Western posts by General Miles, who directed the troops' movements. A larger force than has been mustered in the West since 1876-77 is now about Pine Ridge. The re-enforcements are sent on account of the advices received from General Brook, who is disposed to take a very serious view of the situation. The troops at every fort or army station in Missouri, Nebraska, Dakota, Minnesota, Montana, and Wyoming will be drawn upon, and other detachments of the army are under orders to hold themselves in readiness. Instructions are to prevent trouble, if possible, by persuading the Indians to return to the agency.

Gen. Miles said to-day: "Before I say a word as to the situation in the turbulent Indian country in the Northwest, let me say that I have no boy's play to deal with. I have the situation within my grasp. God help the first Indian who fires the first shot. I am in duty bound to protect lives and property, and as long as I am the head of this military department I propose to do my duty. There are many matters of an official nature which I cannot disclose to you, but woe be unto the first Indian who makes the first hostile demonstration.

Buffalo Bill in the Saddle.

OMAHA, Nov. 25.—Colonel Cody, better known as Buffalo Bill, arrived here this morning. He will proceed directly to Rushville, which is only twenty-one miles from Pine Ridge Agency. Colonel Cody, whose military office is General of the Nebraska State militia, has issued an order for the State troops to be ready to move at a moment's notice.

The Scare Subsiding.

PIERRE, S. D., Nov. 25.—This is ration day at the Cheyenne Agency and the Indians are congregating there in large numbers. The scare is subsiding. Indian Agent Norville, who has just returned from the Bad River country, says the Indians there are abandoning their dances and promise not to participate in them again.

Two Men Killed While Blasting.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Carlo Durot, aged 34, and Joseph Diego, aged 40, were killed, and Rafello Roata and Carmen Purod were seriously injured by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge at 63d street and 10th avenue, where they were engaged in blasting. One of the men had placed the cartridge too near the fire to heat it, and this caused the explosion.

An Amazing Story.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Oliver Oscutt's store in this place was burned and Alfred Griffin, a clerk, told an amazing story about three burglars, who bound him hand and foot, and then set fire to the place.

More Hat Factories Shut Down.

DANBURY, Conn., Nov. 25.—Several more large hat factories have shut down entirely owing to the lockout, and will not start up again until the difficulty is settled.

MRS. BIRCHALL DEPARTS.

She Will Never Believe that Her Husband Confessed to Any One.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 25.—Mrs. Birchall and her sister left for England last evening. They are accompanied to New York by Mr. MacMurchy, Mrs. Birchall's legal adviser.

They sail from New York to-morrow on the Majestic. A large crowd gathered at the depot to bid farewell to the young widow who has many warm sympathizers. Both ladies were dressed in deep mourning.

Mrs. Birchall refused to visit the grave while her husband's body is in the jail yard, but if the authorities will give it up she will return to Canada and have the remains interred in the cemetery.

The White Star Line furnished free transportation for the ladies from here to England. Mrs. Birchall still believes her husband was innocent of the actual killing of Benwell. She was greatly pained to hear that Rev. Mr. Wade had intimated that her husband had confessed to him, while to her he protested to the last that he was not guilty.

"I will never believe that Reggie confessed to anyone," she said, weeping bitterly. "He told me he was innocent, and more, he implored me to not place any reliance in what other people might say after he was dead. If he was guilty of that terrible crime I know he would have confessed it to me. I pressed him so to tell me all and he said he had."

SULLIVAN AT HOME.

The Pugilist-Actor Bows to a Large Audience in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—John L. Sullivan made his bow before a Boston audience last night for the first time since he stepped from the ring to the stage, and a rousing greeting was given him by an audience that completely filled the Howard Athenæum.

His acting made a good impression upon the audience. A big floral stand, bearing a pair of floral boxing gloves, was handed over the footlights, and in response to a call for a speech, the champion said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I thank you one and all for this demonstration of your approval on my first performance in my home, and I shall endeavor to merit it in the future as in the past."

ALL EXPECT A STRIKE.

A Secret Leaks Out that Excites Erie Railroad Employes.

HORNELLSVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 25.—All is excitement among the Erie employes here. It has leaked out that at the secret conference it was unanimously decided to strike if the demands were not allowed.

The men are finely organized and are prepared for a long struggle. They will not act precipitately, but will try in every way to settle their differences without resorting to a strike. The feeling at all points along the western division is that a strike cannot be averted, and the only question seems to be what hour it will be declared.

Terrible Duel in the Dark.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—William H. Pennington and Richard Corsey, both colored, quarreled last night. They finally came to blows, in the course of which the lamp in the room was overturned leaving the place in darkness. A terrible duel followed and when the police appeared upon the scene Pennington was found lying on the floor almost cut to pieces. He will die. One of Corsey's ears was severed from his head and he was otherwise cut and bruised. Razors were the weapons used during the terrible struggle in the dark.

Forger Smith's Quick Trial.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Albert H. Smith, broker, church deacon and forger, through whose recent fraudulent practices the firm of Mills, Robeson & Smith, brokers, were ruined, was placed on trial at 4:15 last evening and at exactly 5 o'clock the jury rendered a verdict of "guilty as charged in the indictment." It was probably the briefest trial ever held here. Judge Fitzgerald granted a stay of sentence until December 3. The maximum sentence under the law is 10 years' imprisonment.

Six Buildings Burned.

AKRON, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Fire started in a house about noon and owing to high wind and inadequate fire apparatus obtained such headway that six buildings with most of their contents were burned before the flames were checked. One building was torn down to prevent further spread of the fire. The loss is estimated at $27,000. One of the buildings destroyed was owned by Grover Cleveland.

POSTAL TELEGRAPHS

Mr. Wanamaker Ready to Inaugurate Reforms.

AN IMPORTANT ANNUAL REPORT

He Will Treat the Subject of Postal Banks at Length.

Mrs. Harrison Entertains Correspondents in the Blue Room—Few Congressmen Arrive—Senator Pugh's Chances for Reelection—A Report that Mr. Cleveland Has Changed His Coinage Views.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—It is an interesting report which Postmaster General Wanamaker will soon lay before the country touching the Post Office Department and its several ramifications. The more important of Mr. Wanamaker's recommendations are those which deal with the subjects of postal telegraph, postal savings banks, one cent postage, and what, for want of a better term, is known as "sea offices," on shipboard.

Mr. Wanamaker's position regarding a postal telegraph is well known. It is a deep rooted conviction with him that such a system would be of much greater benefit to the American people than to leave the control of the telegraph service in the hands of a practical monopoly. Many sided as this question is the Postmaster General has, he says, studied it from every point of view. His report will show that he has fully considered the arguments that have been made against it and that he believes he has successfully overthrown them all.

Upon the subject of postal savings banks the Postmaster-General will also treat at length. His report will show the adoption of such auxiliaries to be useful in several ways. Their establishment in small outlying communities where savings banks do not exist will be in the first place an encouragement to thrift and economy. Many millions of dollars will thus be saved annually that are now, in the absence of proper protection, needlessly wasted. In the next place, vast sums of money in the aggregate that are hoarded from year to year in cupboards, stockings and other improvised storehouses, will be drawn from their hiding places and added to the circulating medium of the country—a circumstance not to be lightly regarded when the scarcity of money per capita is taken into consideration.

IN THE BLUE ROOM.

The Washington Correspondents Inspect the Marvel of Beauty.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Mrs. Harrison invited the Washington correspondents to inspect the new blue room at the White House. It is a marvel of beauty. It has been refurnished and redecorated after designs suggested by the first lady in the land. The silk tapestry which adorns the walls was manufactured in Paterson, N. J., and nearly every bit of furniture is the product of American workmanship. The President said today that he thought the apartment the handsomest in America.

Few Congressmen at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The arrivals of members of the two Houses of Congress have been so few that it is possible that there will be less than a quorum in each when Congress is called to order on Monday next. This is particularly true of the House of Representatives. It is quite certain that the Republicans in that body will not be able to muster a quorum. The prospect is that very little business will be transacted before the holidays except the preliminary committee work on the necessary appropriation bills.

Bought a Private Graveyard.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Dr. Carraher, the physician of the poor of East Washington, recently bought a suburban building lot near Washington. When he examined his property he found that he had purchased a family graveyard and he was inclined to repudiate the bargain; but when the surviving relatives of those who are buried in the graveyard found that it had changed hands, they made the owner an offer for the property and it will probably pass from his hands at a good profit.

No Interstate Legislation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Senator Cullom, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, says that he thinks no interstate commerce legislation will be accomplished during the coming short session of Congress. The Senator thinks the Election bill will be taken up, Murderer Jugigo Must Die.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The United States Supreme Court decides against Jugigo. He must die by electrocution. The Court held that so far as Federal questions were concerned the case did not differ from that of Kemmler's.

Received by the President.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Judge Cedarcrantz, Supreme Judge of Samoa, was received by the President at the Executive Mansion.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

DEATH OF AUGUST BELMONT.

He Was Prominent in Finance, Politics and Gentlemanly Sports.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The death of August Belmont, the great banker, was a surprise, as few knew of his illness. He died from pneumonia, contracted by cold at the Horse Show.

Mr. Belmont's wife, three sons and a daughter survive him.

Few men in Wall Street have shown the varied abilities, the strong individuality, the pluck and the resources that Mr. Belmont long displayed.

Not only in finance, but in politics Mr. Belmont has been a conspicuous figure. He was a delegate to the Democratic convention of 1860 and from that year until 1872 was Chairman of the National Democratic Committee.

He took great pride in the American turf and for 20 years he was president of the American Jockey Club, and he has long been a prominent member of the Union and other clubs in New York.

Mr. Belmont was a liberal patron of art and music, and his collection of paintings is one of the finest in the city. He has taken much interest in politics.

The funeral services will be held at the Church of the Ascension on Saturday, after which the body will be taken to Newport for interment.

TESTING THE CURE.

A Doctor Practicing on a Man Who Had Given Up All Hope of Life.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 25.—Dr. Fritz Baum, of this city, received from Berlin some of Dr. Koch's alleged life-giving virus, and yesterday inoculated S. A. Austin, of Kansas City, Kan., a man in an advanced stage of consumption who had given up all hope of life. The case is being watched with a great deal of interest by the medical fraternity here.

Dr. Baum made the first injection of the lymph under the shoulder blade of Austin. The amount was a half drachm. The effects were almost immediate. The circulation was better, and in a few minutes the cough decreased and the expectoration of the patient was much easier. Later in the day he found Mr. Austin much improved in health and administered another half drachm. The same good effects were noticed, and circulation was increased and breathing became easier and the cough continued diminishing. Dr. Baum had not seen the patient to-day, but he has been reported as improving. Another injection will be admistered this evening.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

A Brutal Husband Shoots His Wife and Blows Out His Own Brains.

BUTLER, Pa., Nov. 25.—An unhappy marriage was ended in a double tragedy at Glade Run last evening. For more than 25 years Barney Brell and his wife have lived together and the history of their married life has been one of unceasing quarrels, which usually ended in Brell shamefully beating his wife.

Last evening one of their quarrels ended by Brell shooting his wife and then blowing out his own brains with a revolver. Mrs. Brell is still living but cannot recover. Brell was a blacksmith about 50 years of age and has always borne a bad reputation.

Evacuation Day.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—To-day, the anniversary of Evacuation Day, was celebrated in a more appropriate and elaborate manner than has been done since the Centennial celebration of 1883. A prominent feature of the day was the march of the Old Guard under Major George W. McLean. In their march they were joined at the Battery by Battery K, First United States Artillery, which is stationed at Fort Hamilton. A salute was fired, after which the march was continued to the City Hall, where the troops were reviewed.

Father Ignatius' License Revoked.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 25.—Bishop Clarke has issued the following revocation of the license given to Father Ignatius, the Anglican monk: "I hereby revoke the license given the Rev. J. Legester Ligne, to officiate in the churches of the diocese of Rhode Island, inasmuch as this license was given under a misapprehension of his position in the Church of England, and without an intelligent understanding of his practices and doctrines."

Money for the Envoys.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Nov. 25.—T. P. O'Connor, M. P., addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting at the Odd Fellows Hall last night. Mr. Harrington was not present owing to his train being delayed. About $2,000 was raised and Mr. O'Connor expressed his thanks to the people for their generosity. A. C. Houghton presided. Previous to the meeting there was a large torchlight procession of Irish societies.

Two Brothers Drowned.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 25.—Two brothers, Sammy and Addie Weller, were drowned in Moody Pond, Saranac Lake, during the morning. The youngest, aged 19, went on the pond to skate against the wishes of his brother. Sammy sat by the window and saw his brother break through the ice. Rushing to his rescue he reached over to seize hold of him but the ice gave way and both were drowned.

A Wife Murderer Convicted.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—D. Loppy was last night convicted of the murder of his wife, which occurred on July 4th last. He will be sentenced on Friday. Loppy, who was a worthless fellow, picked a quarrel with his wife, which culminated in his seizing a pair of scissors and stabbing her in the breast. Loppy's defence was that she took her own life.

Plenty of Snow and Ice.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 25.—The canals are frozen over and considerable floating ice is visible in the river. In Northern New York and New England the cold is intense, several places marking below zero. In the Helderberg Mountains and vicinity a fall of 16 inches of snow is reported.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH

It is Read To-Day at the Opening of Parliament.

FORECAST OF COMING MEASURES

Some Danger of Disorderly Scenes in the House of Commons.

Irishmen Will Resent Any Derogatory Reference to Parnell—The Irish Leader Will Temporarily Retire—Gladstone Received With Cheers—All Holland in Mourning for the Dead Monarch.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The usual scenes were witnessed to-day when Parliament opened. There was an immense crowd in the House of Commons, and of course all were anxious to see if Mr. Parnell would take his place with the Irish members.

The Nationalists, however, came in without their leader, and the report spread quickly that at a meeting of the Home Rulers in the morning, Mr. Parnell announced his retirement from the leadership of the Irish party. The report, however, is not confirmed at this hour, but it is generally believed.

Mr. Gladstone was enthusiastically cheered by the Liberals and was kept busy bowing to the congratulations of his friends on his fine appearance.

Mr. Balfour received warm applause from the Conservatives. Little comment was made on the address from the throne.

There is some danger of disorderly scenes in the House of Commons if any reference is made to Mr. Parnell's position. The Irish members are very much excited and say they will keenly resent any reference to their leader, and if any allusions are made they will be taken advantage of as occasion for retaliatory charges against others.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

Four Main Items Comprise the Ministerial Legislative Programme.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Ministerial legislative programme, as set forth in the Queen's speech to-day, comprise four main items: The Irish Land Purchase bill, the Tithe bill, Scottish private bills and the Commission bill.

After the customary reference to the friendly relations of England with foreign nations, the Queen alludes to the negotiations with Portugal in regard to the latter's claims in Africa, and with Italy in regard to East Africa, as not yet brought to a successful conclusion.

She hopes that the negotiations which are progressing with France concerning the Newfoundland fisheries will soon lead to a satisfactory settlement. The papers connected with this matter will soon be laid before Parliament.

Her Majesty regrets to announce that a potato famine is threatened in the West of Ireland, and trusts that measures will be taken to mitigate distress.

Bills will be introduced in regard to Irish land purchase, tithes, assisted education in Scotland, extension of local government in England, and, if the work of the session permits, local government in Ireland.

HOLLAND IN MOURNING.

The King's Death Regarded as the End of the House of Orange.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Amsterdam advices state that the whole city is a scene of mourning for the death of the late King. Such a display of loyalty has not been witnessed in Europe for many years. The people seem to be mourning the dynasty rather than the individual, as they regard the King's death as the end of the House of Orange, to which Holland has for centuries been deeply attached.

Queen Emma is at the castle of Loo with her daughter Wilhelmine and the remains of her husband. Her own health is in a frail condition, owing to the assiduity with which she has nursed the King. Wilhelmine, who becomes Queen under her mother's regency, is a delicate child, but not sick at present.

Throughout Holland the evidence of mourning is as striking as in the capital city. Queen Victoria has sent a dispatch of condolence to Queen Emma, and a similar message has been received from Queen Christina, of Spain.

Epidemic of Influenza.

PESTH, Nov. 25.—An epidemic of influenza prevails at Fuenfkirchen, Hungary. One thousand persons in the place are suffering from the disease. The medical officer has summoned a conference of the doctors to determine what course to follow. Many cases of the disease resemble typhus fever, while others are attended with a copius hemorrhage from the intestines.

267 Barrels of Gold.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—Two hundred and sixty-seven barrels of gold, worth altogether thirty million marks ($6,500,000), passed through Koenigsberg from St. Petersburg on the way to London. The money was packed in three cars, and was attended by a military escort.

An M. P. Killed in a Railroad Wreck.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Hon. William C. Beckett, Member of the House of Commons for the Bassetlaw division of Nottinghamshire, was killed in a railroad accident at Wimborne-Minster in Dorsetshire during the morning.

Brickmakers Fail.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 25.—Pierce & Beeson, brickmakers, have failed. Their liabilities are between $50,000 and $60,000 and their assets about the same.

A NOBLE TRIBUTE.

Gettysburg to Receive Its Crowning Glory in the Shape of a Monument.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Nov. 25.—There now seems a probability that the already splendidly marked field of Gettysburg will receive its crowning glory in the shape of a splendid monument to General Meade and his corps commanders.

At the recent meeting of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, in Pittsburg, the subject of erecting at Gettysburg a monument to General Meade and his corps commanders was discussed by Governor Beaver, Colonel Nicholson, of the State Commission on Gettysburg monuments; General Caldwell and other prominent members of the State Commandery, and a plan which has been under consideration for a long time will undoubtedly be brought before the Legislatures of Pennsylvania and other States.

Of late both the Loyal Legion and Grand Army have given the matter a good deal of attention, and, in fact, at the late meeting of the legion a communication was received from a Grand Army post asking the co-operation of the legion in pressing upon the next Legislature the importance of making an appropriation for a Meade statue.

It is now proposed to erect to Meade and his corps commanders, Reynolds, Hancock, Sickles, Sykes, Sedgwick, Howard, Slocum and Pleasanton, a joint monument which will be such a work of art as can be seen nowhere else in the country. The only mounted figure will be that of Meade, the commander of the army. The corps commanders, on foot, will be grouped about the commander.

The plan has the hearty approval, among many others, of Gov. Beaver and Col. Nicholson, the former of whom was in Hancock's corps, and the latter of whom in later years was the particular military confident of Gen. Hancock.

Those who have met him here are unanimous in saying "Come, Colonel, and join Plainfield's Four Hundred."

Won't Kill His Relatives This Month.

Charles Manning, a colored man, raised such a row at the home of his sister-in-law on East Third street, last night, that the people in the house had to send for the police. Manning had threatened to annihilate all his relatives, and seemed ready to carry his threat into execution when two blue-coats appeared and placed him under arrest. This morning City Judge Codington sent him to the county jail for thirty days.

HYMENEAL.

Howell—French.

The wedding of Miss Nettie Lee French, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore French, to Edward Howell, took place at the First Baptist church in this city at twelve o'clock noon, to-day. Admission to the church was by card only, but the invited guests entirely filled the floor of the edifice. The organ front was almost wholly concealed by the graceful floral decorations. The pulpit was a mass of beautiful chrysanthemums, white and gold, and palms, begonias, and other growths of green. The bride wore a traveling costume of brown, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the church. The ushers were Elston French, Charles French, and friends of the groom from out of town. The bride is a former school-mate of Frances Folsom Cleveland, wife of the ex President. The groom is favorably known in financial circles, and at present has charge of an important civil engineering contract at Little Falls, on the Passaic. The present home of the happy couple will be at Morristown.

Bennett—Wadams.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season occurred at St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church, corner of High and Market streets, Newark, Thursday evening, November 6, when the Rev. Hannibal Goodwin, assisted by the Rev. Millige Walker, united in marriage Miss Sarah Jane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wadams, of Newark, to Eden Boice Bennett, of Plainfield. The bride wore a costume of heavy white silk handsomely trimmed with duchesse lace, made en-train, and carried a large bouquet of roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Bessie Davies, of New York. Thomas Wadams, Jr., brother of the bride, acted as "best man," and the ushers were Frank Brabson, James Sisserson, Dr. Charles Smith, of Clinton, N. J., and Wm. Wadams. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett after a brief wedding trip have taken up their residence on Duer street, North Plainfield. The groom is a brother of P. H. Bennett, manager for R. W. Rice & Co.

Gillespie—Carpenter.

At the home of the bride, 51 Westervelt avenue, took place at five o'clock yesterday afternoon, the marriage of Miss Eda Augusta Carpenter and George Augustus Gillespie. The Rev. Mr. Schenck, of the Trinity Reformed church, officiated. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The bride's father, Aaron F. Carpenter, was present, and returned again to his business interests in Virginia, to-day. The presents were profuse. The groom is connected with his father in the undertaking business at Bound Brook.

The Rumored Suicide of a Ghastly Joker.

One of Plainfield's funny men some time ago played a practical joke on a local tradesman by having a bogus message sent to the merchant, telling him of the death of his brother in another city, and by this fictitious news succeeded in closing up the store of the tradesman for the day, and in causing much anxiety and trouble and wasted grief. The merchant bided his time, and Saturday night, after months of patient waiting, started a story in circulation that the practical joker had committed suicide. So successfully did he engineer the rumor that Sunday morning all his horrified friends were discussing the shocking details of one of the biggest sensations they had ever known. The funny man is still actively engaged in angrily denying that he is n't a victim of unrequited love and has n't taken laudanum, and is n't dead.

Attendance and Contributions Increased.

One of the results of the Mills meetings is seen in the larger attendance at the Sabbath schools and the young people's prayer meetings. Last Friday evening the attendance at the Young People's League of the First Baptist church was twice the usual number. Over fifty took part, and forty-one handed in their names for membership. The attendance and contributions of the Sabbath school last Sunday were the largest in many years.

Thanksgiving Day.

Thursday next being Thanksgiving Day, and a legal holiday, no paper will be issued from this office. Among other causes for thankfulness, the people's victory at the polls on November 4, should not be forgotten, as its results give promise of a redution of the present exorbitant taxes that press so heavily on the poor man, and of the restoration of an era of plenty to all persons of limited means.

One Way to Ruin Shade Trees.

Property-owners who have given telegraph linemen permission to climb their trees to fasten supporting wires from telegraph poles to the sturdy monarchs of the streets, now mournfully survey the wounded bark of the trees, punctured by sharp steel spurs, and wonder if the resultant sap-bleeding will never stop, and how many such assaults a tree could stand before dying.

Hissed One of the Best Actors.

During the intermission previous to the last act of "Hands Aeross the Sea," last night, the principal actors of the play passed in review before the curtain and were vociferously applauded. The villain, however, was such an excellent one, that a number of misguided people entirely lost sight of his good acting, and loudly hissed him for his bad part.

LAYING THE CORNER-STONE.

Plainfield's Seventh-Day Baptists Progressing in the Erection of a Handsome New Church Edifice.

The corner-stone of the new Seventh-Day Baptist church, at Central avenue and Fifth street, was laid with impressive ceremonies, this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The ceremonies were not as extensive as it was at first intended they should be. The rapid approach of cold weather induced the officers of the church to curtail the out-of-door exercises. In-door services pertinent to the occasion will be held next Sabbath morning.

An announcement by Clerk J. D. Spicer, of the articles contained in the copper box inclosed by th corner-stone, opened this afternoon's exercises.

The following were included in the enumeration: A parchment paper containing the names of the church officers and members; a platinum paper bearing portraits of the pastors who at different times have had charge of the church, including the Rev. J. H. Cochran, the Rev. Jas Bailey, the Rev. Dr. T. R. Williams, the Rev. A. R. Cornwall, the Rev. Dr. D. E. Maxson, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis; also portraits of R. Dunham, A. D. Titsworth, I. D. Titsworth, Randolph Dunn, Isaac S. Dunn, D. B. Rogers, Clark Rogers, B. D. Randolph, T. H. Tomlinson, J. D. Spicer, Thos. F. Randolph, N. H. Randolph, F. S. Wells; also portraits of Building Committee; copies of Seventh-Day Baptist publications, the Plainfield newspapers, the New York Tribune; the earliest copies of minutes of the Seventh-Day Baptist church; and a picture of a group attending the golden wedding of the Rev. James Bailey, at Milton, Wisconsin, October 14, 1890.

Remarks by the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis followed, after which Dr. Lewis, as pastor of the church, placed the stone in its place. The consecrating prayer closed the ceremonies.

May Electrify the Crescent City.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the County Clerk of Union County by the New Jersey Company, which begins business with a capital of $100,000. The incorporators and stockholders are Frederick A. Sawyer o Garden City, L. I., Jacob B, Belheimer of New York, William H. Clark, Theodore F. Levengood, and James F. Dane of Elizabeth, Dane owns most of the stock. The company is formed chiefly for the purpose of supplying electricity to street railways, but will also engage in mining operations. It may be the company that will some day operate an electric street railway in Plainfield, and is said to be considering the advisability of opening up veins of copper in the mountains back of the borough.

A Silver Rainbow in the Sky at Night.

The bright stretch of tin which curves along the edge of the roof of the new Coward building on Park avenue on the side facing the City Hotel, was mistaken, last night, as it gleamed in the moonlight against the sky overhead, for a heavenly phenomenon, and a young woman exclaimed to her escort, "Oh, see the silver rainbow!"

—Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Paul will appear at Amphion Hall, Nov. 27, in their beautiful comedy drama in three acts and a prologue, entitled "Lucky Ranch." The scenes are laid in California. Mr. and Mrs. Paul come highly endorsed by the press; and as they are playing to popular prices we bespeak for them full houses throughout their engagement.

A Dream of Fair Women.

Tennyson in his exquisite poem, dreams of a long procession of lovely women of ages past. This is all very well, but the laureate would have done the world a greater service if he had only told the women of the present how they could improve their health and enhance their charms. This he might easily have done by recommending the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Health is the best friend of beauty, and the innumerable ills to which women are peculiarly subject, its worst enemies. Long experience has proven that the health of womankind and the "Favorite Prescription" walk hand in hand, and are inseparable. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Fear a Strike of 10,000 Men.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Nov. 25.—The Knights of Labor officials and Manager Lynch of the Frick Coke Company failed to agree on the one-third shut down trouble. A notice was served on the company threatening a strike in six days if the matter is not settled. The leaders fear a strike of 10,000 men. The 650 miners at the mammoth plant are still out.

Foreign Swindlers Sent Home.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Simon and Julius Krojanker, who were arrested on their arrival here from England some time ago on a demand by the German Government, were delivered over to the officers of the Servia to be returned to their native country. They are wanted for swindling banks in Germany out of 150,000 francs.

Thurman President of the Association.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 25.—At the afternoon session of the American Association, President Zach Phelps, who had been given a complimentary re-election, insisted on his resignation being accepted. Hon. A. W. Thurman, of Columbus, Ohio, was then elected president.

Fifteen Liquor Dealers Arrested.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 25.—Fifteen wholesale liquor dealers of the 1st and 2d Wards have been arrested charged with selling liquor without a license. Ten gave bail in the sum of $1,000 each for a hearing before a police magistrate to-morrow.

Senator Pugh Lacks Nine Votes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A dispatch from Montgomery, Ala., says the Democratic Senatorial caucus adjourned at 10 o'clock last night after taking the 25th ballot which resulted as follows: Pugh, 54; Seay, 25; Kolb, 32; Watts, 7. On the 24th ballot Pugh lacked seven votes of a majority. The opposition forces combined against him and forced an adjournment leaving Pugh within nine votes of a nomination.

Mr. Cleveland's Coinage Views.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The report is circulated here that ex-President Cleveland has become a convert to the double standard coinage theory and that he wrote a letter to Senator Vest some time ago, which the Missouri Senator showed to some of his colleagues, admitting that he had been wrong in his view of the currency question and that he was ready to announce his conversion.

For seven or eight years my wife has been troubled with some kind of kidney trouble. She tried many different remedies but all in vain. She continued to grow worse. Last fall I induced her to try the F. E. C. Remedy, and before using one bottle she began to improve, and now, after using six bottles, she is entirely cured. I have recommended it to many and it has benefitted in every case heard from.

DISCUSSING A CITY ALMSHOUSE.

Members of the State Charities Aid Association Meet in Plainfield and Commend Warden Dodd's Management of the Elizabeth Jail.

A meeting of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association was held Nov. 10, in the Y. M. C. A. parlor. The Rev. F. Marion McAllister occupied the chair in the absence of Dr. Edward Kempshall, the President. The good attendance and interest were very satisfactory, especially since it was the first meeting of the society held in Plainfield.

As has been before stated, the design of this society is to consider the great problems that relate to the criminal and dependent classes of society, and to put in practical execution the best methods for dealing with these classes and diminishing their number. When it is remembered that on an average every thirtieth family of this State has a member either in the asylum, the almshouse, or the cell, it is time to give heed to so pressing a problem. Mrs. Benj. Williamson, Secretary of the State Association, urged the importance of the adoption of the cumulative system, by which a person committed several times to jail for intemperance and other offences for short terms, shall receive a sentence for a term of years. Mrs. Williamson strongly urged employment for the inmates of our jails and prisons, as that was a most important factor in the reformation of criminals. Mrs. Bonnell referred to the detention of children in the almshouse as a sore evil, the difficulty in the way of removal being that there is no place provided by the State where they may be cared for.

There seems to be a great necessity for industrial schools in the State to meet this need. Major Pangborn, of Jersey City, as a member of the Ways and Means Committee of the State Association, presented the financial needs and urged a more generous support. An earnest appeal was made by the Rev. Mr. McAllister, chaplain of the Elizabeth jail, for books and magazines for distribution in that institution. Good reading matter for this purpose may be sent to Mrs. A. N. Kimble, corner of Rahway avenue and Union street, Elizabeth; she will attend to its proper distribution.

It is a pleasure to be able to record the excellent condition and management of the Elizabeth jail, employment for the inmates being the one thing needed to make it a model institution of its kind A subject which should be very near the hearts of residents of Plainfield is the erection of an almshouse with a small farm attached. This matter was discussed, some favoring a county and others a city almshouse. The question may sometimes be asked, by persons who have not given the matter careful thought, why our present system of caring for the poor is not satisfactory. This is best answered by quoting the words of Mrs. Josephine Shaw Lunde, a deep student of philanthropic work, from an address delivered recently in Baltimore before the National Conference of Charities and Correction. "Public relief"—she says—"should be in-door relief, inside the doors of an institution, where cure and education should be the primary objects aimed at: cure of disease, moral, mental and physical, and education in self-control and self-dependence." The next meeting of this Society will be held in Elizabeth in January.

Free Amateur Theatricals in the Gallery.

Two gentlemen of color, anxious to divert the attention of a distracted audience during the playing of the Music Hall orchestra between the acts of "Hands Across the Sea," last night, gave a realistic performance of their own, to the howling delight of the people around them, in the gallery. Their gestures and vociferations, as they stood up and enacted their little part, showed a thorough acquaintance of the dramatic art, and developed an intensely interesting plot hinging on the possession of an unreserved seat. So sympathetic were the auditors that when the exciting dialogue was reaching a climax and the populace were shouting "Fut up dat razor!" "Drop dat gun!" a groan of disappointment ran through the house as blue-coated Stevenson R. Hope appeared with a club and escorted the heavy villain of the cast to a remote and quiet spot. The theatre-lovers said "they was satisfied that the evenings in Music Hall would never be dull and uninteresting so long as the local amateur gents and ladifrends of the gallery could help it," and everybody, speaking of "the pleasant time had by all," said "they did hope that at an early date they could have another enjoyable affair like that." And the band played.

Not a Comet, Only a Brilliant Glow of Copper.

The new copper wires that have been stretched along the tallest telegraph poles in town, along East Fourth street and Broadway, are so highly burnished that in the sunlight they give a brilliant lustre, and the moonlight of these beautifully clear nights falls on them in such a manner, and produces such a glow overhead, that at a distance of a block or two one thinks he has discovered either a comet without a nucleus, or some other heavenly wonder, in the sky above the roof of The Crescent.

If every reader could understand what a remedy for coughs and colds Hires' Cough Cure is, every family in this land would talk its praise It is destined, for this reason, to be the greatest household medicine in the world. It is pleasant and agreeable. Try it.

KOSSUTH AND HIS SISTER.

Hungary's Royal Greeting to a Famous Plainfield Woman.

The following are extracts from a letter received by a lady of this city, from her friend, Mme. Louise Kossuth Ruttkay, Kossuth's sister, whose old home still stands on East Front street.

"I will commence with the causes involving my long silence. I told you in my last about my intended voyage to Hungary, the motives of which were serious enough to take the risk of such a long voyage in the unsettled state of health in which I was, and also to undergo its necessary expenses. One of my friends came to accompany me home. I stood the voyage remarkably well. I really think that from the moment I entered my native land my heart throbbed differently.

"A new era opened in my life on my arrival. Though I have enjoyed, in all the different circumstances of my life, the good-will of my fellow-men, to the sympathy for myself was added the love and veneration for my brother. These two influences manifested themselves by ovations of an astonishing grandeur. I will try to give you a true picture of them, though it would be easier to describe them in a pamphlet than in the narrow bounds of a letter.

"My first visit was to my father's grave, which is cared for by a friend of ours. As the train stooped, I found hundreds of people waiting for me; young ladies dressed in white handed me beautiful flowers; the people pressed around me bidding me welcome; the 'Squire of the village made a speech, asserting the allegience of the people of Hungary to our family; I was escorted in triumph to the mansion of a friend, where a banquet was given next day. The house was thronged with visitors during the few days I staid there.

"My second visit was at a considerable distance from Buda-Pesth, and there the inhabitants of these villages were assembled to meet me. At the station they came with banners and a load of flowers, and two of the 'Squires made speeches. Fifty young peasants in their national dress, with the national colors flying in one hand, accompanied me from the station, at two kilometers' distance, under triumphal arches, on swift Hungarian horses, to the mansion of my friend, where another crowd was awaiting me, and a Catholic priest, standing in a tribune, addressed to me a patriotic speech. Young children presented me with flowers, reciting touching words of joy and affection with which their little hearts welcomed me. I have a large photograph of this reception, and I would gladly send it to you, my friend, but it is so large, and cannot be folded; perhaps some occasion will offer when it can go to you in some traveler's trunk. Fifteen such receptions was I honored with by my countrymen.

"What a curious history our life was! If there were not so much of the dramatic in it I should call it a farce de la premier ordre. To have lived three months among ovations befitting the most illustrious person and then to return to see my poor brother, who is eighty-eight years old, bending over his writing seven or eight hours a day to earn his daily bread! My heart aches for him when I hear him sigh and wish for rest.

"I think I must have mentioned to you in some of my letters of the failure of some banks that involved my brother in pecuniary difficulty. He had put his hard-earned modest capital in some shares that have fallen to a nominal value. Though not entirely lost, they may not for many years bring a dividend, and it was with the consciousness that want was staring in our faces that I went to Hungary. Since then my brother, by writing very hard, has finished the fourth volume of his memoirs, and it is now in the hands of the publisher. Subscriptions have commenced, and it is to be hoped the result will keep want from our door."

Official Ballot Privileges for Prohibitionists.

The official returns of the late election show that the Prohibitionists, whose total vote in the State was increased about 2,000, will be entitled to official ballots in six counties, and in the following ten Assembly districts, by virtue of percentage: Both districts of Hunterdon, Gloucester, Cape May, both districts of Cumberland, First district of Warren, Third district of Morris, First district of Middlesex, and Third district of Monmouth. At the late election only seven districts and four counties had an official vote by virtue of percentage. Gloucester and Morris are the county accessions.

Elizabeth Behind on the Seasons, Too.

(From the Elizabeth Journal.)

Snow is reported in several different sections of the United States, and the Plainfield papers chronicle the intensely interesting fact that a horse fell down on one of the icy streets of that growing "Colorado of the East"; but as yet Winter has not sent any of his discomfort to Elizabeth. It has been a little cold, but not more so than is seasonable, and as a whole the weather has been as fine as has ever been known in November.

How They Swim in Somerville.

The West End Athletic Association of Somerville is to have a ball with patronesses and other frills just like city folks. Invitations have been sent to some of the members of the Plainfield Crescent League. In the envelope, however, is a card to the effect that each gentleman who attends will be assessed $2.50.

TORTURED BY ANTS.

Terrible Punishment Inflicted on Prisoners in Macedonia.

A special correspondent of the London Daily News at Uskub, Macedonia (who has got the largest prison in the province, by the statement of his dragoman that he was a European hunting for antiquities), writes that the Kurschumla contains 149 prison cells and 1,811 prisoners. The time of detention varies from one to ten years. "I do not believe," he says, "that any prisoner has ever outlived the fifth year of imprisonment in these loathsome dark cells. The prison officials admitted that very few prisoners lived to the end of their time. In a cell certainly not larger than two and a half yards square and about the same height, between fifteen and twenty prisoners are confined. They are allowed half an hour's ride in the court yard once in the day.

"The prisoners are not only panting for air, but suffering from want of food. They receive absolutely nothing but bread and water, even if their sentence be for life. If their friends send them money they are allowed to buy meat twice a week; but the prison officials brutally cheat them out of three-fourths of what is sent to them. The greater number of the prisoners are naked from head to foot, with heavy iron rings and chains on their wrists and ankles. As I passed some of the cells, after looking through the loop-holes in the doors, the prisoners within pushed through a stick to which a little leather bag was attached. I placed a franc piece in each, but I had my doubts as to whether the greedy guard would not take the money away from them. The cells in the underground prisons, where the worst offenders expiate their crimes, are, however, far more horrible than those I have described. Here every ray of light is excluded.

"In utter darkness the unhappy wretches lie chained to the reeking floor of the cell. They are totally unable to change their position, and are released from their chains for two hours each day, lest death should afford them an escape from this inferno. The official who conducted me told me with a cynical smile how this class of offenders is brought to confess. Hands and feet are bound together and the man is placed at a pillar, to which his head is fastened. The victim is thus absolutely unable to move. There is always a stock of large ants kept ready in little boxes, and of these about fifty are placed upon the body of the poor wretch. The torture he endures from the bites of these insects seldom fails to make him confess, no matter whether guilty or innocent. Upon others the same effect is produced by chaining them to the pavement of the courtyard and exposing them for a whole day to the scorching rays of the sun, without the power of moving a limb."

WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

Thrilling Adventure of a Swiss Guide in an Alpine Crevasse.

The following account of the escape of Christian Linda, a Lauterbrunnen guide, is sent by a correspondent at Murren:

"Linda, having accompanied a gentleman as second guide over the Tschingel glacier, was dismissed at the village of Ried, his services being no longer required. He left Ried on Sunday at daybreak alone, with the object of returning to Lauterbrunnen. He crossed the Petersgrat, and, instead of taking the route of the Tschingel Pass, he chose the shorter one across the glacier between the Mutthorn and the Tschingelhorn, where he fell into a crevasse about seven or eight a. m. on Sunday. On Wednesday morning—that is seventy-two hours later—a gentleman spending the summer here, in ascending the Tschingelhorn with Fritz Graf of Lauterbrunnen as guide, passed the spot where Linda was engulfed, and noticing an ice axe on the edge of the crevasse, peered down and saw Linda at the bottom. A rope was let down, which Linda was fortunately able to secure round his waist. With difficulty he was raised to the mouth of the crevasse, but, being a very heavy man, his two rescuers were not powerful enough to bring him to the surface. It was then decided that the gentleman should remain on the glacier while Graf obtained the necessary tackle and assistance to rescue the ice-entombed man. These were obtained at the Steinberg hut, or chalet, and when Linda was hauled up he was found to be nearly dead. He was carried to the Steinberg hut, and was removed to the hospital at Interlaken, his recovery being doubtful.

"During the seventy-two hours Linda was in the crevasse he had no food for he was so tightly jammed between the walls of ice he could not get at the provisions he carried in a bag on his back. He was, however, able to lick the ice with his tongue. It is estimated that he was found at a depth of fifty feet. No one will be surprised to hear that his hands and feet are terrible frost-bitten; the marvel is that, situated as he was for so many hours without food to sustain animal heat, he was not frozen to death. Again, it is remarkable that the rescuers should have passed over not only the exact spot where Linda fell in, but just in time to save him. Linda is fifty-three years of age."—London Times.

Doctors Differ.

Hurled Over the Falls.

A man was roxing a boat above the Great Falls in the smooth and placid water. All unconscious of his danger, he allowed himself to drift with the current, which was at first slight, gradually increasing in momentum, until at last his rapid whirling and the sullen roar of the cataract brought to his suddenly awakened senses a full realization of his awful peril—too late. He was seen in the boat for a moment poised upon the brink of the abyss, and then he was plunged headlong to destruction.

What a lesson can be drawn from this terrible fate through heedless carelessness! Too often we neglect a little weakness, a slight nervousness, the tired brain, sleepless and restless nights, from which we wake unrefreshed, a weary, languid feeling, headache, confusion of mind, dullness, loss of memory, strange sensations, &c., not knowing that nervous and mental prostration, with that most awful fate—insanity—will result. How slow we are to understand the danger in the cold feet and limbs, the slight numbness, trembling, pricking sensation, or extreme weariness of the limbs, and realize that sure paralysis will follow on neglect. We often disregard the weakness and languor of nervous debility and malaria, the disorders of the stomach, liver or kidneys, until chronic, if not fatal, disease fastens upon our systems.

Do not, like the careless boatman above the falls, allow yourselves to drift placidly on the river of life towards sure destruction. It is sheerest folly to do so, for all these nervous and physical ailments can be perfectly and completely cured by that wonderful remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, which can be purchased at any druggist's for $1.00 per bottle. The remedy is purely vegetable and harmless, and will be found the greatest brain, nerve and blood invigorant in the world.

Cure After Nervous Exhaustion from Overwork.

From constant worry over business matters I suffered from loss of sleep, and became so nervous that I was entirely unfitted for my business, and was compelled to give it up. In fact, I feared insanity. Seeing Dr. Greene's Nervura spoken of so highly, I obtained a bottle and began its use. The effect was almost magical. I could again sleep; mental composure, appetite and strength returned. Six bottles of this remedy cured me, and I have remained well to this date. I have recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura to many of my friends and neighbors, and have yet to learn of a failure to obtain good results. S. W. NOURSE, Hudson, Mass.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case. 9 27 eod

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

THE BROTHER'S RETURN.

How the Western Gold Fields Helped a Music Teacher.

IN A CHAMBER on the top floor of a genteel city boarding house, a young girl of scarcely twenty sat at a table in a despondent mood. Before her was a brief note in a lady's hand, which she listlessly took up, and read as follows:

"Mrs. Morgan regrets that she will have no further occupation for Miss Tremaine's services in the musical instruction of her children, having been advised by a friend to secure the services of Prof. Mantoni."

This was certainly intelligible enough. Probably Mrs. Morgan did not know when she wrote this note that in withdrawing her patronage from the young girl she was depriving her of three-fourths of her income. So it was, however, and it was with a deep sinking of the heart that Margaret Tremaine read the four lines recorded above.

Margaret, as of course the reader will understand, was a music teacher. She had been reared in affluence, but the sudden failure of her father, and his almost immediate death, had thrown her upon her own resources for support. She had a brother two years older, who had gone to California in search of employment. It was in the early days of the history of that State. Communication with the interior parts of the Pacific State was not as frequent as at present, and she had received only occasional letters. Thus far he had not met with great success in digging gold.

Through the influence of Margaret's friends she had obtained several music scholars at once, enough to defray her expenses, moderate as they had now become. She had taken an attic room in Mrs. Prescott's boarding-house, and had thus far been able to meet her weekly bills.

But this period of comparative prosperity came at length to an end. One family in which she had several scholars went abroad, and these were, of course, lost to her. Another pupil was sent to a boarding-school. Thus her income was reduced one-half. And now, to crown all, Mrs. Morgan withdrew her patronage, and the young girl was left with almost no income at all.

What to do she did not know.

She might advertise for pupils, but would she get them? Besides she could not spare the money which the advertisement would cost. With a feeling of dismay she saw utter destitution staring her in the face.

It was at this moment that a knock was heard at the door.

"Come in," she said.

Raising her head as the door was opened, she recognized in the caller one of Mrs. Prescott's servants.

"Well, Bridget, what's wanted?" she said.

"Mrs. Prescott would like to see you in the parlor, miss."

"Now?"

"Yes, miss, if you please."

"Very well; say that I will come down immediately."

Before chronicling the interview about to take place, it may be necessary to say that Mrs. Prescott was a widow with an only daughter, not remarkable for good looks. This young lady had for several months enjoyed the attentions of a young man who was popularly supposed to be engaged to her. But to the great indignation of the landlady and her daughter, the young man, Colton by name, had recently shown some indications of transferring his attentions to Miss Tremaine. That young lady was quite innocent of encouraging him, but nevertheless was

"EXCUSE ME COMING IN WITH MY BONNET ON."

unjustly suspected of so doing by Mrs. Prescott and her daughter. The former determined, therefore, on one pretext or another to get rid of her troublesome boarder, hoping that the young man, when no longer exposed to her fascinations, would return to his first love.

It was with a view to this that Margaret was now summoned to the parlor. Although she had noticed the increasing coolness of Mrs. and Miss Prescott, she did not suspect the cause.

As the time for giving a lesson to her sole remaining pupil was near at hand, she went down with her bonnet on.

"Excuse me coming in with my bonnet on, Mrs. Prescott," she said, as she entered the parlor; "but I am obliged almost immediately to go out to give a lesson, and did so to save the trouble of going upstairs again."

"Certainly," said the landlady, stiffly.

"Bridget said you wished to speak to me," said Margaret, finding that the landlady hesitated.

"Yes;" said the landlady, clearing her throat, "I wished to ask if you can conveniently obtain another boarding place?"

"Indeed!" said Margaret, in utter surprise, looking from the mother to the daughter.

"Yes;" said Mrs. Prescott. "I think I shall want your room."

"May I ask," said Margaret, after a pause, "whether it is any personal objection to myself that leads to your request?"

Mrs. Prescott was about to answer in the negative, when her daughter, no longer able to keep her indignation with her supposed rival within bounds, interrupted her bitterly.

"Yes, there is a reason and a good one, Miss Tremaine. Ma and I have noticed your underhand attempts to attract Mr. Colton's attention, when you knew well enough that he was engaged to me, or the same thing. We don't want any such sly people in the house, so now you know it."

"Indeed, Miss Prescott," said Margaret, quietly, for the accusation seemed so absurd that it did not disturb her, "you are under a strange delusion. I certainly have no wish to appropriate Mr. Colton's attentions. As to his wants I have nothing to say. I shall be glad to congratulate you on your engagement with him."

"Oh! no doubt," said the young lady, sneeringly. "This comes very well after you have done all you could to prevent it."

"Do you believe this ridiculous story, Mrs. Prescott?" demanded Margaret, turning to the landlady.

"I did not intend to have my daughter mention it," said Mrs. Prescott, coldly, "but it certainly has seemed to me that you have flirted with Mr. Colton as I should not wish a daughter of mine to flirt."

"Then you are very much mistaken," said the young girl, indignantly. "Mr. Colton may be a very estimable young man, but he has no attractions for me!

"THIS IS MY BROTHER HENRY."

I have not the least desire to attract him. He has been polite to me on one or two occasions, but it was by no desire of mine. If I could marry him tomorrow I should not wish to do so."

"Sour grapes!" said Miss Prescott, sneering.

"You may call it what you please," said Margaret, "but it is the truth. However, since you have suspected me so unjustly, I have no wish to stay here any longer. I will leave to-morrow, when my week is up."

Just then the painful thought flashed upon Margaret that she had not money enough left even to pay a week's board, and it was hardly to be supposed under the circumstances that Mrs. Prescott would be very indulgent. She turned pale and sick at heart, and stood for a moment in the middle of the floor, when the door was thrown open and a young man entered, ushered by Bridget. While the ladies were so occupied in the discussion of this matter, the bell had rung without either being aware of it.

Scarcely had Margaret lifted her eyes, and suffered them to rest on the stranger, than with a cry of joy she rushed into his arms, exclaiming: "Dear Henry, how glad I am to see you."

The landlady and her daughter stood by in statue-like surprise, not recognizing the visitor. Miss Prescott, who did not know of the relationship, had her eyes demurely cast down, shocked by Margaret's indelicacy in thus openly embracing a young man.

When the greeting was over, Margaret turned to Mrs. Prescott with an explanation.

"This is my brother Henry," said she, unexpectedly returned from California."

"I wish I hadn't made a fuss," thought Miss Prescott. "He's much better looking than Mr. Colton."

"Indeed!" said the landlady, more graciously, for she perceived that he was well dressed. "I think I can find a room for your brother if he would like to be near you."

"You forget," said Margaret, significantly, "that I am going away to-morrow."

"Oh," said the landlady, coughing, "there's no need of that." I have no doubt we have been mistaken, and—"

"I think it will be best," said Margaret, decisively, and the landlady and her daughter, considerably crestfallen, retired, leaving brother and sister alone.

"Congratulate me, Margaret," said he, when the landlady had withdrawn. "I do not return empty-handed. Two months before leaving California I stumbled upon a monster nugget, which with my claim I sold for twenty thousand dollars. I have come back to embark in my father's old business on this capital; and you, Margaret, shall look after my household, until you have one of your own. You must give up your music scholars."

"That will be easily done," said Margaret, smiling, "since all but one have given me up."

"Have you suffered from poverty?" asked the brother, anxiously.

"No, Henry, but I should, but for your opportune return."

Margaret was soon installed as mistress of a pretty little establishment. But in less than a year she found some one who needed her more than her brother, and changed her name from Miss to Mrs. Henry spared her the more readily, as there was a young lady who was already to take her place at the head of the table. It was not Miss Prescott, however. That young lady is still unmarried, the faithless Mr. Colton having transferred his affections elsewhere.—The Ice Blade.

HEIGHT OF WAVES.

The Highest Measurements Are From Forty-four to Forty-eight Feet.

All sorts of nonsense has been written about waves "mountain high." The truth is that when a ship is plunging down the back of one wave and is at the same time heeled over till her rail is close to the water, the next wave looks as if it would sweep completely over the vessel and therefore appears as big as a mountain. Lieutenant Qualtrough says: "We find reports of heights of 100 feet from hollow to crest, but no verified measurement exists of a height half as great at this. The highest reliable measurements are from 44 to 48 feet—in itself a very remarkable height. Waves having a greater height than thirty feet are not often encountered." The height of wind waves is governed by what is called the "fetch." That means their distance from the place where their formation begins. Thomas Stevenson, author of "Lighthouse Illumination," and father of the well-known writer of our day, Robert Louis Stevenson, gives the following formula as applicable when the fetch is not less than six sea miles: "The height of the wave in feet is equal to 1.5 multiplied by the square root of the fetch in nautical miles." Let us suppose that in a gale of wind the waves began to form 400 miles from the ship you are on. The square root of 400 is 20, which multiplied by 1.5 gives 30 feet as the height of the waves around the ship.

Now, it is well known that in every storm there are occasionally groups of three or four waves considerably larger than the others. Captain Lecky is of the opinion that these are caused by the increased force of the wind in the squalls which are a feature of every big blow. Now, waves travel at a rate which is the result of their size. Waves 200 feet long from hollow to hollow travel about 19 knots per hour; those of 400 feet in length make 27 knots, and those of 600 feet rush forward irresistibly at 32 knots. Let us suppose, now, a wave 400 feet in length and 38 or 40 feet high rushing along at 27 knots. It overtakes a slower wave making about 20 knots, with a height of 25 feet and a length of 200. The two seas become one, forming at the moment of their union an enormous wave. Just at that moment they meet one of these steamers called "ocean grayhounds," which, as every one knows, never slacken speed unless it is absolutely necessary for safety. She is butting into the storm at the rate of say eight knots an hour. She runs plump against a great wall of water which seems to rise suddenly out of the general tumult, rushing at her with a height of 45 feet or more and a speed of over 30 miles per hour. There is a fearful crash forward, accompanied by a deluge, and as the tons of water roll off the forecastle deck, it is found that damage has been done, and the officers on watch enter in the log the interesting fact that the steamer has been struck by a "tidal wave."—W. J. Henderson, in St. Nicholas.

AN EXPENSIVE PASTIME.

What It Costs to Cruise in a Yacht For a Season of Five Months.

One anthority in a position to know states that for a season of five months a steam launch forty to fifty feet in length imposes an outlay of $2,500; a steamer from seventy-five to 100 feet in length will cost $10,000, and one slightly larger, with flush decks, not less than $11,000. In the big steamers, with crews varying from thirty to fifty men, the monthly expenditure varies from $6,000 to $12,000; and in two yachts of this kind described by another writer, who gave the details, the annual cost was figured at $150,000 each; and in an isolated instance, where a steamer made the voyage around the world, the expense for the five months' cruise was said to have been something over $50,000. Leaving those extreme cases, and taking as a fair basis belonging to the class which includes vessels measuring from seventy-five to 100 feet, we get the following fixed charges: Monthly wages, fireman, cook, steward, three deck hands, engineer and pilot, $380; coal, $200; repairs, deck stores, engine room supplies, uniforms, $540, and mess, $380; commissioning and laying up, $2,500; total for five months, $10,000. If to this be added what it costs for the cabin outfit, without the delusion that you are saving so much on your shore expenses—for in the long-run you never do—it will be seen that it costs a pretty penny for the sport.

There is not a very great difference, save for coal, in the running expenses of a steamer and a sailing craft. Indeed, on similar displacements, the large schooners often cost more to keep up. So far as the smaller schooners and sloops go, it is an axiom that you always spend more than you have allowed. One owner of a sloop, whose experience is not exceptional, confesses that when he had built his ship for $10,000 he hoped to get her into the water for $5,000 more, but by the time sails were bent and he was ready to cruise, his total expenditures had reached $16,500. His first season cost him $8,000 more; but from his own accounts it is easy to see the cabin was run carelessly, and too lavishly for comfort. In the next year he had his yacht hauled out by the ship-builder for an examination, and though the sailing-master had taken good care of her, his bill for a spike here and a graving piece there was nearly $1,000. A new main-sail and other sail-making jobs cost another $1,000, and before he got the rigger out of the boat there was a handspike and serving-mallet account of $200. Altogether he found his running expenses for the second season, in a boat under sixty feet on the water-line, averaged $50 per day, and it must be added that he was not a Johnny Raw.—J. D. Jerrold Kelley, in Harper's Magazine.

—Dashley—"Do you see that fellow over there?" Cashley—"Yes; he must be about six feet seven inches. Who is he?" Dashley—"The new comedian at the Frivolity Theater." Cashley—"Ah! He ought to be able to reach the height of the ridiculous."—America.

WOMEN AS INVENTORS.

Ingenious Contrivances For Which the World Is Indebted to the Fair Sex.

It was a California woman who invented a baby carriage, which netted her $50,000; while to Mrs. Catharine Greene, the wife and widow of Washington's ablest officer, is due the honor of inventing the cotton gin, which is one of those distinctively American inventions, the value and importance of which have been recognized by the whole industrial world. A horse-shoe machine, which turns out completed shoes, was the invention of a woman; also the reaper and mower, the ideas of which came into the brain of Mrs. Ann Manning, of Plainfield, N. J., to whom is also accredited a clover cleaner. Mrs. Manning seems to have stimulated the inventive genius of her neighbors, for a few years after her reaper and mower was patented Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, of the same State, took out a patent for an improvement on the machine, being a device for changing the knives without stopping the wheels.

One of the most complicated machines ever made is that for the manufacture of re-enforced bottom paper bags. It is so curiously ingenious that how it was contrived passes the ordinary comprehension. It was the invention of Miss Maggie Knight, who, from it and other inventions in the same line, realized a large fortune. A street-sweeper of great merit was devised and patented by a New York lady, who had a costly dress ruined by the mud splashed on it by a defective machine.

Most remarkable of all is the invention of Mrs. Mary B. Walton for deadening the sound of car wheels. She lived near the elevated railroad in New York, and was greatly annoyed by the sound of the roaring trains passing her house. The most noted machinists and inventors of the country had given their attention to the subject without being able to furnish a solution, when lo! a woman's brain did the work, and her appliance, proving perfectly successful, was adopted by the elevated roads, and she is now reaping the rewards of a happy thought.—Home Magazine.

California Redwoods.

The redwoods that stand on the borders of Marin, within sight of San Francisco, mark the scattered fringes of what the botanists call the most splendid and valuable coniferous forest known on the face of the earth. It reaches north to Puget sound and far beyond, across British Columbia into Alaska. Redwoods rule in California, but then the spruces, firs and pines carry on the great forest to the Arctic circle. Like the deep Andreswald of England in the days of Hengist and Horsa, like that German forest that turned back the Roman legions, this vast coniferous forest is the one great physical fact of an immense region. If the tracts that still belong to the Government are withdrawn from public sale and pre-emption, and if wise forestry laws are enacted and enforced, California will have everenduring forests. Otherwise, in twenty years the best portions of this gigantic forest will be destroyed beyond restoration. The forests of Sierra Nevada, covering a more limited area, but protecting the sources of a far greater number of streams, and comprising species of trees far more difficult to reproduce from seed, are in danger of far more rapid destruction.—Vick's Magazine.

Snakes Sixty Years Ago.

Hugh McCrea, an old settler of Vedango County, Pa., in talking of old times to an Oil City Blizzard reporter the other day, had this to say of snakes in his boyhood days and now: "There were seemingly no more snakes then than there are now, except copperheads; they were more plentiful. Hogs used to run at large and they killed a great many rattlesnakes. One time, as I was going up on the hill, I heard a great racket down in the woods. On going down there I saw two or three hogs with a rattler having a fight. They would catch it and drag it and then tear it to pieces, and they made as much fuss over it as if it had been a bear. I never knew of a hog being bitten by a rattlesnake. Have known of sheep and cows being killed, and we lost three horses by snake bite. Their bite does not always kill a dog. A dog will cure himself—just dig a hole in the ground, crawl in it and lay there until he is cured. The earth seems to draw the poison out. We had a dog that was bitten. Having missed him for two or three days, we hunted for him, and finally found him lying in a hole he had dug under an old house. He came home well enough."

Genuine, Without a Doubt.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

The Best Remedy

In this world, says J. Hofherr of Syracuse, N. Y., is Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son who was partially paralyzed three years ago and attended by five, has not had any symptoms of them since he took one bottle of the remedy. I most heartily thank for it.

Nervous Prostration Cured.

CROGHAN, N. Y. June, 1889.

I was not able to do anything for 19 months, was confined to bed most of the time, couldn't eat nor sleep, was so nervous and dizzy that I could not walk from the house to the garden, and was all run down by what the doctors called nervous prostration. No medicine seemed to help me. Then I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and now I can eat and sleep and have no more sinking spells, can do my housework again. I am very thankful for this and recommend the Tonic to all sufferers.

SUSIE VERSHNEIDER.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

HURLED TO DEATH

Several Boilers Explode Killing Five Persons.

ONE MAN'S HEAD DECAPITATED.

Two of the Boilers Blown Five Hundred Feet from the Mill.

Their Course Marked by Blood, Brains and Pieces of Clothing—Five Wounded Men Found on Top of a Building—The Explosion a Mystery—Names of the Killed and Injured.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Nov. 26.—The most appalling accident that ever was recorded in this locality occurred during the morning.

The nest of boilers in E. D. Jewett's mill at South Bay exploded with terrific force, instantly killing five persons and seriously injuring several others.

Two of the boilers were hurled 500 feet from the mill.

The Course Marked by Blood.

The course of the boilers was marked by blood, brains and pieces of clothing. Henry Baird's headless body was found 100 feet from the mill hanging on the top of a deal pile.

Michael Lynch's dead body was found on the top of the main building. By his side lay five others severely wounded. How they were hurled there is as much a mystery as the origin of the explosion.

Others were buried deep beneath the debris of the boiler room and were rescued with difficulty. The death of the little deaf and dumb boy, Bert Currie, was perhaps the saddest of the fatalities. The little fellow's father worked in the mill and he had been playing around him and had been sent away many times but always came back. Not five minutes before the explosion his father had ordered him home and the lad was returning again when he was killed by one of the falling timbers.

The Killed and Injured.

The following is a list of the names of those killed: Henry Baird, head severed from the body; James Baird, son of Henry; Bert Currie, aged 8 years, Andrew Work, aged 24, and Michael Lynch.

Those thought to be fatally injured are: Patrick Lynch, R. Hayes and Peter Harrington.

The boilers were old ones and badly worn.

THE RUSH TO BERLIN.

Thousands of Doctors Anxious to Investigate Prof. Koch's Discovery.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Fully two thousand physicians have arrived here from foreign countries in the desire of informing themselves regarding Prof. Koch's system of treatment.

One hospital has already refused the applications of 400 physicians who desired to study the Koch method of treatment. The reason given for the refusal is that it is not possible to successfully instruct the large number applying.

After admitting that wonderful results have been obtained by the injection of the curative lymph, Dr. Koeller, chief of the Charity Hospital here, frankly asserts that as yet there has been no evidence of the lasting character of a cure. Still, he admits that the lymph has proved indispensable in diagnosing cases where the existence of tuberculosis was in doubt.

Dr. Wurtz, director of the laboratory of the medical school in Paris has been appointed by the faculty of that institution to proceed to this city and study Prof. Koch's method of treatment.

Hope of the Navassa Rioters.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 26.—The three Navassa rioters and murderers, George Singleton Key, Edward Smith and Henry Jones, who are in jail under sentence of death, when told of the decision handed down in their case in the United States Supreme Court, expressed no surprise and were apparently unconcerned. They are hopeful that the President will commute their sentences. Should he not do so they are, they say, ready to march to the scaffold.

Crushed by a Falling Safe.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 26.—A dispatch from Canton, Ohio, says that a frightful accident happened at the Diebold Safe Works during the morning. Several men were engaged in moving safes on an overhead railroad when the apparatus gave way. A heavy iron safe came down striking Charles Sturm, crushing his head to a pulp, and killing him instantly. Two other workmen named Glasser and Aman were seriously and perhaps fatally injured.

Sanchez Committed Suicide.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 26.—The steamship Breakwater, from Puerto Cortes, brings the news that Sanchez committed suicide when he found the tide of battle was against him. Bogran's adjutant and his finance minister were killed. H. Alden Baker, who was reported killed, was with Major E. H. Burk at the time and is uninjured.

Another Story About Charlie Ross.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—The detective bureau at the New York Police Headquarters seem reasonably convinced that they have discovered the long lost Charlie Ross. Charles A. Grant, chief clerk of the police commissioners of New York, diligently worked the clue down to this point where Inspector Byrnes was consulted and the latter's detectives called in. Mr. Grant has been following the case diligently but quietly for several months, and he now feels no hesitation in stating that he has located Charlie Ross in a Massachusetts city.

Failure in the Cotton Trade.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—An assignment was made by the large cotton commission firm of Richard H. Allen & Co. Tight money was the cause. The parent house at Memphis, Tenn., (Thomas H. Allen & Co.) also made an assignment.

GODFREY WHIPS SMITH.

The Westerner Was Never in It and Lacked Science All Through.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Nov. 26.—The glove contest which took place at Cronheim's Theatre last night, between George Godfrey, of Boston, and Ed Smith, of Denver, was a one-sided affair, Godfrey having the best of it from the start. About 400 people paid $10 and $25 admission, and shortly after 9 o'clock the doors were closed and all late comers were left in the cold.

Jere Dunn was chosen referee and ex-Uupire John Kelly timekeeper. Billy Hogarty and Billy Mahoney acted as seconds for Godfrey, and William Muldoon, Jack Ashton and Jake Kilrain acted in the same capacity for Smith.

From the first round it was quite apparent that Smith had no science whatever. He had no method of offense and no guard for defense. Godfrey, on the other hand, showed science and agility. He was quick to dodge, artful in attack and rapid. He had sized up his opponent before they had finished the first round, and played a waiting game. The first four rounds were tame.

In the fifth Godfrey had Smith at his mercy, but let the contest go on. From that to the tenth the fight was a bore, and afterward there was never any question of who would win. Godfrey was anxious to give the people an exhibition. In the 23d round, however, he slammed Smith up against a post and the latter came back so dazed, helpless and utterly winded that the referee awarded the fight to Godfrey. Smith might do a little better with the bare knuckles, but was at sea with the pillows.

The winner will receive $1,800 and the loser $200 of the $2,000 purse offered by the club.

NO OUTBREAK YET.

Ghost Dancers Turn Cattle Stealers and Defy Their Agent.

PIERRE, S. D., Nov. 26.—Parties returning from the Cheyenne Agency, where the Indians were given their monthly issue of rations, state everything appears to be quiet; and that about all the Indians receiving rations there were present and very orderly, but with several companies of troops also present.

At the hostile camp on Cherry Creek, which is a sub-agency and run by Hump and Big Foot, a report stated that the Indians all assembled yesterday, and when the cattle were driven out to be slaughtered and divided, the mounted Indians swooped down and captured the entire herd and drove them to their village, one mile away, where the issue was made to suit themselves.

The Yale Team Discouraged.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 26.—The Yale football team left for New York this afternoon. They will be quartered at the Murray Hill. The team and the college as a whole is quite discouraged. Two of the best men, Holcomb and Williams, will not be able to play. Lewis will be substituted for Holcomb and Bliss for Williams. Harvey, the regular full-back, will probably be able to play on Thanksgiving day.

Tomato Packers Fail.

SALEM, N. J., Nov. 26.—Starr & Co., extensive packers of tomatoes, made an assignment yesterday for the benefit of their creditors. The liabilities already handed in foot up $106,000, and they may go to $150,000. The assets are stated at $40,000. The immediate cause of the failure was the refusal of the Philadelphia commission merchants who handled Starr & Co.'s goods to longer furnish them with money.

Birch to be Extradited.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 26.—The extradition papers in the case of Birch, who absconded from Concord, N. H., with $1,000, the property of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, have arrived in charge of a detective who will take Birch back in a few days.

The Election in Providence.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 26.—The indications this morning were that there had been no choice for mayor by the voters at yesterday's election. Alderman Elisha Dyer, jr., Rep., is elected from Ward 1, and Alderman Charles E. Harris, Rep., from Ward 8.

Mrs. Birchall Sailed To-Day.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Birchall, widow of J. Reginald Birchall, who was hanged recently in Canada for the murder of Benwell, sailed for Liverpool today on the White Star line steamship Majestic. Mrs. Birchall declined to be interviewed.

The First Democratic Mayor.

DOVER, N. H., Nov. 26.—In the city election here Henry R. Parker, Dem., was elected mayor by 84 majority. The city government stands 8 Republicans and 7 Democrats, a Democratic gain of one. This is the first Democratic mayor Dover has ever had.

Was the Water Witch Wrecked?

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—A bottle picked up on the beach at Marblehead Neck contained a slip of paper on which was the following: "Foundered at sea, bark Water Witch, 15 Sept., '90. Forward to 12 Bow street, London. Adrift in a boat. Men lost."

UNLIMITED COINAGE

The Silver Men Determined to Force Legislation.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT BUSY.

Mr. Blaine Preparing Reciprocity Treaties With South American Countries.

Major McKinley Returns to the Capital and Talks About Coming Legislation—Gen. Miles Ordered to Washington—Internal Revenue Receipts for the Year—A Counterfeiter's Fine Remitted.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—It is clearly the intention of the silver men to force legislation in their favor at the coming session. Their present purpose is to work for unlimited coinage, for enough additional purchases to offset the retirement of the $22,000,000 of bank notes which have been withdrawn from circulation within the past twelve months, and for free coinage, limiting the purchases to the product of the American mines until such time as France and Germany may throw open their mints to the silver of the world.

One of these measures, very probably the first, will, they insist, pass before the 4th of March next. Careful inquiry convinces them that a number of the Republicans, as well as Democrats who either dodged the issue or voted against them last summer, will fall into line at the coming session and support any proposition indorsed by them.

The leaders of the silver movement find no significance in the prevailing low price of that commodity. The high figures which followed the passage of the Five Million Ounce bill were purely speculative and represented nothing beyond that. The present price is the natural reaction combined with the largest recent importations from abroad when the English holders of the metal shipped it to this country, owing to the urgent necessity which existed there for available funds.

RECIPROCITY TREATIES.

Mr. Blaine at Work on a Measure to be Submitted to the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The State Department is busy getting up the reciprocity treaties with the South American republics. Early in the December session Mr. Blaine hopes to send to the Senate a treaty with Brazil under the new law. This will be followed by others with the other countries, with the exception of Chili and the Argentine Republic. No negotiations are being made with the latter two.

The movement in Canada in favor of unrestricted reciprocity with the United States is gaining ground. The Dominion elections in the United States. Canadian manufacturers who have hitherto supported the National protection policy declare that they are now sufficiently established to compete on equal terms with American industries and express themselves in favor of gaining access to United States markets.

Mr. Blaine is personally pushing the arrangements with Cuba through Spain for a reciprocity treaty, and he is most confident that before the coming session of Congress ends he will be able to have a treaty made with that country.

Internal Revenue Receipts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Commissioner John W. Mason, of the Internal Revenue Bureau, in his report of the operations of his office for the past year, says that the receipts from internal revenue amounted to $142,594,696. He estimates the receipts for the current fiscal year at $145,000,000.

The President Remitted the Fine.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The President has remitted the fine of $25 in the case of Daniel McKenna, sentenced in Pennsylvania to eight months' imprisonment and a fine of $25 for passing counterfeit coin.

Brazil's Warships Here.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The Brazilian naval squadron is in American waters and to-day the vessels that compose it entered the harbor escorted by two American men-of-war which were assigned for that duty. The Brazilian vessels come on a message of peace. They come to offer a graceful tribute of the youngest Republic to the most powerful of Republics.

Removed His Tongue.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Ex-Senator Peter Ward, of Newburg, N. Y., underwent an operation at the Roosevelt Hospital here, which forever deprives him of speech. His entire tongue was taken out by the surgeon's knife. Dr. Charles McBirney, chief of the hospital staff, performed the operation.

Charles Francis Adams Will Resign.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—President Charles Francis Adams stated that he would resign the Union Pacific presidency at today's meeting of stockholders here. He will not, however, write a letter of resignation.

EVA HAMILTON PARDONED.

It is Believed She Will Remain in Seclusion in Jersey City.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 26.—Eva Hamilton, the widow of Robert Ray Hamilton, was released from the State prison at 6 o'clock last evening. She left the prison with her counsel, ex-Speaker Heppenheimer and Colonel Charles Fuller. It is presumed that she will remain in seclusion in Jersey City, not daring to venture into New York on account of an indictment pending there.

Mrs. Hamilton's application for a pardon was filed last spring and the petition was signed by 228 prominent citizens of Atlantic City and County. The petition being made before the death of her husband, it gave reasons that are now obsolete, mainly that her confinement in the prison was jeopardizing her interests, inasmuch as her husband had charged her with fraud and was seeking an anullment of their marriage. The application als stated that Nurse Donnelly, who was assaulted, speedily recovered and was able to give her testimony in court, and afterwards go on exhibition in a dime museum.

The board unanimously voted in favor of the pardon. The pardon was a surprise to Mrs. Hamilton and it took three hours before she had completed the preparations for her departure. She was profuse in her thanks to the jail officials for their kindness and courtesy to her during her incarceration. Her two years' sentence would have expired next May.

ALL TROUBLE SETTLED.

The World's Fair Directors Ready for the President's Proclamation.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—The differences existing between the National Commission and the World's Fair directors were harmoniously settled by the adoption of a conference report, the joint work of representative members of both bodies.

The report determines the management of the fair by amalgamating the powers of the commission and the directors into a system of 15 departments under the supervision of the Director General. All differences that may hereafter come up will be referred to a board of control consisting of eight members of the commission and eight members of the directory, the action of which shall be conclusive.

The site and the plans and specifications for the grounds and buildings have been adopted, and President Harrison will now be advised to issue his proclamation.

PARNELL MUST GO

Gladstone Demands That He Retire at Once.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN LONDON

Liberals Say They Cannot Win With Parnell at the Helm.

Irish Members Still Loyal to Their Chief—A Nationalist Meeting Called for To-Day—Gladstone Questions the Government in the House of Commons—The Behring Sea Difficulty Referred to.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—In the lobby of the House of Commons nothing is being talked about except Mr. Parnell. The scene is extraordinary. Excited groups of Liberal members are besieged by priests, reporters and personal friends seeking for information.

The cause of all the excitement is the publication of Mr. Gladstone's letter in which he points out that the retaining of Mr. Parnell in his present position will wreck the cause of home rule. Mr. Gladstone practically threatens to retire from public life if Mr. Parnell persists in his attitude.

The Grand Old Man is indignant because Parnell made no reference to his letter at the meeting of the Irish party held last evening. He had ample opportunity to discuss it, and his evident purpose was to pass it over as of no consequence. As Mr. Gladstone sent the letter after a Liberal conference, it was supposed to carry the behest of the whole Gladstonian following.

A canvass was made in the lobby of the House, the views of a large number of Liberal members being obtained. The majority of these members agreed that it will be useless to think of winning in a general election, handicapped by an alliance headed by Mr. Parnell.

The idea was generally expressed that the Government will take advantage of this fact to dissolve Parliament, and appeal to the country while the feeling is yet hot.

A meeting of the Parnellites was called when Mr. Gladstone's letter was given out, and after an informal discussion it was agreed to hold another meeting to-day and take final action.

MEETING OF HOME RULERS.

Ireland's Representatives Unanimously Endorse Parnell.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Mr. Parnell disappointed his enemies, pleased his friends and disposed of all rumors by retaining his place at the head of the Irish party in the House of Commons. The Irish statesman was unanimously re-elected chairman, and speeches were made by Mr. Sexton and others, expressing the complete confidence of the Irish party in their leader and urging him to retain his place. Mr. Parnell thanked the members for their continued confidence and said that, in obedience to their will and that of the Irish people, he would remain at their head and labor to the best of his ability for the cause of Home Rule in Ireland.

GLADSTONE'S QUESTIONS.

He Calls Up the Behring Sea Difficulty and the Stanley Charges.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—In the House of Commons Mr. Balfour announced that he would re-introduce the Irish Land bill to-morrow. Right Hon. W. H. Smith intimated that the Government would take up the whole time of the House until the leading bills had been read the second time. In reply to a question, Mr. Smith stated that the Government did not intend to appoint a commission of inquiry in regard to the Stanley African expedition. The Government, he said, had been in no sense responsible for the selection of Mr. Stanley's staff.

Gladstone's Sharp Questions.

Mr. Gladstone said that, anxious as he was to expedite the business of the House by preventing discussion on topics not mentioned in the speech from the throne, the difficulty of thus confining the debate had been greatly increased by Mr. Smith's announcement. The spokesmen of the Government had avoided reference to some matters of importance. Was the House to understand that there existed nothing in the differences with America in regard to Behring Sea which was likely to interfere with the maintenance of the most friendly relations with our kith and kin across the Atlantic? He also desired to know whether the relations of the Government toward the Stanley expedition had been such as to make it their duty to ascertain the truth or falsity of statements which had been made, whereby the reputation of the English people for humanity had been compromised. In regard to Ireland, the House was told that a bill was in readiness proposing Irish local government. Would that assurance satisfy the country? Was the House prepared to wait indefinitely upon the convenience of the Government to learn how it intended to deal with the greatest question of the day? (Cries of "Hear! Hear!")

The Government's Reply.

Mr. W. H. Smith, replying to Mr. Gladstone' remarks, declared that the Government had the strongest hopes of a successful outcome of the negotiations regarding the Behring Sea dispute. As to the Stanley expedition, it was a voluntary enterprise, and one in regard to which the Government had no right to institute an inquiry. Respecting the distress in Ireland, ample measures would be taken to meet the troubles of every district.

Judge Cooley Not Seriously Ill.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission has received a dispatch from Chairman Cooley at Ann Arbor, Mich., saying that he arrived there feeling but little effects from fatigue. Mr. Cooley was ordered home by his physician to recuperate from overwork. It was reported that Mr. Cooley was critically ill.

MILL OPERATIVES UNEASY.

Important Meeting of Print Cloth Manufacturers To-Day at Fall River.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 26.—An important meeting of manufacturers will be held to-day to consider the print cloth situation. Now that the stock has reached 600,000 pieces, with no prospect of decreasing, agents agree that some action must be taken to prevent a further increase.

A quite general feeling exists in favor of curtailment by stopping another 60 days. It will be almost impossible to obtain signatures to another agreement to hold the price of 64s at 3 5-16 cents through December, as manufacturers generally admit that previous agreements have not produced the expected results. Several who think that the price has so long been maintained that it is impossible to do anything but continue it still further, will speak in favor of this at today's meeting. Whatever course is to be pursued will be agreed upon there.

Senator Howard, secretary of the Spinners' Union, looking at the situation from the operatives' standpoint, thinks it a poor time for operatives to stop the mills—in the middle of winter—and believes the mills are able to carry their load of goods several months more without damage to themselves. He regards over-production as the chief cause of the present trouble and believes a curtailment later on absolutely necessary to remove the depression.

Some anxiety prevails among operatives as to the result of to-day's meeting. While a cut-down in wages is only casually mentioned, the help fear that the cut-down in Lowell and the fact that Fall River is paying so much higher wages than Lowell, may tend to create a strong sentiment in favor of a reduction here.

After Thanksgiving, Christmas Shopping.

The days before Thanksgiving are the last leisurely loitering ones for many persons until after the holidays. Those women who make a dead-in-earnest affair of Christmas begin the campaign the very day after Thanksgiving, or, at least, the very first day thereafter that their Thanksgiving indigestion lets up. The shopkeepers have already anticipated them, and are stacking their counters and shelves and windows full of all kinds of Christmas goods. And so the women who delight in Christmas buying and planning and giving find their days full of busy activities, and their nights filled with kindly planning. And these are the women who lend the season its kindliest charm and make life so beautiful in spots that the ways between do not seem half so long and dusty.

Leave hope behind, All ye who enter here!

So read the dire warning which Dante read on the portals of the Inferno. So runs the cruel verdict of your friends if you are overtaken by the first symptoms of that terrible disease, consumption. "Leave hope behind! Your days are numbered!" And the struggle against death is given up in despair. But while there is life there is hope! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured hundreds of cases worse than yours; and it will cure you, if taken in time. But delay is dangerous. No power can restore a wasted lung; the "Golden Medical Discovery," however, can and will arrest the disease.

The Source of a Favorite Thanksgiving Dish.

Plainfielders who at to-morrow's Thanksgiving dinner will enjoy that luscious accompaniment of turkey, cranberry sauce, will be interested to learn something of the cranberry culture in New Jersey and on Cape Cod, as related by State Entomologist John B. Smith, of Rutgers College:

"New England has perhaps the oldest cultivated bog-land, but there are many old bogs in New Jersey as well. Farmers are not entirely exempt from all human weaknesses, and some years ago, when the conviction prevailed that cranberries were a sure road to wealth without much work, cranberry-land rose enormously in value, and all land was cranberry-land if it was only in a cranberry region. Vines were planted on hillsides, in sand-holes, in swamps; everywhere, in fact. The inevitable reaction came. Insects and other pests eliminated the badly placed plantations, and others were abanded from want of knowledge. I have tramped in rubber-boots over bogs on which thousands of dollars were spent which never yielded a dollar, and which now are so overgrown with brush as to leave no trace of cultivation. Naturally, New Jersey is much more favorably located for cranberry culture than Cape Cod. Our land is at least equally as good, and our seasons are longer. We do not fear frost as early, and our vines get an earlier start. There is not that necessity for looking to early maturity in the berry which has made the Early Black the favorite on the Cape. For color and appearance the Early Black eclipses the ordinary New Jersey berry; but the latter is fully as good in flavor, makes just as good sauce, and has the enormous advantage of keeping well. New Jersey growers usually count on giving the East the early market, sending in only their dark varieties, which sell as Cape Cod berries and at the same price. The bulk of the crop is housed in special cranberry houses in which the berries are so packed as to season thoroughly. When Cape Cod berries are out of the way our berries take the market. The color is good, the fruit is usually sound, there is no undue competition, and the berries bring whatever the market will stand."

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. D. M. Miner, of Oneida county, New York, with her daughter, Miss E. L. Miner, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morse, of Franklin place. Mrs. Miner is the mother of Mrs. Morse.

Frank Halsey Skinner, of Belleville, and Edward Ward, of Newark, were ushers at the wedding of Miss Nettie Lee French, of Plainfield, to Edward Howell, of Morristown, reported exclusively in THE PRESS of yesterday. The costume of the bride was a becoming traveling dress of golden brown camel's hair cloth and velvet.

Mrs. McKeown Wins.

Before Vice-Chancellor Green, at Elizabeth, this morning, Ruth J. McKeown, of Fanwood, was upon her petition granted a perpetual separation from Alexander McKeown, and her brother is given the custody of their child. The defendant is to pay $500 per annum for the maintenance of the child. All Mrs. McKeown's relatives now in the North were present ready to testify in her behalf. In the face of such an array of evidence, the defendant was glad to concede her demands.

It was further ordered that all papers in relation to the case should be removed from the files of the court. The defendant's readiness to agree to the plaintiff's proposition, exculpates Col. Charles K. Moore from any imputations that may have been cast upon him by Mr. McKeown.

The Yearly Meetings Not to be Given Up.

Since THE PRESS announced that the Seventh-Day Baptists of New York and New Jersey anticipated discontinuing their interesting "yearly meetings," or annual re-unions, the congregations of the churches of New York City, Shiloh, Marlboro, New Market and Plainfield have in joint assembly taken a vote on the matter and have decided to perpetuate their honored custom. The "yearly meeting" of last Saturday and Sunday was highly successful. The attendance was very large, and the services of the utmost interest. The followers of the denomination are too much attached to their "yearly meeting" to give it up after so many years of profitable re-unions, and especially since their church is growing so steadily and with so much power.

An Interesting Branch of Y. M. C. A. Work.

The Workers' Training Classes of the Young Men's Christian Association, which have been so successful in past years, are soon to be started again. Two classes will be formed, one for beginners, and the other for advanced scholars. The course of study in both classes will be for the purpose of fitting the members for better Christian work. The first part of the lesson hour will be devoted to Bible study, the second half to the study of individual cases of inquirers. The lessons will be entirely different from the Sunday school lessons, but will be very useful to Sunday school teachers. The classes will be open to men only, but the ladies' class will be continued Friday afternoons. The classes will meet Sunday at 9:15 A. M. The class for beginners, to be conducted by W. D. Murray, will begin work next Sunday.

BUILDING FOR THE CENTURIES.

The New Seventh-Day Baptist Church Proof Against Fire and Decay.

The new Seventh-Day Baptist church, the corner-stone of which was laid yesterday afternoon, as reported exclusively in THE PRESS, will be one of the handsomest structures in Central New Jersey. It will be constructed entirely of stone, and will be proof against fire and decay.

The members of the Building Committee who have charge of the work of construction are J. F. Hubbard, Charles Potter, George H. Babcock, R. M. Titsworth, J. A. Hubbard and Elias R. Pope.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the church, in his address at the corner-stone laying yesterday, spoke of the nobility of thus building for others as follows:

"It is apparent to all that we are not building this house for our own use nor for the use of our children, alone. The men and women who are bearing the burden of this work will not worship in this house many years, at best. We are building for the generations which are to fill the next five centuries at least. No material is used in the construction of this edifice which can decay or burn, excepting only the interior finish. We are glad to express our faith in Christ's gospel and in the law of God and the perpetuity of His Sabbath in this way. We are thankful that God has so filled our hearts with the desire and our hands with the means that we can thus testify to our faith and our love for him and his cause. There is a sublime joy in thus living for others."

The Exhibition a Grand Success!

The citizens of Plainfield never saw a handsomer collection of photographs either amateur or professional work, than is now on exhibition in the club rooms of the Plainfield Camera Club.

Especial praise must be given to the display of Charles H. Davis, a former resident of this city, but who still retains his interest in the Club by sending an exhibition to it. His works are marvels of photographic art, both in posing and composition of the picture. A. J. Gavett shows some excellent views of Kennebunk, Maine. Harry Squires, as usual, is exceedingly painstaking in his work and exhibits three large frames mostly composed of Souther views. Lemuel and Harold Serrell deserve special mention for superior work, and Oscar S. Teale's "Codak" display is exceedingly fine. Messrs J. E. Stewart, J. Hervey Doane, George H. Babcock, and Robert Rushmore deserve praise for their work, and also Dr. H. H. Lowrie, W. H. Lyon Jr., B. J. Gottheil, C. S. Gottheil, George E. Greenleaf, J. E. Greensmith and S. C. Crane, deserve praise for fine work. Last but not least, are the racing "snap shots" of Ernest Mark, which depict animals in motion. He also exhibits a number of stereoscope views which are exceedingly fine. Want of space to-day prohibits the particularizing of many deserving pictures, but THE PRESS will do so in another issue.

To Benefit the Public, Dr. Taylor's Aim.

To James E. Martine, Esq.:

DEAR SIR:—In accepting a nomination to membership of the Board of Education I do it, I trust, with a proper appreciation of the honor conferred, for which accept my thanks, but also with a conviction that the duties involve are solely in the interest of the schools and its obligations to the public; and to these, if elected, I pledge a faithful service.

Respectfully yours,
J. P. TAYLOR.

Plainfield, Nov. 26, 1890.

RENOUNCEMENT AND DENOUNCEMENT.

Plainfield Prohibitionists Charge the Republicans With Everything Bad in the City.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Will you allow a Prohibitionist to reply to an imposition sent to the Prohibitionists of this city by the Republican Executive Committee? Here it is:

DEAR SIR:—You are hereby earnestly requested to interview your personal friends whose usual custom has been to vote the Democratic ticket, and do your utmost to influence them to cast their ballots for the Republican candidates in the coming City election

By request of the
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

What in the name of common sense has the Republican party of this city ever done for Prohibition or Prohibitionists, that they should ask such a favor? They have ever treated us with contempt; not an article could be allowed in one of their papers to advocate our cause. They have been the supporters of every rum shop in our city since its organization as a city. The Republican party has been the author of high license, that tempts the taxpayer to vote for it for the sake of the revenue to pay their taxes; the more licenses granted the more money put in their pockets; which necessarily comes from the drinker and robs his family of the comforts of life. What could a Prohibitionist say to a Democrat to induce him to vote the Republican ticket? Do they ask it for sympathy for getting so completely wiped out in the past election? Why such a tremendous cyclone this Fall? There must be something rotten in Denmark. In Pennsylvania something near 50,000 Republicans left and voted the Democratic ticket, and this State and Union county went Democratic as never before, and nearly all over the country the same. Is not this evidence that the country has become disgusted with hypocrisy, bossism and plunder; tyranny in Congress and the draining of the treasury; the McKinley bill, etc., etc.?

Do they think we are in favor of the old ring power in this town, and the support of the class that have robbed this town of thousands of dollars, and the party that has increased the salaries of nearly every officer in town, and turned every job of city and county to good account to their own pockets? No, friends, we cannot work for a party that has outlived its usefulness. We must be excused.

PROHIBITIONISTS.

Plainfield Helps to Shirk the Tax.

The City Assessors of Newark have been making a careful examination into the assessment of bank stock, and find that a considerable quantity pays nothing. At least $300,000, it is estimated, is not submitted to taxation. Nearly eleven thousand shares are held by non-residents, and it is believed that not more than half of this pays any taxation whatever. The Tax Commissioners have been trying to find out just how many of the shareholders pay taxes outside the city. One prominent resident of Morristown, owning sixty-three shares, made no return there, and pays nothing, and, several others are in the same position. Another pays there on $10,000 valuation on stock valued at par at $14.550, and assessed in Newark at $18,750. In Madison several parties made no returns and similar reports are received of parties living in Plainfield and elsewhere. The only two Plainfield persons who do pay are assessed at Plainfield at par, while Newark values the stock at thirty per cent. higher. The Tax Commissioners think that the evasion of taxation can only be stopped by taxing the banks and letting them collect from the holders. The banks are now assessed on all stock held by persons living outside the State, and none of that can escape.

According to the commissioners' valuation the Newark bank stock should be assessed at $4,040,000, but all that can be found amounts to $3,032,000. Seventy-five per cent. of the remainder escapes taxation. It is said that similar trouble exists concerning Plainfield banks.

The Lawyers Congregating on Ripley Hill.

E. J. Whitehead, Manager of the North American Commercial Agency, has purchased several acres on Ripley Hill, Westfield, near the new Academy, which he has already mapped out for immediate improvement. Several friends and business acquaintances are interested with Mr. Whitehead, and will build residences adjoining his own which he already has under way.

Judge John Ulrich of this city has located on the Boulevard, Westfield, and his lot is staked out. He will build at once. The Judge has a gilt-edged lot with double rows of sugar maples on Park street and the Boulevard—his being a corner lot.

Charles N. Codding, a New York lawyer, is building on the opposite corner. The lawyers seem to be getting corners in Boulevard lots on Ripley Hill, Westfield, for Counsellor Green, of the New York bar, is located at the corner of Boulevard and Ross place, only one block away.

The Farmer Fights the Postal Telegraph.

The New Jersey Postal Telegraph Company has struck a snag in its efforts to reach New Brunswick from Plainfield. Four New Brunswick linemen engaged in the work of construction have been arrested for trespass. It is alleged that they refused to desist when a farmer on the road forbade them to set the Company's poles on the side of the public road in front of his property, he claiming control to the middle of the road. The men entered bail to appear before the Grand Jury.

Timely Warning.

[Written for The Press.

We like to go to Music Hall,
And see the actors play—
Although we cannot always hear
The things they have to say.
We like the lurid curtain, too,
Because it might be worse,
And say things of the hardwood seats
We wont repeat in verse.
We love the dear old scenery
That serves so many ends,
Those flats and flies and drops and things
Seem old familiar friends;
And we endure the breezes, too,
That chase about the Hall,
And make the glacial epoch seem
A trifle after all;
But, in spite of these allurements
Of theatric enterprise,
We always go Music Hall,
With blood in both our eyes.
We havn't broken loose as yet,
But when we do, you bet
We'll paralyze that heartless fiend
Who plays the clarinet.

AN OPERATOR'S NIGHT OF TERROR.

Bears and Wild Cats Assail Him in His Lonely Mountain Station.

A thrilling story of a highly exciting experience amid the wild beasts of the Pennsylvania mountains is told of Edward Smith, the new night operator at the North avenue telegraph office. Just before coming to Plainfield, in the early part of November, Smith took temporary charge of the office at the Tunnel, eight miles above Penn Haven Junction, on the Jersey Central Railroad. The Tunnel is a lonesome, desolate spot, four miles distant from any habitation, the nearest being at Mud Run, where the great railroad disaster occurred two years ago. The operator at the little cabin built for him at the end of the tunnel from which the lonely office takes its name, seldom sees a human face, except on the passing trains. At night nothing but a smoky lantern and a colored switch light illuminates the dense gloom of the wild region.

Smith was used to city offices, where he could see the constant glare of electric lights, and crowds of people. He had not been on duty two nights before he was compelled to undergo a most terrifying experience. In the early hours of the morning, when the surrounding wilderness was blackest, the awful quietude was broken by unearthly yells, and Smith, looking out of the narrow window, saw great shadowy forms stalking about his cabin. Reflecting the rays of his lantern outward with a bit of mirror, he realized that his shanty was surrounded by blood-thirsty bears, wild cats and other voracious beasts. He feared his time had come, and was in desperate straits. The bears made an assault upon the door and came near crushing it in. The wild cats dashed themselves against the window, breaking the glass. They would have entered but Smith repulsed them with a crow-bar.

The wild beasts were desperate and wanted human food. The bears got on top of the roof, demolished the chimney and began to tear the shingles and rafters off the roof. The operator got a red hot poker and burned one of them badly. While the war of the animals was going on no communication could be had with the terminal office and the chief dispatcher had to hold trains. Between blows at the bears and other carnivora the operator finally managed to send word to the next station, White Haven, apprising the operator there of the situation. This operator was a brother of Philip J. Mac Andrew, formerly night operator in Smith's present position, and now yard master at the freight station of the Jersey Central Railroad in Plainfield. Mac Andrew was a man of quick expedient, and in response to Smith's appeal an engine and a number of railroaders were sent to Smith's rescue. The wild beasts fled at the approach of the headlight, but not before a bear and a wild cat had been killed. Smith was completely exhausted after his battle.

"I wouldn't stay there again"—said he—"for $500 a night. It may be all right for you fellows up here, because you're used to bears and such things, but I don't want any more in mine. I hope I'll never put in another such a night again as long as I live."

This is the story that has followed Smith to Plainfield. It first appeared in milder form in the newspapers of the immediate neighborhood, but has grown to prodigious proportions by constant journeying about the country. The Ashley, Pa., correspondent of the White Haven Journal, intimates that the truth has been greatly distorted by frequent re-telling of the story, and makes the following comment:

Our Ashley contemporary says "You have undoubtedly heard the story circulated about the telegraph operator on the Jersey Central named Smith attacked by bears and wild cats near the tunnel on the Wilkes Barre mountain recently. The startling (?) news was telegraphed all over the country to the effect that Smith had to fight for his life, and with the aid of an iron bar and a red hot poker, kept the bears and wild cats at bay for three hours. When it reached Chicago the bears had swallowed the operator, the red hot poker and crowbar. It is presumed that when the story reached San Francisco the trust or combine formed by the wild cats had eaten the operator, the shanty, the car tracks and were about starting in to chew up the tunnel."

LATER.

It is reported that Mr. Smith was this afternoon offered $100 per week to join a New York museum and relate his harrowing tale to the daily visitors.

FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

BROTHER'S LOVE FOR BABY.

Come down to our house, I have something to show you—
A dear little baby that hasn't a name;
So pretty, so cunning, so sweet that I know you
Will wish that you had at your own house the same.

His dear little head, he can't always hold steady;
He can't even place where he wants to, his hands;
He smiles when I come, so he knows me already—
And just the least bit, on his two feet he stands.

I never liked any thing half as much—may be
You think I would sell him—I wouldn't for gold!
To know how I love him—the dear darling baby—
You must love one yourself—you could never be told.

—Sarah E. Howard, in Our Little Men and Women.

HOW THE BEAN GROWS.

Provisions of the Mother Plant for Her Little Ones.

How many boys and girls who are fond of that good old New England dish called "succotash" can tell how the young bean or corn plant grows? How many have looked for the baby bean in the seed? I would like to tell you how to find it, and how to watch its growth from a tiny, helpless infant to a lusty three-weeks-old plant.

Get a handful of beans and corn kernels, such as can be found at the florist's, also a few peas, and let them soak in a glass of water for several hours. The tough outer covering or "seed-coat" of the bean will become wrinkled, and will split in several places. Remove the coat, and you will find at one end what looks like a little stem bent down upon the seed. Open carefully the halves of the bean at the other end, and you will discover the baby bean tucked away between two warm, thick blankets. These blankets are really leaves—very curious leaves, you will think; so thick and round; and, indeed, they do not look much like an ordinary leaf. When the young bean starts in life it is as helpless as a human baby, and can not obtain food for itself until it has grown a few roots; so the mother bean of last summer thoughtfully provided a rich store of food for the babies in the seeds until they should be old enough to draw their own nourishment from the soil. This food the mother plant stored away in the seed-leaves, and that is why they are so much thicker than ordinary leaves. Long ago some clever man found out that they are food for us as well, and the next time you have beans or peas for dinner you will like to remember that you are eating, not only the food provided for the baby bean, but the baby bean itself!

Perhaps you do not know that the rich, oily meats of the butternut and walnut are seed-leaves so altered as to bear little or no resemblance to the ordinary butternut or walnut leaf. But if you will plant a butternut some fall, and the next spring dig it up, you will discover a marvelous change—the kernel will have become green and leaf-like, and you will no longer think of eating it.

Having found the young bean and pea in the seed, plant the other seeds in earth or sand in shallow pots, taking care to water them a little each day. In the course of a few days, if you are curious, you will dig up a seed or two to see what has happened. You will find the little stem has grown stouter and longer, and the lower end roots will soon appear, while the seed-leaves have opened a little, allowing the young bean within to grow upward. The little stem may be likened to a foot which the seed pushes down into the ground, and the young plant to an arm which it thrusts upward into the light and air. If you have planted a seed the wrong end uppermost you will be amused to see how the stem has twisted and turned to get underneath. The one is destined for the bright, warm sunshine; the other for the dark, moist earth; each knows its mission, and each may be trusted to find its rightful place.

At the end of another week let us look again at our little friends. No longer hiding out of sight, they have boldly pushed their way into the upper world, the bean bringing up its seed-leaves, somewhat battered and brown, to be sure, but still clinging to the young plant, which, no longer a helpless baby, has grown several inches beyond them; little roots have appeared at the end of the stem, and the work of the seed-leaves being done, they will soon fall away.

But you will look in vain above the ground for the seed-leaves of the pea. Unlike the bean, the seed-leaves of the pea remain under ground, where they soon decay. The seed-leaf of the corn—for it has but one—also remains below, in the kernel. At the end of three weeks all should be vigorous young plants, with their upper leaves well formed.

Let us look for a moment at these leaves. Hold one of the bean leaves up to the light, and you will see little lines running through it. Now close your hand and look at the back of it. The blue veins running under the skin are arranged a little like the lines in the leaf—which are also called veins. The veins in our hands help to carry the blood to different parts of our bodies; while the veins of the leaf carry sap through the leaf. But if you hold a corn leaf up to the light you will discover that all the lines in this leaf run in the same direction, like the rails of a street-car track; while the veins of the bean leaf run in many different directions, like the threads of a net; so we call the bean leaves net veined, and the corn leaves parallel veined.

Now, here is a conundrum for you. Remembering that the bean with its two seed-leaves has net-veined leaves, and that the corn with its one seed-leaf has parallel-veined leaves, what kind of leaves ought the pea to have? The boy or girl who can answer this question correctly, before looking at the pea leaves, is on the road to the discovery of an important secret—one of Nature's great laws—a secret which I shall not tell you, but leave you to discover for yourselves.—Easter Ives, in Christian Union.

CURIOUS SHOES.

The Many Uses to Which the Hollanders Put Their Foot-Gear.

The Hollanders make so many uses of wooden shoes, one is persuded to believe the "Old woman who lived in a shoe, and had so many children she didn't know what to do," was a Dutch vrouw. The children turn shoes into boats, and paint them a rich deep brown, in imitation of the large boats which sail on the River Maas. As they trim the tiny sails of their ships, and launch them upon the waters of a sloot to some imaginary Van Diemen's land, not to be found in a geography, they seem possessed with the same spirit which inspired the Dutch navigators of earlier days.

There are very many sloots (which are deep ditches full of water), used both to fence and to fertilize the land; so the voyage of the shoe may be a long one, and the owner of the little vessel will have abundant opportunity to indulge in dreams of future wealth to be realized "when his ship comes in."

The boats that one may see on the rivers and the coasts of Holland are not unlike the wooden-shoes in shape, and the same model may originally have served for both.

The school-boy, heated by play, stops beside the nearest stream, pulls off his shoe, and fills it with water, which he drinks with as much satisfaction as if it were a delicious draught from a silver cup.

They are useful as hammers, and it is not uncommon to see a koopman (merchant) by the wayside, with a few laps of his shoe-mending his cart, piled high with yellow carrots or little round Dutch cheese, while his dogs rest in the traces.

These shoes also take the place of the obsolete birch-rod of our grandmothers' days. The good vrouw, in her quaint cap of spotless white, with gold spiral pins, called krullen, placed above the ears, does not look very much like such grandmothers as we have known, but her discipline resembles theirs in severity if not in kind.

During the week, after school hours, the little girls walk along the dikes in rows, knitting; and the clatter of their shoes, to an ear unfamiliar with it, is, except that is without the military regularity, like the sound of an advancing army.

Saturday is the great cleaning day in Rijsoord, when every thing is made ready for Sunday, the day of rest. The houses are scrubbed inside and out, and among the pots and kettles are seen the wooden shoes; these, scoured snowy white, hang upon forked sticks near the door-way to dry in the wind and sun.

The morning brings the sound of klumpen along the dikes, and rows of people are seen walking toward the kirk. At the door they leave their shoes, like faithful servants, to await their return later, after a three hours' sermon by the dominie.

In the afternoon the young men and women stroll up and down the Promendijk, which is the "Fifth avenue" of the village—its general promenade and meeting place. They exchange nods and friendly greetings until sundown, when the busy week begins again, and the wooden shoes soon take on their week-day coat of tan.—Anna Page Scott, in St. Nicholas.

A WATER-MELON TRAP.

How a Chinaman Captured a Runaway Monkey.

A monkey was chattering among the trees of a lawn near Central Park, in New York. He had escaped from an organ-grinder. He had a collar around his neck, and wore a red cap trimmed with gold cord and covered with little bells which kept up a merry jingling as he swung himself from limb to limb, using his tail, and his paws which were so much like a child's hands.

The gardener climbed a tree after him, but before he reached him the monkey was in another tree a dozen yards away. Then the gardener climbed that tree, but the monkey had already gone on to another; then he tried a third tree and failed, and gave up the chase.

Mr. Anson, the owner of the place, was very much amused, and his little girl and boy clapped their hands with delight. The organ-grinder, however, did not seem to be in a good humor. He scolded, shook his stick, and kept calling, "Jocko! Jocko!" The monkey scolded angrily in return, waved his red cap, and flung leaves and twigs at his old master. In a little while a Chinaman entered the yard. There was a twinkle in his almond-shaped eyes.

"Chinaman catchlee monkley," he said.

"Catch him, then," said Mr. Anson.

"What'll gim me?" asked the Chinaman.

"I will give you three dollars if you catch that monkey," said the organ-grinder.

"Allee right!" cried the Chinaman.

He disappeared in a flash, and when he returned he was carrying a water-melon.

"Watchee Chinaman catchee monkley," he said. "No makee muchee noise. Allee glo way."

They all walked back to the porches. They watched the Chinaman, and wondered what he was about to do. He went right to work.

He made a small hole in the water-melon, and then placed it in one of the wide walks, after which he hid himself behind the bushes, ready to pounce upon the monkey.

The latter saw the melon and approached it with a good deal of caution. He chattered softly and looked cunningly around him. Monkeys are very fond of water-melon seeds, and so Jocko forced his paw into the hole and grabbed a handful of them.

The Chinaman sprang toward him. The monkey could not draw his paw from the melon because he would not open it and let go of the seeds. He tried to drag the melon with him but it was too heavy, and he was easily caught. The Chinaman was a sailor and had seen monkeys caught that way in India.—Frank H. Stauffer, in Our Little Men and Women.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

THE OLD COUPLE.

It stands in a shady meadow,
The house so mossy and brown,
With its cumbrous old stone chimney
And the gray roof sloping down.

The trees fold their green arms around it,
The trees a century old:
And the winds go chanting through them.
And the sunbeams drop their gold.

The cowslips spring in the marshes,
And the roses bloom on the hill;
And beside the brook in the pasture
The herds go feeding at will.

The children have gone and left them:
They sit in the sun alone;
And the old wife's ears are failing,
And she harks to the well-known tone

That won her heart in girlhood,
And has soothed her in many a care,
And praises her now for the brightness
Her old face used to wear.

She thinks again of her bridal—
How, dressed in her robe of white,
She stood by the gay young lover
In the morning's rosy light.

Oh, the morning is rosy as ever,
But the rose from her cheek has fled;
And the sunshine still is golden.
But it falls on a silvered head.

And the girlhood dreams, once vanished,
Come back in her winter time,
Till her feeble pulses tremble,
With the thrill of springtime prime.

And, looking forth from the window,
She thinks how the trees have grown
Since, clad in her bridal whiteness,
She crossed the old doorstone.

Though dimmed her eyes' bright azure,
And dimmed her hair's young gold,
The love in her girlhood plighted
Has never grown dim nor old.

They sat in their place in sunshine
Till the day was almost done;
And then, at its close, an angel
Stole over the threshold stone.

He folded their hands together,
He touched their eyelids with balm;
And their last breath floated upward,
Like the close of a solemn psalm.

Like a bridal pair they traversed
The unseen mystic road
That leads to the beautiful city
"Whose builder and maker is God."

"UP A TREE."

A Boy's Perilous Adventure in a Church Steeple.

ONE DAY IN climbing over the back fence of the churchyard, to indulge in my afternoon's dissipation among the books of the Sunday-school library, a couple of boys who were on the borders of the swamp saw me get over. In a very short time they were after me. They thought I had some big scheme on hand and naturally wanted a share of it. They climbed the fence and searched the yard. Not finding me there, and after looking under the church they came to the conclusion that I must be inside, and then they rattled at the door. The fastening of the back door, at the best of times, was rather insecure, and although I lay low in the pew and said nothing, the door very speedily gave way and in the boys came. There was a wild shout when they discovered me there, and they wanted at once to know what was on hand.

They couldn't believe that I merely entered the church in order to read a lot of stuffy books, for which they had the utmost contempt, and they reached the conclusion that I was up to some very much deeper game than that to which I acknowledged. There was something so innately wicked in being in a lonely church in broad daylight on a week day that the boys fairly reveled in it, and we started to explore the church. Into the front of the edifice I had never gone, principally because I was afraid. The stillness and lonesomeness about the building awed me so much that I never cared to explore the building or get very far from the exit of the back door.

It was only on very bright, sunshiny days that I dared venture into the church at all, and even then the building was not the most cheerful one in the world, for the windows were all of ground glass, and the light at no time was of the brightest. But three boys together have more than three times the courage of one boy, so we went into the pulpit and on into the front of the church and finally somebody proposed that we climb into the steeple. There was a stairway that opened off the porch, and up that stairway we went and found ourselves in a kind of a loft, lighted by narrow Gothic windows high up the steeple, which gave a dim, mysterious illumination to that strange, tall, pointed spot. The inside frame work of the steeple afford d a splendid climbing place, and at once one of the boys proposed that we should climb to the windows and enjoy the view. The whole inside was a mass of cross beams and braces, gradually tapering inward, until they reached the dark invisible point where the four sides came together.

We started up, one at each of the three corners, and the climbing was exceedingly easy notwithstanding the fact that the beams we climbed up sloped inward. I was something of a climber myself in those days and went up very much ahead of the other two boys. One of them backed out by the time he was half way to the window, and went down on the floor and watched us two. The other went as far as the window and took a glance out and saw apparently more than he wanted to, for he hurried downwards again and joined the other boy. But the emulation of climbing was strong upon me and I kept on while the two boys, who apparently had no realization of the dangers of the situation, watched and applauded, and their voices sounded fainter and fainter as I speeded up. At last I entered the dark part of the steeple, and in a few moments my head was wedged at the point where the sides joined. Then for the first time I cast a glance of triumph down on the two boys below. I think of the glance with a shudder to this day. I had one look at a couple of cheerful up-turned faces that had not the slightest touch of consternation in them, but the awful depth from where I seemed suspended in mid air, because of the way the walls of the steeple receded, gave me such a shock that I presume I would have fallen if I had not been wedged in so tightly in the apex of the steeple. The awful groan of fear and despair that reverberated down that hollow pyramid gave the two boys their first idea of the danger that threatened their comrade. One of the boys bolted down-stairs to get help, and the other, being afraid to stay alone, rushed after him. By great good luck they found the custodian of the church in the building, searching round for whoever had left the back door open. He had been passing, it seems, and heard our shouts in the church, and had gone back to get his key. In this time the climbing had been done. When he once entered he saw that the back door was open, and then, imagining that we were hidden among the pews, had locked the door and started a search. He was one man of all the village that we dreaded to meet, and it was a wonder that the boys had wit enough left to tell him of my predicament. He came up two steps at a time, and, shading his eyes, gazed up into the darkness where he could see nothing and could hardly believe that any body was there.

"What are you doing up there, you young scoundrel?" he shouted at me.

I had no answer to make to that and began to bewail my fate. He saw that there was no time to be lost, and instead of going and arousing the village and getting rope and other useless paraphernalia, he cried to me, in a milder voice than I had ever heard him use before, to hang on and that he would be up there in a minute. He took off his shoes and stockings and speedily climbed up in the same way that I had gone before him.

"Now," he said, as he felt my trouser leg, "if you are not careful you'll tumble down on me, and if you tumble down on me I'll give you the worst thrashing that ever you got in your life."

This braced me up somewhat, and I told him I would be careful.

"Very well then," he said, "now hang on with your hands to those braces and beams and I will guide your feet. Don't let go with your hands till I tell you to, and remember the thrashing you'll get if you do let go."

Thus we came painfully down, step by step. There is no doubt that he saved my life, but, as one good turn deserves another, I saved his by not dropping on him. When we got down he said to us three:

"Will you take a thrashing from me or from your fathers?"

A postponed thrashing is always preferable in a boy's eyes, so we unanimously chose to be punished by our doting parents. I am afraid we showed too much eagerness for the postponed whipping. Anyhow the grim custodian eyed us suspiciously for a moment and then said:

"A bird in the hand's worth two in the bush. I'll thrash you now."

And he did.—Luke Sharp, in Detroit Free Press.

Progress in Life.

Progress in life is by stages, rather than by an unbroken advance. The pupil who has passed through the primary school has to take a new start in the grammar school. The graduate of a preparatory school must begin anew as a Freshman in college. He who has taken a college degree finds that he must take the lowest place for a start toward a life profession. And so it is all the way along in life. No man ever reaches the point where it is unnecessary for him to be a willing beginner in a new sphere of knowledge or of skill, if he would rise to a plane above that on which he has attained his present proficiency and reputation. Well is it for a man if he has so used the past that it has given him a fitness for a good beginning in the present.—S. S. Times.

One Secret Safe.

Mr. Handsome—Oh, you know, mother, women can't keep a secret.

His Mother—Yes they can, my son. You have been industriously courting that Miss Highfly for a year, and you don't know her real age yet.—Street & Smith's Good News.

THE BOWSERS.

Mr. Bowser's Harrowing Experience with Various Patents.

DON'T know just exactly how many inventions are brought out weekly in this country, but I do know that Mr. Bowser would buy each and every one of them if he had the opportunity. When we first set up housekeeping he had churns, washing machines, cultivators, boot-jacks, apple-parers, wagon-jacks, spring-locks, gate-latches, and so on to the extent of a wagon load, and he has added to the collection ever since when he could do so without my knowledge. One day about a year ago an express wagon unloaded a model of a patent gate at the barn, and soon thereafter Mr. Bowser came home in an excited and enthusiastic state of mind, and said to me:

"Don't scream, or faint away, or fall over any thing or break an arm, but be calm and collected."

"Mr. Bowser, what do you mean?"

"Be calm—be calm. Mrs. Bowser, we are worth a million dollars."

"Worth what!"

"Keep cool. Don't let the good news unhinge your mind. Yes we are worth a cool million, and perhaps two or three."

"Has some one left you a legacy?"

"No; I have made it with my own wit and foresight. Money can be left to a fool, but it takes a sharp man to make money for himself. Come out to the barn."

"CAN'T YOU SEE THE CONVENIENCE?"

I followed him out, and when he had placed the model in the alley and arranged certain parts to his satisfaction, he said:

"This is the Climax farm gate, covered by three different patents. I have bought the right to the State of Michigan for $500. You see the idea? This rope leading out on either side of the post is to be pulled by any one wishing to pass through. See? Farmer doesn't have to get down off his load of hay, just gives a yank—gate opens—drives through—gate shuts—goose hangs high."

"But—but—!"

"There's no but about it, Mrs. Bowser. Let's figure a bit. We'll say there are 50,000 farmers in the State. Each one wants five of these gates, making 250,000 gates in all. Each gate can be put in for $8 and the profit is $5. This gives me $1,250,000. We'll allow $50,000 for bad debts and we have a cool $1,200,000 to put in our pockets. Isn't that a good margin on $500?"

"Do you know that the farmers will buy this gate?"

"Buy it! Why, they are crying for it all over the State! I expect to be at least a thousand orders behind, the best I can do."

"Well, I hope it will be a success, but—"

"There you go! Always ready to throw cold water on any of my enterprises! If I brought you a solid chunk of gold you'd do your best to make out that it was nothing but a brick!"

An hour later a couple of sturdy old farmers came up at Mr. Bowser's invitation to see the patent, and I sneaked out to one side to hear what they might say. Mr. Bowser exhibited the gate, went over his figures, and then asked what they thought of it.

"What's it for?" they asked.

"Why, to save a farmer from getting down off a load of hay or off his wagon."

"Um! Yes!"

"Isn't it a good thing?"

"Mebbe."

"But it must be. Can't you see the convenience at a glance! The farmer doesn't have to get down."

"No. I see he don't, and he's a durned idiot! He'd better git down a thousand times than to pay $8 for that gate! What's he there for but to git down! He's got lots of time to git down and climb up again."

In about ten minutes they knocked the underpinning away and let Mr. Bowser down with a dull thud. He didn't let go altogether, however, until after he had taken the model to the hay-market and secured further opinions. One of the last farmers to examine it turned to Mr. Bowser with:

"If ye want to catch the farmer, invent sunthin' that will fodder the stock and feed the hogs afore daylight on a winter's morning. Might make the same invention bring wheat up to $2 a bushel, do his plowin', run the cider-mill and pay off the mortgage on his farm."

It wasn't long before Mr. Bowser invested in a patent farm-fence. The model showed three boards and two lines of wire to a section, and he bought six county rights at about $100 each. He came home on a trot, brimful of enthusiasm, and as he took me out to see the model he explained:

"A farmer can get along without a patent gate, but he can't do without the fences. He can't wriggle out of this, nohow. He's got to have it, and he's got to come to me for it."

"Yes."

"The agent wanted $3,000 at first for the counties, but he soon discovered that I knew a thing or two. I shall begin to-morrow to turn the barn into a factory. I shall supply this country from here."

"Has any farmer seen it?" I asked.

"Not yet; but three or four of them will be up pretty soon, and I have no doubt that every one will order a mile of it."

Three solid looking agriculturists put in an appearance after awhile. They gave the model a careful looking over, and then one of them took out a pencil, and said:

"It's a mighty purty fence, and it will stand, but let's figger a little on the cost."

The result of the figuring proved that it would take about the value of an average farm to fence it with that sort of fence, and the model is upstairs in the barn to-day.

Among Mr. Bowser's investments was a patent gate spring. He brought the sample home under his arm, having bought the State right to manufacture and sell, and he was hardly in the house before he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, will you have the kindness to make some figures for me? Put down 1,428,260. Now multiply that by 60. The totals is cents; you will divide by 100 to get it into dollars."

"It's over $850,000," I replied.

"Exactly, but call it an even $800,000."

"What for?"

"To represent the sum I shall make within the next year on this patent gate spring. I figure that there are 1,428,260 gates in this State which need springs. This spring can be sold for $1, and the profit is sixty cents. Just like rolling off a log. Mrs. Bowser, we've struck it!"

"I—I hope so."

"I know it! I feel it in my bones! In a year from now we'll be able to walk on diamonds!"

Three days later Mr. Bowser had discovered that out of the 1,428,260 gates in Michigan only the owners of about 100,000 thought it necessary to put on springs, and that a two-shilling spring worked just as well as his dollar one. He came home sick and laid abed all the afternoon, and toward night, when I asked him for $2 to get some notions, he roared out:

"Two dollars! Two dollars! You want two dollars!"

"Yes."

"I never saw such a woman to want money, nor to spend it so extravagantly! Mrs. Bowser, you let 'em rob you right and left! You don't seem to have any idea of values. You have got to make a change, or I'll do all the buying myself. They know better than to try any trickery on me, and don't you forget it!"—Detroit Free Press.

KILLING A NIGGER.

It Was the Bounden Duty of a White Man with a Grievance.

There were half a dozen of us at the railroad station at Erin, Tenn., when an old man rode up on a mule at a slashing gallop, and cried:

"Some of you all lend me a gun or a pistol right quick."

Naturally enough we inquired what was the trouble, and he bobbed around on his saddle and replied:

"I want to kill a nigger who has insulted me."

None of us had a fire-arm, and after a few minutes the man cooled down considerably. Then I asked him how the nigger had insulted him, and he replied:

"I was comin' along to town and I met a nigger whom I knowed. Says I: "'Nigger Joe, kin ye lend me a dollar?'

"'Can't lend yo' no dollar, Marse George,' he replied.

"'Why?' says I.

"'Kase you dun owe me two dollars fur a hull y'ar, Marse George.'

"Think of it, stranger—think of a nigger dunning a white man right in broad daylight! Think of his refusing me a dollar when he knows I'm good fur ten thousand! Why, sir, I orter kill him. I really had. I orter ride right back and choke him to death."

"It must make your blood boil."

"Blood! Bile! Why, sir, I'm on fire! I've got to kill him—got to do it! And, by the way, if you could lend me half a dollar to buy powder and buck shot I know where I kin borrow a gun. You must realize how necessary it is to kill that nigger."

I let him have the money, and he rode off about three hundred feet, hitched his mule, and slid into a saloon, and a little later we could hear him pounding on a table and shouting:

"S'more o' that licker, Sam! It's my bounden dooty to kill that nigger, and I'm goin' to do it!"—N. Y. Sun.

SUFFICIENT REASON.

"I hear your engagement with Miss Boodle is off. How did it happen?"

"In strict confidence, Smith, she got mad because I stole a kiss."

"I don't see why that should provoke her—when you were engaged?"

"Well, you see, I stole this kiss from another girl."—The Jury.

"I LIVE on my wits," said Scribbler. "How do you like flat life?" asked Cynosa.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

VICTORY FOR YALE

The New Haven Eleven Win the Football Championship.

PRINCETON'S TEAM DEFEATED.

Over 25,000 Persons See the Game and Enthusiasm Was Rampant.

Nearly All the Colleges in the East Had Delegations Present—The Weather Was Perfect—Fifty Persons Injured by the Falling of the Free Stand—Celebrating the Victory.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The championship football game between Yale and Princeton which was contested on Eastern Park grounds was won by Yale by a score of 32 to 0. The game was witnessed by 25,000 persons who manifested their enthusiasm in every conceivable manner. The crowd came from every part of New York State, from the interior of many surrounding states and from all over the United States.

Nearly all the different colleges in the East were represented among the coaches. There were men from Wesleyan, Columbia, Trinity, Harvard, University of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Rutgers. Their sympathies were evenly divided.

HOW THE GAME WAS PLAYED.

Yale's Desperate Rushes and Daring Dodging Won the Battle.

Brooks, of Harvard, was referee, and Coffin, of Wesleyan, was umpire.

When Mr. Brooks called time, Princeton had the ball and formed for the V trick. This move was a failure, for King, who ran with the ball, was downed where he was. On the second down the ball went to Spicer, who ran ten yards. Then King made five yards. The ball went to Homans, who kicked it. It was caught by McClung within fifteen yards of Yale's goal. Heffelfinger made five yards. The playing was terribly sharp and the cheering simply terrific. The ball was within twenty yards of Yale's goal until it was kicked. The ball was brought to the 25-yard line and Yale tried to force it by an open bridge, but was balked by the Princeton rushers. McClung and Morrison both tried a dash through the line but failed, and the ball went to Morrison for a kick on four downs. The ball was fumbled by Princeton and fallen on by Heffelfinger. Yale now advanced the ball 25 yards up the field by a series of brilliant forced rushes, and the ball was in the middle of the field. Hartwell got the ball and made for the Princeton goal. He ran to the 20-yard line, when Furness downed him. hRodes got through Princeton's rush line and carried the ball two feet from the goal. The crowd went wild as McClung dashed against Princeton's rushers and barely managed to squeeze the ball over the line. A goal was kicked, which made the score 6 to 0 in Yale's favor.

Yale's Rush Line Work.

Princeton lined up for the V trick but gained nothing. The ball on the second down was fumbled and Heffelfinger fell on it. Yale advanced it by short runs through the center. Heffelfinger took the ball and was pushed ten yards, driving the Princeton men before him like children. The rush line work of the Yale team was immeasurably superior to Princetons. When the ball was once more put in play Crosby gained five yards through the center. Homans made a long kick down the field which was caught by McClung who advanced the ball 25 yards before he was tackled. The ball then changed hands. It was lost on the second down. Princeton kicked it down the field where it was caught. Yale carried it five yards and again lost the ball. Homans punted. The ball was caught by B. Morrison and carried back 20 yards. McClung then made another of his magnificent runs scoring a touchdown. This made Yale's score 10 with Princeton still nothing.

McClung's Brilliant Work.

When play was begun again Homans made a kick which was well caught by B. Morrison and carried back 15 yards, when he was tackled out of bounds. McClung's work was as brilliant as any Ames ever showed, and the admiration of the crowd rose for Yale as they saw how great a game she was putting up. When the ball had advanced to Princeton's 25-yard line, Harvey tried to buck the center, but was successfully tackled by Poe. The ball was given to McClung when within 10 yards of Princeton's goal, and he scored another touchdown, bringing the score up to 16 for Yale to Princeton's 0.

Again the Princeton men lined up and started with the V trick, and gained about five yards. Then the ball was passed to Spicer, and he made a run, gaining 10 yards. Homans kicked it on the fourth down. Princeton got the ball and King made a run of 10 yards, Homans then kicked it well down the field, when McClung fumbled it and then fell on it. The first half ended with the ball ten yards from the line in Yale's possession.

The Second Half.

When the second half started the Yale men came on the field confident while Princeton seemed rather despondent. Yale began by gaining 10 yards. Princeton then got five yards. Homans punted and Rhodes got the ball and made a great run through Princeton's line for 25 yards. Princeton got the ball and gained 10 yards but McClung got it again and carried it back eight yards with two men on his back. With only five yards to gain Yale lost the ball and Homans saved a score by punting to the middle of the field.

Once more Yale worked the ball down toward the goal by forced rushes of Rhodes and McClung. At this point Bliss took Harvey's place, the latter having had his ankle hurt. The ball was then advanced 10 yards by McClung and after a scrimmage he got the ball again and carried it to within five yards of the line. Rhodes rushed it across the line and McClung kicked the goal, making the score 22 to 0 in Yale's favor.

Rhodes got the ball when the men lined up and carried it to the middle of the field. Bliss then made a beautiful run of 15 yards and Yale got five yards more on outside play. McClung and Wallis made runs of five and 10 yards respectively, which brought the ball to Princeton's 25-yard line. McClung then scored another touchdown and kicked the goal, making Yale's score 28. When the ball was brought back to the middle of the field, Homans kicked it well up in Yale's field, but the latter worked it back by backs and runs into Princeton's field, and Morrison finally scored a touchdown. McClung failed to kick the goal, and the game was called with the score 32 to 0 in favor of Yale.

He Was Working for a Farmer Until His Remittance Came from England.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 28.—A young man, claiming to be the son of Lord Elders, of London, is locked up here charged with being an imposter. The police heard of the case and arrested the young man because he answered the description of a man who is wanted for passing bogus checks. The young man is very indignant at his arrest and denounces it as an outrage. He has made complaint to the British Minister at Washington.

He wears an onyx ring with a crest cut in it, and claims that he fell in with bunco men three weeks ago, when he arrived in this country, and that they robbed him of his money and papers.

THE DUNNELL BILL

The Reapportionment Measure to be Considered.

PROVIDING FOR MORE MEMBERS.

There Will be at Least 350 Representatives in the Fifty-Third Congress.

The Brazilian Visitors Arrive in Washington—Received by the President To-Day and Entertained at Lunch in the White House—A Reception This Evening—The Silver Men Aggressive.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Representative Dunnell, of Minnesota, chairman of the House Committee on the Census, has reached Washington, and has called a meeting of his committee for next Tuesday to consider the Reapportionment bill. Mr. Dunnell has no doubt of the passage of an apportionment bill during the coming session. "We will have a Republican quorum here," he said, "to pass this bill. Of that you may rest assured."

Under the Dunnel bill, framed upon the idea that the population would be 65,000,000, the membership of the Fifty-third Congress would be 354, the ratio of representation being 180,000. As the census has shown the population to be only 62,500,000, there will be some changes. Mr. Dunnell is certain, however, that there will be no less than 350 members under the bill, as he proposes to reduce the ratio so as to secure that number.

"A great many leading men," he said, "want 365 members, and others are talking of 400. I am quite certain that we will not stay at 332. Nearly all the States are asking for more Congressmen, and no member wants the number of his constituents increased. He has enough now to look after. I do not see why we should not have 600 or 700 members, like the English House of Commons, and I believe the younger generation will live to see that number."

THE BRAZILIAN VISITORS.

They Call on the President and Lunch at the White House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The officers of the Brazilian Squadron, 25 in number, arrived in Washington last evening from New York over the Pennsylvania Railroad. They were met at the station by Private Secretary Raymond, representing the Secretary of the Navy, and taking carriages were driven to the Arlington Hotel where they will be domiciled while in town.

The officials of the Department of State have sent out invitations to army, navy, diplomatic and other officials, for the reception to be tendered the Brazilians by the President this evening from 9 until 11 o'clock. He gave the officers of the squadron a luncheon at the White House this afternoon at 1 o'clock, and to-night, after the reception, the Brazilians will be serenaded by the Marine Band at the Arlington. Aside from these arrangements no definite plans have as yet been determined upon.

The White House was handsomely decorated for the occasion. The most notable features of the decorations are the miniature war ships, which have long been a source of pleasure to sightseers, in the hallway of the Navy Department in front of the office of the Secretary of the Navy. These miniature ships, which are models of the Baltimore, Maine, Charleston and other cruisers, are in a prominent position in the reception rooms of the Executive Mansion.

To-morrow night it is probable that a reception and dinner will be tendered the Brazilians by the Metropolitan Club of this city, at which Admiral Rogers will preside, Secretary Tracy will give them a reception and dinner at the Arlington Hotel on Monday evening.

HER LONG FAST BROKEN.

Mrs. Adam Wuchter's Case is Still Puzzling the Doctors.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Nov. 27.—Mrs. Adam Wuchter, the White Hall fasting invalid, seems to be slightly improving, although she suffers excruciating pain almost continually and is pitifully weak. Her remarkable case is becoming more than ever an unsolved enigma to the doctors. She still partakes of the juice of an orange, and this appears to give her strength sufficient to converse with friends at her bedside. Hundreds of visitors come to the house daily to see the famous faster.

Dr. Calvin W. Sieger, her physician, makes this statement, "The invalid woman continues about the same. The only visible improvement is that the convulsive movements have almost entirely disappeared and visitors can easily converse with her. Her speech is more distinct. At times she will take a few drops of orange juice and also toasted bread. She only allows the latter to remain in the mouth a few moments, and oftentimes drops it when only slightly masticated. This occurs but once a day, and sometimes only in a few days. When water is brought to her lips it produces violent vomiting, which is followed by a short period of unconsciousness. There are also some organic changes in the patient which are not apparently interesting to the public." This is her 236th day without food.

MURDERERS RESPITED.

Reprieved a Few Hours Before the Time Set for the Execution.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 28.—Late yesterday afternoon Gov. Campbell respited Henry Popp and Isaac Smith, who were sentenced to hang in the penitentiary annex last night. Popp was respited once before when he was within three hours of the time of his execution. He admits his guilt, but extenuating circumstances which surround his crime will probably secure for him commutation to life imprisonment.

Smith has now been respited seven times. His conviction was secured upon circumstantial evidence, and he has always protested his innocence. It is now claimed that new evidence has been discovered which will establish his innocence and fix the crime upon another man.

Death of Rev. Dr. Maxwell.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., Nov. 28.—Rev. Dr. J. A. Maxwell, pastor of the First Congregational Church, died at his home in Danbury yesterday, of a complication of diseases. Dr. Maxwell was born in New York city in 1833, and has been a Presbyterian clergyman since 1860. His pastorate in Danbury commenced in 1887, when he came from Titusville, Pa. The First Church is the principal one in the city, and he was very popular and much beloved by all who knew him. He leaves a wife, two daughters and a son, the latter a clergyman in New Jersey.

Mrs. Stanford's Faith.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—The report from Washington that Mrs. Senator Stanford had become a Catholic caused much comment here, but it was denied positively by all the relatives and friends of Mrs. Stanford. The Senator and his wife are on the way to Washington, having left here Tuesday night. Ariel Lathrop, Mrs. Stanford's brother, when asked about the story, said: "I think I should know if anything of the kind had occurred. I have no knowledge of such a change of faith."

Death of an Old Clergyman.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—Rev. Samuel Salisbury Tappan, a Congregational clergyman, died last night of pneumonia at St. Joseph's Hospital in this city, whither he had been removed from his boarding place. Mr. Tappan was born in Boston in 1809, was graduated from Amherst College in 1833, and was pastor of churches at Conway, N. H., Bridgewater and Martha's Vineyard, Mass., and Winterport, Me. The body will be buried in New Hampshire.

Suit for a Large Amount.

CHESTER, Pa., Nov. 28.—Suit has been brought against John R. Baker, the stock operator who disappeared Thursday last, to recover $116,000 belonging to the estate of Charles H. Baker, which is alleged to have been appropriated by him. Two Life Prisoners Pardoned.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Two life men in the State Prison were made happy yesterday by a pardon from Governor Brackett. These were Frank H. Wenzell and Henry Pike, the former sentenced March 5, 1875, for breaking and entering and burglary in the night time at Acton, and the latter, sentenced February 18, 1875, for a similar crime committed in Marlboro. Wenzell is now 36 years of age and Pike 47.

BUFFALO BILL'S MISSION.

Commissioned by General Miles to See Sitting Bull.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 28.—Buffalo Bill has just arrived here accompanied by his old pard Frank Powell, known as "White Beaver," and R. H. Haslan, known as "Pony Bear," who once rode 108 miles in 8 hours and 10 minutes. Special conveyances with relays were engaged to take the trio to Standing Rock Agency.

Buffalo Bill has a commission from Gen. Miles which is believed to be the most important of any issued since Sitting Bull's surrender. The party will go direct to Sitting Bull's camp on the Grand River.

It will be remembered that Sitting Bull did not come in on Saturday, regular ration day, but sent word to Agent McLaughlin that his child was sick. It is believed that Buffalo Bill is sent out to get at the bottom of the Messiah craze, with almost unlimited authority to act. This is Buffalo Bill's first visit to this section since the Custer massacre.

A MANIFESTO COMING

Parnell is Determined to Remain the Leader.

HE IS PREPARING A STATEMENT

Convinced that There is a Movement to Drive Him from Political Life.

He Will Resist the Scheme to the Last. The Radical Liberals Accused of Trying to Destroy the Irish National Party—Michael Davitt Says There is no Hope Unless Parnell Retires.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—It is stated on good authority that Mr. Parnell will issue a manifesto to the Irish people to-day and that he asks them in the meanwhile to suspend judgment.

Mr. Parnell is now convinced that the movement to drive him from political life has been started by the Radicals of the Liberal party for the purpose of destroying the independence of the Irish National party and making it a mere appendage to the Liberal party, and that it is specially in revenge for the attitude he assumed on the question of the royal grants last summer. He is determined to resist this move to the last. He will make some most important statements to the Irish party, supported by documentary evidence, which he will publish, and which, he is confident, will be decisive.

The Irish party is literally resolved into its first elements. There is no cohesion in it. Mr. Parnell has hitherto been quiescent, but he is now determined to take the field, and will immediately issue a manifesto to his Cork constituents.

Davitt's Opposition to Parnell.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—In to-day's Labor World Michael Davitt, in a leading editorial, says there is no hope if Parnell remains as the leader of the Nationalist party that Ireland's cause will be saved. He declares that the Irish party contains more than one man capable of leading it to victory and that there is sufficient patriotism therein to follow a leader chosen from its own ranks by a majority of its members.

More Favorable to Parnell.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Mr. Timothy Healy and Mr. Parnell were in conference together in the Library of the House of Commons for some time during the day. The feeling among the Nationalists seems to have become more favorable to Mr. Parnell since yesterday. The opinion prevails that at Monday's meeting of the party Mr. Parnell will be sustained.

CARLSBAD, Nov. 28.—Enormous damage has been done by the floods. Aqueducts, bridges and streets have been destroyed and hundreds of shopkeepers ruined.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Frosts of unusual severity are reported from all parts of Europe, and in many districts heavy snow storms prevail.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Snow has fallen here to the depth of several inches.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A large steamer is ashore at Folkestone, where a severe snow storm is raging.

Volunteered to Fight for Portugal.

LISBON, Nov. 28.—The information just received that two hundred Portuguese residents, who have volunteered in Rio Janeiro to fight for Portugal in the event of war with England, are soon to arrive here, is causing the Government much uneasiness. It is feared that their arrival will rekindle popular excitement, and increase the bitterness of the feeling against the English, which the Government has been in every way endeavoring to assuage.

Great Rejoicing in Belgium.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 28.—The Belgian Premier has introduced a bill extending the franchise. This action is a complete surprise. The Radicals are highly elated. The workingmen who had threatened to strike in order to emphasize their demand for universal suffrage have decided to remain at work. There is great rejoicing here and in the other large cities, the streets being crowded with people celebrating the important event.

WRECK OF A BIG STAND.

Fifty of Its Occupants Are Injured at the Great Football Game.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—A distressing accident, which was fortunately not attended by any loss of life, shed a depressing influence upon the Yale-Princeton football game at Eastern Park, Brooklyn.

One of the big extra stands that had been brought into service at the last moment collapsed, and all of its occupants were thrown to the ground. At the time the timbers gave way the seats were not all filled, or else two or three thousand people who were to have been accommodated there would have been precipitated from the structure, and a fearful loss of life would have been inevitable.

As it was, three or four hundred had taken their places on the stand, and of these only a score were women. About 50 persons were injured, and one may not recover from the shock.

The police and ambulance surgeons succeeded in gaining the names and residences of only eleven of the injured. The mishaps consist of broken fingers, bruises and slight cuts. The women on the stand escaped with hardly a scratch. Their clothing was torn and disarranged, and several of them fainted. They were soon revived, however, and left for home.

THE SECOND VICTIM.

Officials at Sing Sing Prison Preparing for Murderer Wood's Electrocution.

SING SING, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The counsel for Wood, the negro murderer who is to be electrocuted next week, will make an effort to-day to have some Judge of the United States Court grant a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that colored men were excluded from the grand and petit juries that indicted and convicted Wood. If the writ is refused it is not likely that any other move will be made.

Warden Brush has about completed all arrangements for the execution. A test yesterday of the the fatal machinery was highly satisfactory. A strong, healthy horse was electrocuted. A current of 1,500 volts was sent through the horse's body. Death was instantaneous—quick as the lighting's flash.

Although the Warden can put Wood to death at any time after midnight Sunday, it is not probable that the execution will take place before the middle of the week. Dr. Carlos McDonald called at the prison yesterday and inspected the machinery. It is not likely that any tests of the apparatus will be made before Sunday, and possibly none will be made until Monday.

Wood sent for Deputy Warden Connaughton before his breakfast and received him with the broadest smile of welcome that he has yet shown to any visitor save Father Creeden and Sister Domenca. Mr. Connaughton inquired what he wished. Wood replied that he wanted to ask him about whom his priest should be at the execution "next week."

"Any one you may choose," replied Mr. Connaughton, with a sympathetic glance at his friendless prisoner.

"Well, den, Mr. Connaughton," was Wood's reply, "I reckon I wants Father Creeden. He's very kind to me. I love him very much, Mr. Connaughton."

"Any other priest, Joe," the good deputy warden inquired.

"No, sah! No, sah! Father Creeden, he's my only friend now, I reckon, sah."

The Adventures of Two Fanwooders Who Missed the Train.

G. R. Brown and R. P. Moore of the Fanwood Club, on their way home from a bowl at Elizabeth the other night, stopped off at Roselle for a game of billiards. The contest was so interesting, they missed the last train and started for home on foot along the track. Upon reaching Cranford, Mr. Brown fell asleep on the station platform and Mr. Moore forgetting him tramped on alone. The former subsequently awoke in time to catch a ride home on a freight train. As he rode along he kept a sharp look out for Moore, but saw nothing of him. It is believed that the latter did not go any further than Westfield, that night.

She Couldn't be Stopped by a Little Thing Like That.

A lady in a party of Plainfield cyclers coming from Fanwood by moonlight, the other evening, was thrown but unhurt. She was racing with a lad when her dress got twisted in her wheel and the accident occurred. One of her skirts was so badly torn that she took it off, threw it over the fence, and mounting her bicycle pushed forward in the race again.

AIMED HIS GUN AT THE FARMER.

A Trespassing Gunner Threatens the Life of a Land-Owner.

Bartell Wormsley, who resides with his family on a farm among the Watchung Mountains, had an experience with a party of hunters Thanksgiving Day that was more suggestive than pleasant. Mr. Wormsley's farm is situated at Smalleytown, about five miles northwest of this city. He has repeatedly put up bills warning hunters against trespassing on his property, but the signs have been as often shot off the trees. Yesterday he saw a party of hunters going across a young peach orchard on his land. Among the party was an ex-officer of the Game Protective Society, and a negro, and a man known as Compton. Farmer Wormsley told the parties that he did not allow anyone to hunt on his land, and that he wanted them to get off. They paid no attention to him, but continued to hunt. He told them again, when Compton said they were on now and would not go off, at the same time pointing his gun at full cock at Wormsley and telling him not to come any nearer or the weapon might go off. Farmer Wormsley told him to shoot if he dared; he himself was unarmed. Compton then handed his gun to one of his companions, and going up to Wormsley he shook his fist in his face and offered to knock his head off. Compton was finally persuaded by his companions to go away. Wormsley is a quiet man and a good citizen. He went to Borough Magistrate Hardy and swore to the foregoing facts, and a warrant was issued for the arrest of Compton on a charge of pointing a deadly weapon at a person with the intent to intimidate. This is a very serious charge, and Compton will have to explain his conduct before the next court that sits at Somerville, if he is apprehended.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Rufus Case, Jr., of East Seventh street, has entered Peddie Institute at Hightstown.

The Rev. C. E. Dunn, of Albany, and family, have been visiting their relatives in this city.

Fred. Messler, of Roseville, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wyckoff, of West Eight street.

Frank Randolph, of Madison avenue, is home from Lehigh University for the Thanksgiving holidays.

The Rev. John F. Steen, of New York, with Mrs. Steen spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Turrill, of Grove street.

John G. Musgrave, of Mercer avenue, has purchased a lot on Sycamore avenue, and will soon erect a handsome residence.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Falls, of Prospect place, Brooklyn, are visiting their daughter, Mrs. Fred Haberle, of Manning avenue.

The Rev. A. Armstrong of South Plainfield has accepted a call to the Baptist church at Avon-by-the-Sea.—Somerville Messenger.

Mrs. Col. James Moore, of Elizabeth, and Mrs. Charles J. Willis, were guests of the Fanwood gentlemen, Tuesday evening, and rode out from New York in their club car.

Miss Cora Weldon of Sherman avenue, North Plainfield, and George A. Clark, of Lowell, Mass., were married by the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, at the bride's home, Monday afternoon at one o'clock.

Alexander Thorn, Wm. N. Pangborn, John T. Case, Wm. H. VanWinkle, David T. Smalley and Abraham King are the North Plainfield members of the new Somerset county panel of petit jurors.

The Rev. John H. Steen, who preached at the Church of the Holy Cross yesterday, was a classmate of the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, of North Plainfield, at the Episcopalian Theological Seminary in Philadelphia.

Jennie Houghton was given a grand reception at The Crescent, yesterday. Over a thousand people crowded the building to see and applaud her. An effort is being made to induce her to appear in Plainfield, at least once more.

At the home of the bride's father, D. N. Force, 76 Summit avenue, North Plainfield, Miss Laura Force was married at noon of Thanksgiving day, to Joseph L. Hummer, of Newark. The Rev. C. B. Mitchell officiated. There was a large company present.

Thanksgiving at Holy Cross.

A large congregation was in attendance at the Church of the Holy Cross yesterday morning, and the services were most impressive. The church was beautifully decorated with sheaves of wheat and other emblems of the harvest-time. The rector, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, was assisted in the services by the Rev. John F. Steen of Ascension chapel, New York, who preached an eloquent and appropriate sermon.

A Pleasure Drive Ends in Death.

The story comes from Bound Brook that James McNabb was out driving with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Chas. McNabb, and her six-months-old child, yesterday, when the horses took fright, ran away, killed the baby, seriously, if not fatally, injured Mrs. McNabb, and fractured McNabb's leg.

If every reader could understand what a remedy for coughs and colds Hires' Cough Cure is, every family in this land would talk its praise. It is destined, for this reason, to be the greatest household medicine in the world. It is pleasant and agreeable. Try it.

THE DEADLY OVERHEAD BRIDGE.

Another Brakeman Narrowly Escapes Death at the Fanwood Cut.

Brakeman McGinn, whose home is near Mauch Chunk, was struck by an overhead bridge at Fanwood, on the Jersey Central Railroad, yesterday, and so seriously cut and bruised about the head and shoulders that he had to be taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he is resting comfortably under Matron Walrod's kindly care. When the bridge struck him he fell flat on the top of the freight car. Had he rolled off he must have been dashed to pieces, as the train was going at a high rate of speed. The car on which he was standing was an unusually high one, of the refrigerator pattern, and as McGinn was a tall man his head struck the timbers of the bridge squarely. The violence of the blow was sufficient to cause death, and it is a wonder the man was not killed outright. A man of ordinary height, on an ordinary car, would have passed safely under the bridge.

What the Metropolis Thinks of Him.

(From the New York World.)

The Plainfield municipal election Tuesday, Dec. 2, is the one topic for discussion in the city at present. That Joseph S. Cutter's chances of winning the office of Mayor are bright is acknowledged by Democrats throughout the city. Mr. Cutter is popular with the business men. He has long been one of them. He is the oldest and one of the city's most successful grocers. Mr. Cutter has never taken a very active part in politics. When Fire Commissioner he was one of the few who were instrumental in bringing about a more complete fire department system.

Two years ago Mr. Cutter's name was placed at the head of the Democratic ticket as the opponent of Job Male, the Republican nominee for Mayor. The record of that election induced his supporters to give him another chance for the office. The Democratic nominee had a great deal to contend with at that election. The Republicans were not divided upon any question, and Mr. Male, the Republican nominee, was a general favorite for many reasons. He had just made a gift of the public library to the people, and as he was very wealthy it was reported that he would "do something" towards the establishment of a grand city municipal building. Mr. Cutter ran on his own merits and made a splendid record. He cut down the Republican majority to about two hundred. The Democrats are confident of placing their nominee in the Mayor's seat this year because Republican dissensions in the Fourth ward threaten to defeat the Republican ticket. In addition to electing their Councilman in the Fourth Ward the Democrats expect to win a Councilman in the Second Ward and possibly one in the First.

Plainfield's New Whistle the Best in the State.

Plainfield's new fire-alarm—a mammoth chime whistle twelve-inches in diameter and two feet tall—has arrived in town, and is on exhibition in one of the windows of A. M. Griffen's hardware store. The whistle has much inherent beauty, as well as usefulness. It is of brass, and its note when sounded, is very musical. The construction of the whistle is such that its tone is very clear, penetrating and far-reaching. It is never annoying, and sounds no louder to an ear near at hand than to one three miles away. It is a very effective fire-alarm and the finest in the State.

The whistle is to be blown by steam, from the roof of the Electric Light W orks Plainfielders Injured in the Wreck.

Two Plainfielders who yelled for Princeton were injured by the collapse of a crowed stand of seats at the Yale-Princeton foot-ball game at Eastern Park, Brooklyn, yesterday. Edward Petrie, of East Sixth street, a student of Princeton in the class of '94, had a hip severely bruised; and Lawrence VanBuren, of East Ninth street, a Princeton graduate, had his right ankle seriously crushed. Both were in the thickest of the crowd, and couldn't avoid getting hurt in that sudden tumble of three thousand people into one big heap.

Arthur Spicer, also of Plainfield, narrowly escaped being crushed by some of the falling timbers.

He Wouldn't Stop and the Horse Ran Away.

A young but very active politician of the first ward, who is also a member of the Crescent League, fell out of a buggy and had his face run over, the other evening. The girl was driving, and she said: "You must stop, or I'll drop the lines." She waited a few minutes and then dropped them.

In reaching for the lines the young man fell over the dash board and the buggy wheels run over his forehead and cut it. The horse ran away and the girl jumped out. She was not hurt much although her clothes were torn. The horse and buggy were afterwards found in the woods.

Several Dwellings Burned.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The carriage works of George M. Brown & Co., together with several dwellings in the village of Clayville were totally destroyed by fire last evening. Loss $20,000; partly covered by insurance.

No Riot at Mannington.

MANNINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 28.—The report of a riot at this place sent out from Wheeling was greatly exaggerated. A sort of free fight took place, but only one person was injured, he being slightly cut in the neck with a knife.

Not Favored by the Clergy.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A dispatch from Dublin says that a movement is on foot having for its object the holding of a number of meetings throughout Ireland on Sunday next for the purpose of expressing confidence in Mr. Parnell. The clergy is opposed to the movement and openly deprecate any such action on the part of the people.

The Czarewitch in India

PARIS, Nov. 28.—A despatch from Bombay states that extensive preparations are being made for the reception of the Czarewitch and the Greek Prince Gorgois on their arrival from Egypt. Officers of the Viceroy's staff will accompany the Czarewitch on his tour of India, and be present at his interviews with the native princes.

Financial Situation at Buenos Ayres.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Later advices from Buenos Ayres represent that the rise in gold is largely artificial and based upon the manipulations of speculators. President Pelligrini has declared that the credit of the Government will be maintained at any cost, and that the circulators of false reports will be punished

MUST ROMANISM RULE OUR COUNTRY?

Some Startling Figures from Dr. Carroll's New Religious Census—The Great Need of Protestant Coalition in the United States.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the Plainfield Seventh-Day Baptist church, and leader of his denomination throughout the country, preached a powerful sermon at the union service in the Methodist Episcopal church yesterday on "The Union of Protestant Christians as Related to the future of Christianity in the United States."

The cry had already gone forth,—the preacher said—from the platform of the Roman Catholic Convention at Baltimore, that the duty of the hour was to make the United States Roman Catholic. The Roman Catholic newspapers of the land were openly teaching that the next Pope ought to come from America, and though the powers of Rome and Europe would probably prevent the consummation of this desire the entire church was a unit in its hope of establishing itself triumphant in America's great republic. The United States was the one country now coveted by the Roman Catholics, and the teachings of the leaders of that faith were that they had no longer anything to fear from the Protestants of the Nation, since the Protestants were so disorganized into scores of differing sects. Here are some figures just obtained from the new religious census returns now being compiled by Dr. H. K. Carroll of North Plainfield:

The number of titles of distinct religious bodies in the United States, nearly all of which should be classed as Protestants, is 131. Fourteen of the leading Protestant groups are subdivided as follows:

	No. of Sects.	No. of Members.
Adventists	7	119,212
Baptists	15	3,976,589
Congregationalists	1	475,608
Episcopalians	2	459,642
Lutherans	1	1,056,000
Methodists	18	4,747,130
Mennonites	4	100,000
Moravians	1	11,219
Presbyterians	13	1,259,234
Quakers	3	83,930
Reformed	3	277,732
Unionistic	2	270,009
Unitarians	7	206,500
Universalists	1	38,780
Total subdivisions	78	Membership 13,079,576

Protestants accord to the Roman Catholics 8,012,970. Protestants accord to the Greek Catholics 10,000. The Roman Catholics claim for themselves 10,000,000.

Here was a striking, startling comparison—the one vast church, with its present tremendous organization, and the power of its centuries, behind it, united into one solid army; the other broken up into many divisions and subdivisions. The Roman Catholics were moving unitedly, concertedly, onward with a power against which human forces were well-nigh irresistible. The Protestants, by their disunion, were making Roman Catholic conquest easy. They could not hope, as Christians and as the enemy of this great foeman worthy of their steel, to see such a mighty army overcome except by a Divine miracle such as they had no right to expect from God until they themselves had done all in their power to further an answer to their prayer by answering that other prayer, of Jesus Christ, that they all should be one even as the Father and Son were one.

Dr. Lewis urged, in forcible language that carried conviction with it, the great need of a confederation of all the different Protestant families, as only in such a way could the encroachments of the Roman Catholics on the State, and the United States, and the civil and religious rights of the people, and the utter defeat of Christianity itself in the United States, be successfully defended.

The Brains (?) of the City.

Here is a portion of a conversation between two advocates of Mr. Gilbert for Mayor, overheard by a merchant of this city in a Central Railroad train last week "Talk about the New Yorkers being in favor of Gilbert! Why shouldn't they? They are the brains of the city and should rule its affairs. Look at that Fourth Ward delegation; a lot of rowdies and hackmen. Then look at the Third Ward which contains the brains of the city."

How do the Plainfield merchants and mechanics like that?

Plainfield Workmen Not Good Enough.

It is generally remembered by Plainfield mechanics that when Mr. Gilbert built his palatial residence, he engaged plumbers from a neighboring city to do the plumbing work laid out by an imported architect.

The worst Nasal Catarrh, no matter of how long standing, is permanently cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

May Kill the Toads, But the Frogs Remain.

It is at first difficult—remarks a Jersey Central Railroad man—to see what is the relation that exists between toads and railroads. That such a relation does exist,—he adds—is seen in the fact that the railroads are destroying the toads. A man who is not very fond of toads might think that there are already too many of them, although agriculturists do not look at the matter in the same light. The toad is a great eater of harmful insects, and it seems that many localities, especially in the railroad gridironed section of Central New Jersey, the toads are disappearing.

When the young toad is able to jump, its principal amusement is to wander around in cool places. Now, it often happens that after a shower it goes to the nearest railroad, climbs up the bank, and manages to reach the top of the rail, from which it generally falls off on the opposite side. Then it crosses the road and tries to jump over the opposite rail, but, being too small, it cannot jump high enough, and, in spite of its efforts, is imprisoned indefinitely between the two rails. It hops along the road, but finally, deprived of food and exhausted by its unsuccessful efforts, it dies. A Jersey Central engineer walking along the track near Dunellen, not long ago counted 300 emaciated bodies of toads in a very short space. A story is related of an immense number of toads that fairly blocked a railroad for some distance, the number being so great that the train could make no progress.

These observations, though interesting, need to be generalized before one can admit that railroads are really a cause of the extermination of the race of toads. In any case, it may be counted as certain that, in spite of the usefulness of toads, the will exert no influence over the further development of railroads. And as long as there are railroads there is bound to be an abundance of frogs.

A Stockholder in Music Hall Who Blames President Gilbert for Everything.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I noticed in your issue of Saturday the 22d inst., the following—"In writing of 'Our Candidate for Mayor,' the Central Times of this week says: 'It seem almost unnecessary to tell the Plainfield voters anything about Alexander Gilbert;' and therefore upon the Times goes on to tell a lot of things about him that are not so."

How can Gilbert have held the position of cashier of the Market National Bank 27 years, if he has only been connected with it 21 years? As to what he has done for the city of Plainfield is all rubbish, however, it compares favorably with what we have read coming from the same source.

What amuses me is that THE PRESS says: "Mr. Gilbert is president of the Music Hall Association, and the one who has personally done for it about all that has ever been done." Now pray tell me what have Gilbert and his associates done? Possibly the shareholders can tell the public something about the returns they receive from their investments in that institution. Speaking for myself I can only say that if the purchase of the swamp, the erection of the building, and the management of the so called Music Hall up to the present time, is a sample of Gilbert's business qualifications, I think he will make a Mayor the tax payers of Plainfield will long remember.

GEORGE M. PHILLIPS,

Westfielders in Burnt Cork.

The Westfield Athletic Company entertained their friends by an amateur minstrel performance in Arcanum Hall Wednesday evening. All the best people of the town took care to be present, and right well were they repaid for their pains. The entertainment was most enjoyable from beginning to end, and the larged audience laughed itself hoarse over the queernesses of Messrs. Smith, Taylor, Earle and Grant who were excellent on the ends. Billy Earle pounded a hole in his tambo in the first part, and another gentleman lost a slipper in the after-piece, but these little features only added to the fun. A pleasant number was the admirable rendering of "If the Waters Could Speak as They Flow" by William Holmes of this city, for whose clear baritone voice the selection seemed to have been made to order.

Gas Light on the Jersey Central.

Travelers on the New Jersey Central Railroad must have noticed that in certain of the cars on certain trains the illumination by gas is quite brilliant—sufficiently so for reading at night. The contrast between such cars and others sometimes adjoining, is very great. The improvement consists in puting in a lamp, the reflective powers of which are most excellent, the general arrangement being upon a new plan. It is a distinct advance for gas to be substituted for oil lamps in the railroad cars. All the car stoves in the country can be abolished, but if the oil lamp remains there will be just as much danger of passengers being roasted to death by fires starting in a collision as before. The new patent light is so excellent that there is no excuse for other railroads to be slow in adopting it.

Gone to Somerville, in Devout Thanksgiving for One Quiet Spot.

Dunellen's idea of fun—serenading a newly-married ouple until all patience has fled—is said to have driven Mr. and Mrs. J. Hamilton from their pleasant new home in that thriving borough, to the Sabbath quiet of Somerville, where they will hereafter reside. Dunellen's young people are getting ready, it is reported, to serenade another new bride and groom.

LITTLE MITCH'S SNAKE.

A South Dakota Child's Strong Affection For a Pet Rattler.

A remarkable instance of a deep affection for each other between a child and a snake is to be seen at Minter's Crossing, a small hamlet lying nine or ten miles south of this place.

Some time ago James Robinson, a small farmer, living at that time near Milltown, some fifty miles from Minter's Crossing, found his little son, aged six, playing with a large ground rattlesnake. Horrified, he rushed to the child and tried to kill the reptile, which, however, succeeded in escaping, while the child, with much indignation, declared that he would not have the snake killed, for it loved him and was good to him. He was found caressing his strange pet again and again, and resisted any attempt to kill it with shrieks and tears, which caused his father to relent.

But so alarmed was he at the friendship, which he regarded almost in the light of a bewitchment of the evil one, that he sold his farm at Milltown and bought the one where he now resides, near Minter's Crossing, in hopes that the child, no longer having his playmate with him, would forget his extraordinary love for it.

They had been established in their new home a couple of months, and were beginning to believe that the plan had proved efficacious, as the boy, absorbed in the novelty of the change, only occasionally seemed to pine for his pet, when one afternoon Robinson, walking in company with two of his neighbors and his little son, saw a snake lying on the side of the road in apparently a dying condition. He seized a stick and was about to hasten its departure, when little "Mitch," as he is called, perceived it also, and with a cry of delight ran to it. The creature raised its head at the boy's voice, and as he knelt by it, wriggled up his body, disappearing in the bosom of his shirt. "Mitch" then joyously informed his father that "his snake had come," and hurried off to revive it with milk.

He asserts positively that it is the same snake he loved at Milltown, and his father is equally sure that it is, so the poor creature must have traveled forty miles in search of its little friend. After this extraordinary proof of its love and fidelity, the Robinsons say they have not the heart to forbid the companionship, so little "Mitch" and his snake are constantly together, the reptile for the most part being twined about the boy's neck or asleep in his bosom. Peter, as the snake is called, while evincing no particular fondness for the rest of the family, and will never approach one of them, lives in peace with them, but resents the advances of a stranger by coiling itself in position to strike if molested.

The story of the singular friendship, which apparently partakes of the miraculous, is vouched for by reliable citizens at Minter's Crossing, to whom the boy and his pet are familiar sights. Peter shares "Mitch's" bed, eats from the same dish, often playfully capturing morsels as the boy is about to put them in his own mouth, and when "Mitch" goes to school goes also, but on condition that he does not leave the book satchel, from whence his flat head with its bright eyes can be seen occasionally stealing out for a sly look at his friend.—Maxwell (S. D.) Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE DISPUTATIOUS BORE.

How He Worries the Traveler on Trains and Boats.

There is a species of the genus fiend, who gets some of his best work in at this season of the year. He is the being who insists upon talking about politics and other kindred topics of controversy on railroad trains, steamboats, and in the various places where the public are obliged to consort. Lately several individuals belonging to this species congregated on one of the harbor boats and sustained for about a half an hour a heated conversation on the tariff, much to the annoyance of their neighbors, who were thus prevented, some from enjoying the beauties of nature, and others from the intellectual feast which their newspapers afforded them.

Indeed so fierce became the discussion between the aforementioned individuals, so high were their voices pitched, and so ridiculous and futile were the arguments by which they endeavored to support their theories, that the more sensitive and intelligent around them were forced to flee madly into the cabin and to forego the pleasures and the benefits which come from breathing the pure air that blows from the sea in the summer morning. Others not less appreciative of the horrors of their situation, but more pugnacious than those who fled before the angry disputants, stuck to their ground, and from them came every now and then deep-throated murmurs which sounded very much like threats. We feel sure that if they only had had a leader to lead them on to a vindication of their wrongs they would have thrown every member of that tariff-wrangling group to the bottom of the sea. The disputants, however, were so deeply absorbed in their discussion that they were serenely unconscious of the danger which threatened them. They were last seen after the boat had arrived at its wharf and most of the passengers had disembarked, sitting in their seats, still vociferating and gesticulating, in a white heat of argumentation. It is quite possible that they are still there, spoiling the enjoyment of the promenades of pleasure-seekers who may take trips on that boat to-day.

There is no doubt about it, something must be done to suppress the fiend who disputes in public. Society is not safe while he is permitted to exist. It would be impossible to enumerate all the injury which he does to suffering humanity. Nervous prostration, hysteria, even rabid mania, are known to result from his machinations. Look out for him. At this season of the year he is as dangerous as a mad dog.—Boston Traveller.

—"That's queer," mused Mr. Fangle, as he sat reading his newspaper. "Here Smith, Smith & Smith say in their advertisement that they are having a great run in colored ginghams, and a little farther down they warrant the ginghams not to run. I shall tell my wife to be careful when she trades there."

DOUBTING A SAMSON.

The Great Western Giant Proves That He is Entitled to the Name.

ON the day preceding the arrival of a circus at a certain good-sized town in Ohio, a "strong man," who had a week's lay-off from the museum circuit, dropped down on a visit to some of his relatives. There was no discount on him as "a marvel of strength," and the wood-cut which pictured him throwing a bull over a six-rail fence was not much of an exaggeration. As soon as it was discovered that he had no particular scruples against the flowing bowl, the boys set out to have a little fun. Early in the forenoon of circus day an alleged circus man waited on "the great Western giant," and intimated that he was a fraud from way back, and that his marvelous feats of muscle were tricks and delusions. This had the effect we hoped for, and four or five glasses of beer did the rest.

Soon after noon the strong man sailed down to the circus grounds to demand an apology. The people had begun buying tickets, and the circus officials were too busy to talk. The way they ignored his presence made the strong man madder than ever, and he started for the entrance. The two men stationed there tried to prevent his ingress, but he threw one into a farmer's wagon and the other over a lemonade stand and entered the tent. Six of the circus men now rallied on the center, but the struggle didn't last two minutes. He flung them along and aloft as if playing with the clubs.

"Hey, R-u-b-e!" sounded the tocsin, and every single man connected with the circus rallied in response. As they came with clubs, neck-yokes and wagon stakes the strong man looked about for some weapon. There was a long-tailed bull-dog lying under the sacred cow's cage, and he grabbed him by the tail and widened the circle and finally broke through it, smashing every man who opposed him. When clear of the circle he pushed a baby elephant off her legs, upset a candy wagon, tore down a section of seats about forty feet long, and appeared outside to exclaim:

"All fraud and delusion, is it? Haven't any moral right to my title, eh? Well, mebbe I haven't, but I guess this crowd won't dispute it!"

And he pulled the ticket wagon over on its beam ends, flung a bale of hay into a side show and took the middle of the road to walk back to the hotel.—N. Y. Sun.

Hurled Over the Falls.

A man was rowing a boat above the Great Falls in the smooth and placid water. All unconscious of his danger, he allowed himself to drift with the current, which was at first slight, gradually increasing in momentum, until at last his rapid whirling and the sullen roar of the cataract brought to his suddenly awakened senses a full realization of his awful peril—too late. He was seen in the boat for a moment poised upon the brink of the abyss, and then he was plunged headlong to destruction.

What a lesson can be drawn from this terrible fate through heedless carelessness! Too often we neglect a little weakness, a slight nervousness, the tired brain, sleepless and restless nights, from which we wake unrefreshed, a weary, languid feeling, headache, confusion of mind, dullness, loss of memory, strange sensations, &c., not knowing that nervous and mental prostration, with that most awful fate—insanity—will result. How slow we are to understand the danger in the cold feet and limbs, the slight numbness, trembling, pricking sensation, or extreme weariness of the limbs, and realize that sure paralysis will follow on neglect. We often disregard the weakness and languor of nervous debility and malaria, the disorders of the stomach, liver or kidneys, until chronic, if not fatal, disease fastens upon our systems.

Do not, like the careless boatman above the falls, allow yourselves to drift placidly on the river of life towards sure destruction. It is sheerest folly to do so, for all these nervous and physical ailments can be perfectly and completely cured by that wonderful remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura, which can be purchased at any druggist's for $1.00 per bottle. The remedy is purely vegetable and harmless, and will be found the greatest brain, nerve and blood invigorant in the world.

Cure After Nervous Exhaustion from Overwork.

From constant worry over business matters I suffered from loss of sleep, and became so nervous that I was entirely unfitted for my business, and was compelled to give it up. In fact, I feared insanity. Seeing Dr. Greene's Nervura spoken of so highly, I obtained a bottle and began its use. The effect was almost magical. I could again sleep; mental composure, appetite and strength returned. Six bottles of this remedy cured me, and I have remained well to this date. I have recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura to many of my friends and neighbors, and have yet to learn of a failure to obtain good results. S. W. NOURSE, Hudson, Mass.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

"CUTE."

Respectfully Dedicated to the Young Lady of the Period.

Where'er I go, by night or day,
My heart is in despair,
Because this word of usage gets
By far too large a share.

A house is "cute," a bonnet, too,
A ribbon or a gown;
And yesterday I heard that "B——
Is just the 'cutest' town."

A girl is "cute" and so is he
On whom she deigns to smile.
His "cute" mustache, his "cute" white hands
Her tender heart beguile.

A river's "cute," a mountain, too,
A leaping waterfall;
But, think of it, a picnic is
"The cutest thing of all."

Alas! since lips of old and young
So oft this sound repeat,
I wildly yearn to cast it out
Among "words obsolete."

But, if the things you call "so cute,"
Should "cute" one day become,
Now, don't you think the world would be Exceedingly hum-drum?

—Clara J. Denton, in America.

IN CENTRAL AMERICA.

A Scientist Treed by Swarms of Deadly Tarantulas.

Some of Them Big as Turtles and Venomous as Rattlesnakes—The Guide Killed—Saved by a Riata and the Blue-Black Wasps.

R. J. S. DAVIS, who had been exploring Central American mines, writes to the San Francisco Examiner as follows regarding a remarkable adventure.

On the afternoon of the fourth day we camped in a little opening, clear except for grass. This we soon burned off. We had just finished supper, and I was sitting at the base of a tree smoking my pipe, when an enormous tarantula came out of the grass into the cleared circle. He was positively the largest specimen I had ever seen, and as the slanting rays of the sun caught him I noticed a curious, dull, indefinite, reddish line down his back. I regretted that I had not the means to preserve it, but Manuel settled my regrets by crushing it with a billet of wood. It had hardly ceased moving when another and equally as large one appeared at the other end of the burned patch. I did not fear them much, as I wore heavy leather leggings reaching to my hips.

"We have made a bad camp, Manuel," I said; "there seems to be many tarantulas here."

"One place is about as another," he answered in Spanish; "they usually go by twos."

He appeared more troubled, however, than his careless answer seemed to indicate, and while I killed the second unwelcome visitor he began to poke around in the grass with a long branch. He uncovered several more of the great spiders and killed them; when he turned around there were fully half a dozen of them in the clear space. They fastened on to the dead ones and seemed to suck their blood.

"We must get out of this!" screamed the Indian.

At this moment our remaining mule began to struggle and kick. He soon broke his picket rope and disappeared. Then I became aware of a steady rustling in the grass. More tarantulas came out.

"I have heard it from the Indians," cried my guide. "It is a devil's army. They say that the people who live in the dead cities were killed by them, and that no one can live there now. They come by thousands, like the red ants, and leave nothing alive where they pass. I thought it was a squaw story. We must fight them with fire."

He seized a flaming brand from the camp-fire and yelled to me to do likewise. He tried to fire the grass on all sides of us, but where the trees grew it was too rank and wet and the fires we started would not go.

Meanwhile the spiteful spiders became more and more numerous. I crushed one at least of them at every step I took. Many of them bit at my leggings and hung there by their fangs. We turned our firebrands to crushing the tarantulas, but they seemed to come thicker than we could beat them off.

"I am bitten!" I heard the Indian scream. I passed him my flask. I could do nothing more for him, and dropping my stick I started to run. Every step the grass seemed to bring me in worse quarters. I tried every direction, but they seemed everywhere. I noticed that they were in the bushes and on the grass, so high that my leggings would not protect me, and presently I found myself back at the camp. There at least they could not reach me without climbing up. The ground was perfectly black with them. Poor Manuel was down on one knee and the great insects were all over him. He seemed crazy, and I have no doubt his mind was nearly gone with terror and the pain of the bites.

I could barely keep the tarantulas from getting above my leggings. Suddenly it occurred to me that I might find safety in one of the trees. I knew that I would soon be exhausted if I remained among the black beasts, and that would end it. In a moment I had my arms about a small tree, I crushed the insects that clung to my legs against the bark as I dragged and scrambled up. A dozen feet from the ground there was a branch from which we had hung some small game I had shot. I pulled myself up on this branch and got the first moment's rest I had had since the tarantulas first appeared. I had had no time to think before this, but now I began to realize what had happened. It seemed more like a nightmare than any thing real. I looked down and almost fell off my branch at the horrid sight below me. My Indian was now fairly on the ground. I could not see him for the poisonous things that covered him, but the irregular black mass, wriggled and squirmed like a wounded snake, and I knew he was not yet out of his agony. On every side were more tarantulas hungrily searching for more victims. Their crushed fellows were almost torn to pieces, so fierce were they in their hunger. They were all enormous, some of them as big as turtles, and when the sun struck them I could see the red line that distinguished them from the non-gregarious species that are familiar in other places. They crawled over one another in their desire to find something into which to sink their fangs. Poor Manuel's writhing body was the objective point of most of them. They fought fiercely for a spot of flesh where they could strike, and every movement of the still living man seemed to make them the more fierce.

It did not take me as long to notice all this as it does to describe it, and I soon saw that I was not yet safe from the horrible fate that had overtaken my guide.

The insects began to crawl up the tree, though not in any considerable numbers at first. I brushed them down with a small branch, and those that were hurt at all were immediately set upon by their fellows where they fell.

My recital of these things may seem tame, but I have no pen to describe the awful horror of it all. There were about two hours of daylight left me. I knew this, and wondered what I could do in the dark. Then I remembered reading that snakes or centipedes would not cross a hair rope, and I thought that perhaps the same rule might apply to tarantulas.

The game was swinging from the branch by a horsehair riata, and it took me a very few minutes to cut the rabbits loose and wind the rope about the trunk just below me. Pretty soon more of the big spiders came up. Manuel was quiet now at last and they wanted another victim.

My hair rope did some good. They could not swarm over it in such numbers that I could not sweep them back with my branch.

How long I stayed there fighting the insects back I do not know, but the light was fading when I noticed a commotion among the tarantulas. At the same time I observed a number of blue-black wasps darting about. I recognized them as belonging to the Hymenoptera family and realized that they were the tarantula hawks of which I had read. In ten minutes the four or five wasps had become hundreds, and five minutes later there was not a tarantula to be seen, except the numerous dead ones at the foot of the tree.

Manuel's body, swollen and discolored by the venom of the spiders, stared at me. I waited an hour and then came down.

It took me eight days to reach Nevada, and on the way I did not see a single tarantula.

How Silk Is Measured.

The size or substance of a silk thread is usually estimated by deniers. The ounce troy and the ounce pois de marc of Lyons, by the latter of which silk is tested in France and Italy, are equal in weight, but are differently subdivided. The ounce troy is divided into 20 pennyweights of 24 grains each, making 480 grains in the ounce; the ounce of Lyons, pois de marc, is divided into 24 drams, which, multiplied by 24, equals 576 deniers. The denier is, therefore, one-sixth less than the grain troy. The English reel is 818 bouts of 44 inches, and equals 1,300 yards. The French, 400 ells, or 475 meters, equals 520 yards. The standard of silk measure is about 400 yards; that length of a single filament from China cocoons will weigh 2 deniers, and from French and Italian 2½. A 10-denier silk will, then, be the combined thread of four or five cocoons.—Chicago Herald.

A Thoughtful Wife.

"Did you ascend the Eiffel tower while you were in Paris?"

"No, my wife wouldn't let me. She was afraid I might fall off."

"How thoughtful!"

"Yes, you know there's a clause in my life insurance policy which cancels the payment in case of accident on foreign soil. Thoughtful woman my wife." —Texas Siftings.

THE JACK-POT.

The Party All Chipped In, But Tom Won It.

HERE were five of us in the party—six, counting Long Tom, the guide. After two days' hard climbing, which the burros endured with exemplary fortitude, we arrived at the little valley high up in the mountains, through which threaded the trout stream.

"Jest you all go over into the cabin there and make yourself comf'able, while I 'tend to gettin' this stuff unpacked," said Long Tom; "there ain't no one there. My pardner, he's down below."

"The cabin appears to be two cabins," said the Colonel, as we approached it.

"That is for economy in rigge-poles," said the doctor; "sleeping apartments on one side and kitchen on the other. In the space between, you keep your fishing-tackle and worms."

We entered the right-hand section of the twin cabin, which proved to be the kitchen side. There was not much furniture—a table of hewn logs, a chair of bent saplings, and a rough bench.

However, we did not notice such furniture as there was, for each member of the party, as he stepped over the high threshold, had his attention instantly attracted by the stove, and a brief roundelay of ejaculations went along the group.

"Well, that staggers me," said the stock-broker.

"H'm," said the professor, in a mysterious tone, and rubbing his chin.

The stove was a plain, small cooking-range, rather old and rusty. The strange thing about it was its position. Its abbreviated legs stood upon large cedar posts, which were planted in the floor and were over four feet in height. This brought the stove away up in mid-air, so that the top was about on a level with the face of the Colonel, and he was a six-footer.

We formed in a circle about the stove and stared at it as solemnly as a group of priests around a sacrificial tripod. We felt of the posts—they were firm and solid, showing that the mysterious arrangement was a permanent, not a temporary, one. Then we all bent our necks and opened our mouths to look up at the hole in the roof, through which the stove-pipe vanished.

Suddenly the stock-broker burst out into a laugh.

"Oh, I understand it now," said he.

"Understand what?" asked the Colonel, sharply.

"Why Long Tom has his stove hoisted up so high from the floor."

"So do I," said the doctor; "but I sus-

"THE REASON'S SIMPLE ENOUGH," SAID LONG TOM.

pect that my explanation is not the same that any one else would offer."

"Well, I will bet that I am right," said the stock-broker, "and put up the money."

"I am in this," said the judge; "I have a clear idea about that stove and will back it."

"Make it a jack-pot," said the Colonel; "I want to take a hand."

The stock-broker drew a small yellow coin out of his pocket and dropped it on the table.

"He has the stove up there," he said, "to get a better draught. In this rarefied mountain air there is only a small amount of oxygen to the cubic inch, and combustion is more difficult to secure than in the lower latitudes. I have heard that if you get high enough up, you can't cook an egg—that is, I mean, water won't boil—or something like that," he continued, thrown into sudden confusion by the discovery that the professor's eye was fixed upon him with a sarcastic gaze.

"Is that supposed to be science?" demanded the professor.

"Well," said the stock-broker, doggedly, "never mind the reasons. Experience is probably good enough for Long Tom. He finds that he gets a better draught for his stove by having it up in mid-air, so he has it there."

"The right explanation," began the professor, "is the simplest. My idea is that—"

"Excuse me," interrupted the stock-broker, tapping the table; "are you in this pot?"

The professor made a deposit, and proceeded:

"Have you noticed that our host is a very tall man? Like most men of his height, he hates to bend over. If the stove were near the floor, he would have to stoop down low when he whirled a flap-jack or speared a rasher of bacon. Now he can stand up and do it with ease. Your draught theory is no good; the longer the pipe, if it is straight, the better the fire will burn."

"Professor," remarked the Colonel, "I regret to have to tell you that your money is gone. Long Tom told me, on the way up, that his partner did all the cooking, and he is a man of rather short stature." The Colonel then paid his compliments to the jack-pot, and continued: "Now, my idea is that the stove heats the room better there than on the floor. It is only a cooking-stove, to be sure, but when the winter is cold, it makes this room comfortable. Being up in the middle of the space, it heats it all equally well, which it could not do if it were down below."

The doctor greeted this theory with a loud laugh. "Colonel," he said, "you are wild—way off the mark. Hot air rises, of course, and the only way to disseminate it is to have your stove as low as possible. According to your idea, it would be a good plan to put the furnace in the attic of a house instead of in the basement."

"I think," said the Colonel, "that I could appreciate your argument better if you would ante."

"The pot is mine," said the doctor, as he deposited his coin; "you will all adopt my idea the moment you hear it, and Long Tom, who will be here in a minute, will bear me out. This room is very small; it has but little floor space, and none of it goes to waste. Now, if he had put the stove down where we expected to find it, Long Tom could not have made use of the area underneath, as you see he has done. On all sides of the supporting posts, you will notice, there are hooks, on which he hangs his pans and skillets. Underneath, there is a kitchen closet for pots and cooking-utensils of various sorts. What could be more convenient? Under your ordinary stove there is room only for a poker and a few cockroaches."

The judge, who had been listening to the opinions offered by the others with the same grim smile that occasionally ornamented his face when he announced that an objection was overruled, now stepped forward and dropped a coin on the table. He then rendered his decision as follows:

"It appears that none of you have noticed the forest of hooks in the roof just over the stove. They are not in use at present, but they are there for some purpose. I imagine that during the winter huge pieces of venison and bear's meat dangle over the stove, and are dried for use later. Now, if the stove were on the floor, it would be too far from the roof to be of service in this way."

"Here comes old Tom," shouted the Colonel, who had stepped to the open door while the judge was speaking.

The old trapper put down the various articles of baggage with which his arms were loaded and came into the kitchen-cabin where we all stood. He glanced at the group and then at the stilted stove in our midst.

"I see you air all admirin' my stove," said he, "and I'll bet you've been a-wonderin' why it is up so high."

"Yes, we have," said the professor; "how did you know it?"

"People most allus generally jest as soon as they come into the place begin to ask me about it—that's how I knowed."

"Well, why is it up so high?" demanded the stock-broker, impatiently, with a side glance at the well-developed jack-pot on the table.

"The reason's simple enough," said Long Tom, with a grin that showed his bicuspids; "you see, we had to pack all this stuff up here from down below on burros. Originally there was four j'ints of that stove-pipe, but the cinch wasn't drawed tight enough on the burro that was carryin' them, and two of 'em slipped out and rolled down the mountain. When we got here and found that there wasn't but two pieces left, I reckoned that I would have to kinder h'ist the stove to make it fit the pipe—so I jest in and h'isted her. And thar she is yet. Say, what's all this here money on the table for?"

There was a deep silence which lasted so long that Tom ventured to repeat his question about the money.

"It is a jack-pot," said the doctor, sadly, "and as near as I can make out, it belongs to you."—Fred Bayham, in The Argonaut.

PREPARING TO DIE

Murderer Woods is Resigned to His Fate.

HE REALIZES HIS POSITION.

Warden Brush Sends Out His Invitations to the Electrocution.

Only Twenty-seven Persons Invited—An Effort to Prevent the Details of His Execution from Being Made Public—Newspaper Men Present Looking for the News—The Scientist's Conviction.

SING SING, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Joseph Wood, colored, aged 22, is engaged night and day in preparing his soul to meet its God. He no longer measures his span of life by years, months, or even weeks, for when the sun sets to-night it will end the last full week he is to spend on earth. The life which he forfeited to the law when in April, 1889, he killed Charles Ruffin near Shaft No. 20 on the new aqueduct, is soon to be taken from him, and Warden Brush of Sing Sing Prison may in his discretion fix any hour after midnight of Sunday for his execution.

Wood is one of the most interesting criminals ever sentenced in this community, and the crime for which he suffers was one the most commonplace imaginable, being nothing more than the simple shooting of a negro desperado, with whom he had quarrelled. His lawyer, R. J. Haire, of New York city, made a desperate fight in the courts to save his client's life, but one judge after another decided against him, and now Wood's case seems hopeless. The condemned man realizes this.

The suit which he will wear when he sits in the chair of death is all ready, but has not been presented to him yet. It consists of a dark coat, vest and trousers. There has been a question raised whether the thick growth of hair peculiar to his race will interfere with the current when the wires are applied to his head. The electricians and experts say that his hair will be chopped very closely to the scalp, like it was on the back of the horse that was instantly killed the other day. The scientists have not decided yet the manner of applying the electrodes.

The invitations were sent out to-day. Warden Brush refuses to make public the names of the 27 men who are to be present, and says that he will use every means in his power to prevent the details of the grim event from being made public. The newspapers, on the other hand, are making elaborate preparations to outwit him, and each of the great New York dailies has a special correspondent here laying plans to get full particulars. Among those who are now thought to have been invited are Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, Dr. Rockwell, Professor Landry, Deputy Coroner Jenkins, District Attorney Fellows, Recorder Smyth and Martine.

It is probable that Warden Brush will follow Warden Durston's example and make an end of Wood's life early Wednesday morning. It may be a day earlier, but the indications now are that it will be Wednesday morning before it is known if Wood will die an easier death in the electric chair than did Kemmler.

CLERK DICKEY RESIGNS.

The New Hampshire Legislature Will Choose S. J. Jewett in His Place.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 29.—The resignation of George A. Dickey, clerk of the House of Representatives, which was handed to Governor Goodell, simplifies the Legislative situation. His successor will be S. J. Jewett, of Laconia, who will receive the full Republican vote at the opening of the special session.

The Democrats will be united in opposition to the passage of the bill instructing the clerk as to the methods of preparing the roll of the next House, and as there are enough Republicans who take the same position to prevent its passage, the only business transacted will be the election of a clerk and assistant.

Daring Escape of a Convict.

SING SING, Nov. 29.—Charles Brown, alias Charles Brennan, sent up from New York City for four years in the State prison here for grand larceny, made his escape during the morning. Brown had two keys, which he could not have got without collusion with some one employed about the prison. He opened two doors, barred them after him, scale the walls, and jumped into the river, then swimming to a place of safety where he must have had friends with dry clothes. His escape was discovered an hour after his departure. E. J. Douglass, the guard in the yard at the time of the escape, has been suspended.

8,000 Miners Will Go Out.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 29.—A special from Birmingham, Ala., says that all the coal miners in Alabama, some 8,000 in number, have been ordered on strike Monday, Dec. 1. Some of the men are not pleased at the order, but the leaders say the men will all go out. Some days ago a committee of the Mine Workers' Union asked for an advance in wages, which the operators refused to grant, and orders for a general strike were issued.

Sentenced to be Electrocuted.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29. — Martin D. Loppy, who was convicted of murder in the first degree for killing his wife Esther on July 4 last, was sentenced to the death penalty to-day. The time set for the execution is within the week beginning January 3, and Sing Sing the place.

Want Representation in '92.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Representative Vandever of California, who is in the city, says that the popular sentiment in the extreme west is much in favor of having a representative on the Presidential ticket in the next campaign.

EDUCATORS IN COUNCIL.

Second Annual Convention of the Middle States Institutions.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 29—The second annual convention of representatives from the educational institutions of the Middle States and Maryland met in Murray Hall at 11 o'clock. About fifty delegates were present, representing thirty-five educational institutions. President C. K. Adams of Cornell University delivered the opening address. President D. C. Gilman, John Hopkins University and President Francis L. Patton of Princeton were the referees.

Papers were read by Prof. Francis C. Stooddard of the University of the City of New York, Prof. Simon N. Patton of the University of Pennsylvania and Prof. Melville Dewey of the University of the State of New York. The convention at 1.30 p.m. took a recess until 3 o'clock.

The afternoon session opened with a conference on the methods of university education. The referees were Provost William Pepper, of the University of Pennsylvania, and President Seth Low, of Columbia College. Papers were read by President James G. Welling, of the Columbian University; Bishop John J. Keane, of the Catholic University of America. President T. L. Seip, Muhlenburg College; President George E. Reed, Dickinson College, and Prof. J. G. Shurman, of Cornell University. Interesting discussions were entered into upon a number of subjects. The convention will resume its sessions Monday.

The delegates were this evening entertained at a reception given by President and Mrs. Patton.

The Secretary of the Treasury's Report

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The forthcoming report of the Secretary of the Treasury will contain several tabulated statements showing as nearly as is possible the exact amounts of the various kinds of money in actual circulation among the people at several different periods from 1870 to the present time. From these tables it is shown that during the twenty years from October 1, 1870, to October 1, 1890, the total increase of circulation was over $727,000,000, making an average increase per month of $3,032,336, and an increase per capita of $4.99, the total circulation per capita in 1870 being $19.97, and in 1890 $23.96. During the last ten years the average monthly increase was $3,966,992, and the increase per capita $3.59.

Overruled the Demurrer.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Judge Lawrence, of the Supreme Court, has overruled the demurrer interposed by the defendants in the suit of Wm. E. D. Stokes against Anson Phelps Stokes and others for an accounting of his shares of the one-fifth interest of his father, James Stokes, in the banking firm of Phelps, Stokes, & Co. He asks for a judgment of $180,000, claiming that in January, 1880, a year before his father died, the latter assigned to him one-fifth of his interest in the firm. The defendants are allowed to answer.

Gen. Miles More Hopeful.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Gen Miles and Adjutant-General Williams had a long consultation preparatory to the departure of the former for Washington, where he will present his views en the Indian situation to the Secretary of War. No dispatches have been received at army headquarters since the one at midnight from Gen. Ruger stating that Brooke telegraphed everything quiet. It is the opinion of Gen. Miles that each day is bringing the "scare" near its end.

Senator Quay Back Again.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Senator Quay arrived here to-day, looking much improved in health. He refuses to talk about politics, but has any number of good fish stories to relate. He says he caught twenty-one tarpans during his Florida trip. The largest of them weighed 150 pounds. He claims to have discovered a new tarpan course on the west coast of Florida, tarpans heretofore having been caught on the east coast.

Lawson's Election Will be Contested.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Congressman Bowden, of the Second District of Virginia, has notified the House Committee on Elections that he will contest the election of John W. Lawson, his Democratic opponent, to the Fifty-second Congress, on the ground that voters in Republican precincts were prevented from voting by dilatory tactics practiced by Democratic election officers.

Boat Found, Men Missing.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Wm. Blythe and Harlan Bennett, of Walcott, with James Ferguson and Calvin F. Campbell, of Oswego, went hunting in a boat on Sodus Bay, sixteen miles from here yesterday. This morning the boat was found on the beach, and the men are missing.

King Kalakau's Visit.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Advices by the steamer Australia state that King Kalakua is coming to San Francisco on the cruiser Charleston and will arrive the latter part of next week. The journey is made solely in the interest of his health and will not extend beyond California.

DR. KOCH'S SECRET

The Composition of His Lymph His Private Property.

PRUSSIA TO GIVE ASSISTANCE.

An Adequate Grant to be Made for the Consumption Cure.

The Surgeons of the German Army Corps Summoned to Berlin—They Will Decide Whether the Treatment Shall be Used in the Army Hospitals—The Charges Against Dr. Levy.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Dr. Bergmann, in a lecture last night, declared that the secret of the composition of Professor Koch's curative lymph was the exclusive property of Professor Koch. Dr. Bergmann illustrated the degrees of fever after each injection, and explained the quantity of lymph required in the various cases.

The Government of Prussia will shortly introduce a bill in the Diet providing for the establishment of an institute of bacteriology, at which Professor Koch may pursue his studies. Connected with the institute will be five infirmaries, containing 150 beds. After alloting to Professor Koch an adequate grant for his discovery, the Government will undertake the work of producing the lymph.

The surgeon-generals of all the German army corps have been summoned to Berlin to decide whether the Koch treatment shall be used in the army hospitals.

Dr. Levy has requested that a medical court of honor be appointed to investigate the charges against him of having sold Prof. Koch's curative lymph at exorbitant rates. Dr. Danelius denies that he asked or received any fees for injections of the lymph. It is estimated that 750 patients are now in this city undergoing treatment by this new method.

Home for Opium Eaters.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29.—Mr. Hascal L. Taylor, a millionaire of Buffalo, N. Y., has purchased Radnor Park, in the western suburbs of the city, for $20,000. Mr. Taylor proposes to establish an asylum for the cure of persons addicted to the opium habit. Dr. Eugene Hamilton, of Buffalo, who made a cure in the case of a person in whom Mr. Taylor was deeply interested after the patient had been given up by other physicians, will have charge of the institution.

Convention of Railroad Officials.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—It was stated that Jay Gould has undertaken the work of bringing the railroad officials together and that he was engaged in getting signatures to a call for a meeting of brokers and railroad presidents some day next week. A large number of officials of western roads are now in this city. President Miller, of the St. Paul, and President Cable, of the Rock Island, is expected to-morrow.

A Minister Kills Himself.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 29.—John H. Seckler, of 135 William street, attempted to murder his wife last night, but failed to do so, and then tried to end his own life. After accusing his wife with being too friendly with other men, Steckler pulled a revolver, fired at his wife and without waiting to see the result, turned the revolver toward his own head and fired a bullet into his brain. He was removed to the Fitch Hospital.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

GAGGED WITH A CHISEL.

Fiendish Work of Burglars in a Pennsylvania Oil District.

OIL CITY, Pa., Nov. 29.—Particulars of an outrageous assault and robbery at Parker have been reported to the police here. Burglars met John Duff, of Parker, on the street early one night last week, knocked him insensible, and, filling his mouth with mud, carried him into his office. When he regained consciousness they extorted from him the combination of the safe, and by bungling failed to open it. They then tied up Duff and gagged him by driving a knot in his mouth with a chisel, which broke in a number of his teeth; then laid him on the bed, and while some stood guard the others filed the lock off the safe, blew it full of powder, wet the bod clothes and curtained the safe with them to deaden the sound. Then they fired the fuse and the door was blown off. They got nothing from the safe, but secured $3 from Duff's trousers' pockets, a watch and revolver, overlooking $93 in his hip pocket and over $400 in the bureau drawer.

After the burglars left Duff succeeded in releasing his hands by means of the door-latch and untied the other knots. He went down town for aid to the drug store, a bloody, bedraggled, and hardly recognizable by his friends. Three men were arrested on suspicion of being parties to the deed. They are believed to be the right men. Duff is a well-known oil operator. He formerly ran a machine shop at Parker, and sleeps in the office of the works, boarding at the Adams House. He is badly cut up and beaten, his face being cut and his teeth knocked in, besides being badly broken up by the shock. He was so badly hurt that he was unable to open the safe for the robbers.

RIOT AT A PRIZE FIGHT.

Pistols Drawn, Slungshots Used and Fist Blows Indulged In.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 29.—A prize fight between Billy Gibbs, of Kansas City, and Dick Moore, of St. Paul, this afternoon, ended in a riot. The scene of the fight was an open field three miles from this city. The battle was witnessed by 150 sports. But two rounds were fought and both were lively.

In the first Gibbs fouled Moore twice, but the claims of Moore's seconds were ignored by the referee in deference to the spectators, many of whom had paid $10 each to witness the fight and wanted to see some slugging. In the second round, after a lively exchange of blows, Moore landed one that sent Gibbs on his knees. While Gibbs was down Moore struck him again, and this proved to be a knock-out blow.

Cries of "foul" rent the air. The crowd broke over the ropes and a general melee ensued, in which the seconds and spectators took a hand. Moore swung his right on one of Gibbs' seconds. Pistols were drawn, slungshots used, and fists blows freely exchanged. It would have been worth the referee's life to have announced his decision and he wisely informed the crowd that he would render it at 9 o'clock to-night.

A Battle to the Death.

ATCHISON, Kan., Nov. 29.—George Weston, an expressman, quarreled with his wife the other night over the latter's intimacy with George Onans, colored. Finally, a blow from the husband's weapon produced a wound from which she has just died. Weston was badly injured, his head and face being covered with gashes.

Y., Nov. 29.—The approaching finish fight between Edward Gorman, a clever local lightweight, and an unknown backed by Robert Wright, of Detroit, is exciting a great deal of interest in sporting circles. PARNELL'S APPEAL

He Does Not Refer to His Present Difficulties.

EVICTED TENANTS HIS ISSUE.

He Discovers a Liberal Scheme to Drive Him from Political Power.

He Conceived the Idea of an Irish Parliamentary Party Sixteen Years Ago—He is Confident of Obtaining Home Rule—Not Favorable to Any Compromise Obtained Through the Liberals.

TO THE IRISH PEOPLE:

The integrity and independence of a section of the Irish Parliamentary party having apparently been sapped and destroyed by the wire pullers of the Liberal party, it has become necessary for me, as leader of the Irish party, to take counsel with you; and having given you the knowledge which is in my possession, to ask your judgment upon a matter which it now devolves solely upon you to decide. The letter of Mr. Gladstone to Mr. Morley, written for the purpose of influencing the decision of the Irish party in the choice of their leader, and claiming for the Liberals and their leaders the right of veto upon that choice, is the immediate cause of that address; to remind you and your Parliamentary representatives that Ireland considers the independence of her party as her only safeguard within the constitution, and above and beyond all other considerations whatever, the threat in that letter, repeated so insolently on many English platforms and in numerous British newspapers, that unless Ireland concedes this right of veto to England she will indefinitely postpone her chance of obtaining Home Rule, compels me, while not for a moment admitting the slightest probability of such loss, to put before you information which until now, so far as my colleagues are concerned, has been solely in my possession, and which will enable you to understand the measure of the loss with which you are threatened unless you consent to throw me to the English wolves now howling for my destruction.

Mr. Parnell dwells at length upon the Liberal Home Rule scheme and Mr. Gladstone's views gathered at two-hours' conversation at Hawarden. He makes a particular point of the question of evicted tenants and concludes his manifesto as follows:

"I have repeatedly pledged myself to stand by these evicted tenants and that they shall not be allowed to suffer, and I believe that the Irish people throughout the world will support me in this policy. Sixteen years ago I conceived the idea of an Irish parliamentary party independent of all English parties. Ten years ago I was elected leader of the independent Irish parliamentary party. During these ten years this party has remained independents, and because of its independence it has forced upon the English people the necessity of granting home rule to Ireland.

I believe that the party will obtain home rule—only provided that it remains independent of any English party. I do not believe that any action of the Irish people in supporting me will endanger the home rule cause or postpone the establishment of an Irish Parliament. But even if the danger with which we are threatened by the liberal party of to-day were to be realized, I believe that the Irish people throughout the world would agree with me that the postponement would be preferable to a compromise of our national rights by the acceptance of a measure which would not realize the aspirations of our race."

The Liberal Programme.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—In the event of the Irish meeting on Monday favoring Mr. Parnell, a movement will immediately occur among the Liberals to give English reforms precedence over Home Rule, and a meeting in favor of reverting to the programme of 1885 will be summoned. Sir W. Harcourt will succeed Mr. Gladstone in the event of the latter's retirement.

Resent Parnell's Manifesto.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—An important section of the Irish party met in the House of Commons last night and resolved on active steps to combat the influence of Mr. Parnell's manifesto, the issuance of which they resent as a breach of faith. The meeting adjourned in order to obtain the opinion of the American colleagues.

SENATOR HOAR'S DENIAL.

He Never Said That Free Trade Was the Desired End of Tariff Legislation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Senator Geo. Hoar writes to the Secretary of the Home Market Club of Boston, in refutation of the following editorial statement of a Boston paper:

"And even so staunch a Republican as Senator Hoar in one of his campaign speeches last month spoke of free trade as 'the desired and ultimate end of tariff legislation.'"

Mr. Hoar says there is no truth in it whatever. "My opinion as to the question of protection is the result of my early studies and reflection and is unchanged by the observation of my more mature life.

"I think the protective policy has developed, is developing and will hereafter develop the greatness, glory, happiness and wealth of the United States. I think also that the wealth, happiness, greatness and glory of the United States are a great blessing to the poor of all lands. She is a greater blessing to mankind by her example of the effect of self-government and well ordered liberty than she can be by buying the goods of other nations at prices determined by pauper rates of wages.

"When other countries have established popular institutions, have educated their workmen to the condition of ours, have given them their full and equal share in government and are ready to pay as good wages as we do, then we may be ready for free trade."

THE EXHIBIT IN DETAIL.

Marvelous Work Displayed by the Amateur Photographers of the Plainfield Club.

As promised in its issue of last Wednesday, THE PRESS appends herewith a more detailed account of the splendid exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club produced entirely by amateur taste, skill and labor.

Prominent among Chas. H. Davis'f photographs are two pictures representing the interior of an olden time living-room. The large chimney with its open fire-place forms the back-ground, before which are figures of two women costumed in the dress of our grandmother's days. One is standing beside a large spinning-wheel at work, yet evidently listening intently to the story which her companion is reading, as she sits beside her. Look at the second picture. The reader leaning forward, holds up the book, pointing to the pages to emphasize her words, while the spinner, stopping work, eagerly scans the indicated paragraph. The posing of these figures is exquisite, and every detail, add to the intrinsic worth and charm that is conveyed to one's mind by these works of art. "Four consecutive negatives" show most emphatically how painstaking Mr. Davis must be, to obtain such uniform results, for every photographer knows how uncertain his work is likely to be even with the best of care.

O. S. Teale shows both ingenuity and artistic taste in the construction of the mount upon which he displays his exhibit. Three rough boards are gilded, and bound together by cleats, riveted with large headed wrought iron nails. The effect is decidedly pleasing, and shows off his "Kodaks" admirably.

G. Harry Squires shows some admirable views of Southern scenery. A jungle near Jacksonville, Fla., is one of the gems. Several pictures of the landscape on Jekyl Island, Georgia, are deserving of praise and very interesting, showing as they do the world renowned shell road, lined by immense trees, from which hangs in luxurious growth, the graceful Southern moss.

A. J. Gavett's selections from Kennebunk-port, Maine, are gems—every one of them—the combination of rocks and water views, are most charming, showing careful study, and a thorough knowledge of the beautiful in art.

Robert Rushmore shows many "snap shots" taken during his trip abroad, and they certainly excite much interest in the many that stop to admire them.

Harrold Serrell has one of the most pleasing exhibits. His "Buttermilk Falls," and "Foot ball team," are excellent and "Nature's Mirror" was considered worthy of publication by E. H. & T. Anthony in their Photographic Bulletin.

Lemuel W. Serrell is particularly happy in his selections. He does not confine himself to any particular line, being equally as successful with either groups, marines, landscapes or combination pictures.

J. Hervey Doane's views of Asbury Park attract considerable attention, and deservedly too.

John E. Stewart has a fine frame of pictures, but the interest in them would be greatly increased if some explanation was appended, as is done by many of the other exhibitors.

The Gotthells—father and son—show a combined frame. The best pictures are bathing scenes, although the others are far above mediocrity.

Geo. H. Babcock's "Kodaks" are very interesting. One especially so, representing a group in Western Virginia.

Dr. H. H. Lowrie shows various landscape and water views, some of which are exceedinaly fine.

W. H. Lyon, Jr., shows but nine pictures, one of which, however, may be considered a curiosity as it was taken on the first day of April 1890, and shows the City Park covered with nearly a foot of snow. He also exhibits one of the finest blue prints that was ever seen.

Geo. E. Greenleaf's snap shots deserve mention especially one of a group of boys playing at leap-frog.

S. C. Crane, although young in the art, shows ability and promises to rival before long some of his more experienced companions.

Foster Milliken has a number of fine pictures, comprising waterfalls and rock studies. Dr. Willis Anderson displays two fine enlargements from photographs taken by him. Ernest Marx's sporting and racing scenes, are beyond comparison. He stands alone in that particular branch of the art, and it seems almost incredible that horses moving at the rate of a mile in less than two minutes, could be taken so distinctly.

It would be almost an impossibility for THE PRESS to enumerate every picture worthy of mention, in this artistic display. They must be seen to be properly appreciated, and everyone should seize an opportunity for a visit during the coming week, as the exhibition will positively close next Saturday evening, December 6.

HOW STANDS MR. NEWHALL ON THIS?

Dare the Council Make the Man on Somerset Street, Take Down His Fire Trap.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As a citizen who believes in the enforcement of municipal ordinances on everyone alike, without regard to person, and favoring all alike, and as one who believes in stringent safeguards against the spread of fire, I am quite anxious to know what the authorities are going to do about the construction of a frame building on the roof of the brick structure at 11 Somerset street. The tenant of the place began to erect this top story addition some time ago, without asking the consent of the Common Council. He had it about half finished when the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department told him he was violating the law. He then promised to stop work until he should have obtained the consent of the Council to go on, except that the Chief gave him permission to cover the opening in the roof temporarily, to keep out the elements. Now he is going ahead completing the building, but has changed his plans by inclosing the frame structure in a thin coat of corrugated iron, a mere makeshift.

The city ordinances [page 44, section 1] specify that no building or addition to any existing building shall be erected, constructed or placed within certain limits, which include 11 Somerset street, unless the outside walls thereof shall be constructed of brick or stone or other incombustible material, and the roof thereof shall be covered with metal, slate or other incombustible substance. "The term 'outside walls' shall be construed to include uprights, lintels, filling, lining, and all other material, for the thickness of at least ten inches measured from the outermost surface, that go to make up said outside walls. Provided that the Common Council may grant permission to erect one-story frame buildings within the above named limits, if said buildings be covered with tin, iron, or some other noninflammable substance, said buildings not to cover over one hundred square feet of ground, nor to be more than twelve feet in height."

To my mind the addition now being constructed on the roof of the building at 11 Somerset street is in violation of this ordinance. I understand that it covers more than 100 square feet—not of ground, but of roof — and in other particulars it is excluded from the exception which the Common Council may grant. It is not a one-story building on the ground, which the ordinance means, but is a frame extension of a building already erected. If this tenant may put one such structure on his roof he may cover his roof with them, and everybody else in town may cover their roof with them, until every building hitherto comparatively fireproof has virtually a frame top-story, easily burned, and quickly spreading flames. The thing is a menace to property, and will furnish a dangerous precedent if legalized by the action of the Council. If men want to add a story to their buildings, let them conform to the ordinance and not make them fire-traps. Also, let them ask the Council first, and build as the Council directs; not build first and ignore the Council. When the Union News Company violated this ordinance Councilman Newhall was very quick to say, and the other Councilmen agreed with him, that the corporation ought to be taught a lesson in the matter. That case was not nearly so grave an offense as the present one. For the Somerset street tenant there is no excuse. Will the Council teach him a lesson, and make him obey the ordinance? My claim is that even the Council itself has no authority, under this ordinance, to permit such a structure to be completed, and that the city fathers ought to order its flimsy exterior torn down and replaced, if at all, by incombustible walls ten inches thick. Is this to be a case of "What can you expect when such men are elected to office?"

FAIR PLAY.

NOT DR. CARROLL'S OFFICIAL FIGURES.

But Dr. Lewis's Hearers and THE PRESS Reporter Were Told So.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The publication in your issue of to-day of a report of Dr. A. H. Lewis's Thanksgiving sermon by which he is represented as saying that certain religious statistics given by him were obtained from me and are a part of the returns of the census which I have in charge, makes it necessary for me to say that there is either a misunderstanding on the part of your reporter or a mistake on the part of Dr. Lewis. What was furnished to Dr. Lewis by Mr. Buell, Chief Clerk of the Sixth Division, was a table of statistics gathered by a Lutheran minister and published in a Lutheran almanac issued in January last. No part of the returns in connection with the census have been given to anybody and none have been published. I hope to have in print within a few days, a Bulletin giving the statistics of some fourteen denominations. For the statistics which Dr. Lewis gave I am in no wise responsible.

Very Respectfully,
H. K. CARROLL,

The Union County Grand Jury came into court this morning with fifteen new indictments, making the unprecented number of ninety-six for the term. Judge Van Syckel discharged them with the thanks of the Court.

Two presentments were found against the City of Rahway for the bad condition of the municipal roads.

A Letter That Explains Itself.

Messrs Loomis & Rice:

GENTLEMEN: Understanding that some objection has been made by the property owners on Sandford avenue to the use of the property I have rented from you as a Retreat for mental invalids, I will say that although I have heretofore had many such cases under my care I have not to my knowledge disturbed the community in any way, nor do I propose or expect to do so now, and I will authorize you to state that at the end of one year from this date should a majority of the property owners on Sandford avenue consider that the Retreat is objectionable, and will so notify me, I will vacate the premises at the expiration of the first term of the lease. Should you so desire you may have this put in legal form and present to me for signature.

Very truly yours,
J. H. COOLEY.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

(In Charge of Superintendent of Press Work.)

IS IT RIGHT TO LICENSE?

We respectfully ask, Is it right to license man thus to mar the image of God in his brother man? Right to give him authority thus "to sell insanity" and deal out sure destruction? If it is right, why should any man be forbidden to do it? If not right, why should any be permitted? Why forbid all but "men of sober life and conversation" to do this, if it is right? Why allow "men of sober life and conversation" to do it, if it is wrong? Will the poison be less fatal if it is dealt out with a steady hand? Will the buyer be the less a drunkard because the seller is a sober man? May this pollution be poured out upon society only by clean hands? Can that which always works private evil conduce to public good? Can that which is bad for all the parts be good for the whole? Can evil be converted into good by multiplication? Can wrong be legislated into right?

The revenue derived from the liquor traffic is simply the price which the State puts upon the ruined homes and blasted lives of its citizens. Will the pulpit—will the pew—will patriots—will philanthropists sustain such a system?

That revenue is bloodstained which comes by the sale of that which debases the people.

"Vote yes! and the careworn heart will break,
The pale lip hush its prayer;
The wretched drunkard downward haste
To realms of dark despair.

"Vote no! and the mother's heart will leap,
The sisters eye be dry,
The poor inebriate clasp his hands
And raise his voice on high.

"Oh then, by the life which God hath given,
By your powers to curse or bless,
By your fears of hell and your hopes of heaven
Let not your vote be yes.

"By the cherished heart's bitter wrong,
By the spirit's deathless woe,
In name of God and the name of man
Let every vote be No."

THE GERMANS' THANKSGIVING EVE.

Music, Tableaux and a Presentation of Medals to the Champion Shooters.

The Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein gave their members and friends a most pleasing entertainment on the eve of Thanksgiving Day. The programme consisted of several songs by the Saengerbund—quartettes, terzettes and duetts—and solos by C. Maass, Henry Haurand, C. Tonnemann, C. Dresselt and Edw. Mann.

Special mention is deserved by the comical terzette by C. Maass, C. Tonnemann and C. Dresselt, and a recitation by R. Kersting, who was dressed as a lady. A comical song entitled Schwamm druber by Henry Haurand, in the disguise of a Yankee hayseed, was very much enjoyed, as was also the gymnastics of the pupils of the Turn Section.

A decided hit was the last song by Maass, Tonnemann and Dresselt, that ended in a patriotic chorus, in which all present joined. There were also several fine tableaux, representing in the first scene Emperor William I and Napoleon III crossing swords and in fighting position, with Field Marshal Moltke directing the fight. Second scene: Napoleon handing his sword to William. Third scene: Emperor William crowning Count Moltke with a laurel wreath. These tableaux were produced by colored lights. F. Schulein represented William, H. Haurand, Napoleon, and C. F. Myer, Moltke.

In the course of the programme the four champions, C. Stoeckle, C. Dresselt, Reupert and H. Krenzfeldt, who have made the highest scores during last year shooting, were presented with handsome gold trophies. During the presentation was enacted a shooting tableau that was loudly applauded. After the entertainment, dancing followed until an early hour of Thanksgiving Day.

"Chet" Has a Birthday Party.

The Westfield Standard says that a delightful birthday surprise was given to Chester M. Smith, of Westfield, brother of Councilman Smith, of this city, on Friday evening of last week, when a party of richly tolleted ladies and gentlemen "dropped in" to pay their respects and offer their congratulations and good wishes. Music by Straitmeyer, of Elizabeth, had been provided, along with boundless other refreshments, and the company was soon thoroughly in form for an evening of rare enjoyment. An impression has gained currency to the effect that this occasion was a demonstration on the part of the "Monday Nights," as a society, with some of the members left out. But such is not the case; it was, for that matter, a case of spontaniety of fellowship that followed the discovery that popular "Chet" Smith's birthday was at hand. Among those present from this city were: Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Smith, Mr. Fred. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Maltby, Miss Maltby, Miss Green and Miss Burns.

A KINDLY GREETING FROM INDIA.

Ramabai Sends Cordial Message to Her Plainfield Friends—Work of the Local Circle—A New President Chosen.

The Ramabai Circle held its third annual meeting in the Congregational church yesterday afternoon. The Rev. C. L. Goodrich presided and conducted the devotional exercises. He appointed W. J. Leonard Secretary and Treasurer, and called on him to present the annual report of Pundita Ramabai sent to the Circles of the country from the office of the Ramabai Association. The report was a very interesting narrative of the progress of Ramabai's school for the child widows of India. She sends the following greeting:

"Tell my friends of the Circles to look on these questions as Christ would, and to do to their sisters as they would be done by under such circumstances. Tell them I am very gratified to them for what they have done and will do. All my girls join me in giving them hearty thanks for their kindness."

Mr. Goodrich spoke of the loss the Plainfield Circle had sustained by the death of its President, Mrs. Burlingham, and the following resolution on the subject was presented by Mr. Leonard and adopted by the Circle:

Resolved, That the following memorial be embodied in the records of the meeting:

The Ramabai Circle of Plainfield hereby expresses its heartfelt sorrow that since the last meeting of the Circle held in November, 1889, its first and only President, Mrs. Dr. Burlingham, has been called away by death. From the organization of the Circle she was a devoted friend of Pundita Ramabai and her great work, and in this brief minute of her departure this Circle desires to recognize that devotion and to recognize as well her many excellencies as a consecrated Christian woman.

The vacancy in the presidency was then filled by the election of Mrs. S. J. Taylor, who, in accepting the place, referred very pleasantly to the time when Pundita Ramabai was her guest in this city, and when, in preparing to organize a Circle here, she urged Mrs. Taylor to become President of it, which she declined to do. She had been persuaded to accept the office now, she added, because it was in some sense fulfilling the original wish of Ramabai.

In accordance with the request from the national headquarters of the Ramabai Association, at Boston, the Circle voted to change the date of its annual meeting from Fall to Spring.

At the close of the meeting several new subscribers were admitted to the Circle. The yearly dues, which are now payable, were also then paid by many of the members. THE PRESS is requested to say that those who are still owing their dues should send them at once to W. J. Leonard.

Theatrical Notes.

Eugene Tompkins, manager of the Boston Theatre, Boston, is winning the friendship and admiration of every lady in the cultured city. At the end of the first, second and third acts of "The Soudan" the big melodramatic success which has been crowding the handsome Boston playhouse for nine weeks and is booked for as many more, an instantaneous photograph of the audience is taken revealing the faces of the male members engaged in a general stampede for a clove. The photographs are then displayed in prominent places in the Hub, where they silently, but eloquently tell their little tale. It is significant that while the audiences are growing steadily larger with each successive performance of the production, the number of men who go out between the acts is growing beautifully less.

The farmhouse which sheltered the boyhood of Denman Tompson among the green hills of Swanzey fifty years ago, is to be brought intact, stick for stick, to the big Academy, New York, to be used in the opening scene of "The Old Homestead." Uncle Joshua, Cy Prime, Seth Perkins, Aunt Matildy and the Ganzey boys are all well known characters in the little New England village which boasts the birth of Thompson, and are to be met any day along its crooked lanes.

Independent of musicians and the business end of theatricals, only about 1,000 out of 20,000 people in New York, who depend altogether on the stage for a livelihood, may be said to be regularly employed at one time. Among the more important theatres just now, Palmer's, Madison Square, Proctor's, Daly's, Fifth Avenue, Lyceum and Fourteenth Street, employ about thirty people each, which number includes stage hands. At the Casino about two hundred are engaged in the presentation of "Cousin Jonathan," while in "The Old Homestead," at the Academy of Music, the cast embraces the least, and the list of stage hands is the smallest, by reason of the improved methods employed. The largest number of people in any attraction of the metropolis at present, and perhaps the largest number ever engaged in any single stage representation in the history of New York theatricals, is found at Niblo's, where the cast numbers fifty, the ballet 100, the auxiliary corps 400 and the staff of stage hands thirty. The scenic sets employed there are the most massive ever introduced in a production.

If every reader could understand what a remedy for coughs and colds Hires' Cough Cure is, every family in this land would talk its praise. It is destined, for this reason, to be the greatest household medicine in the world. It is pleasant and agreeable. Try it.

Short Bull's Movements.

PIERRE, S. D., Nov. 29.—Postmaster Cook, from Nowlin City, Nowlin County, with half a dozen others, from that section came into town this forenoon. They say that Short Bull has a large number of bad indians with him in the Bad Lands country, and that all the settlers have all left and will not return until troops are sent there.

A Test Question.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—It is understood that at Monday's Nationlist meeting a resolution will be proposed recognizing Mr. Parnell's great services, but calling for his resignation. Many of the Parnellite members of Parliament declare that they would be glad to see the alliance with the Liberals broken, so that the Irish party could resume a condition of independence.

Important Decision.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Secretary Windom has written a letter to Cardinal Gibbons, in which he says that "stained or painted window glass and stained or painted glass windows are especially excepted from the new tariff law, and such articles cannot, as as rule, be admitted duty free." Whether pictorial paintings on glass are entitled to free entry will depend, he says, upon the character of the articles.

Governor Hill in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Governor Hill arrived at the Hoffman House last night from Albany. He visits New York to act as one of the pall bearers at Mr. August Belmonts funeral to-day.

Feline Amenities.

"Do you think it is a good portrait of me?" asked Maude.

"Very good, indeed," said Ethel.

"I don't think the tint in the cheeks is very good, though, do you?"

"It isn't perfect—but you know yellows are very hard to get just right."—N. Y. Sun.

Sappington (to his wife)—You know, Miss Amy, that nearly all great writers are downright fools at other things.

Amy—Is that so, Sappington? Why, then, I don't wonder you aspired as a writer.

Obtained a Writ of Error.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 29.—John Whalen, Joseph G. Mulrain, David Gordon and Martin J. White, who were last Wednesday convicted of ballot-box stuffing, have been sentenced by Judge Lippincott in the Hudson County Court to one year and six months hard labor in the State prison at Trenton. The prisoners had bondsmen present, and their counsel got a writ of error for appeal as soon as the bonds were signed.

Hattie Tolman Held for Murder.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 29.—Hattie F. Tolman, charged with causing the death of James Healy by letting on illuminating gas, was committed without bail for her appearance at the January term of the Superior Court. The evidence showed that she intended suicide when she let on the gas.

A Fine Residence Destroyed.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 29.—The elegant stone residence, patterned after the fudal castles of the old world, situated on a high hill at Newtown and owned by P. Lorillard Reynolds, a Scotchman, was destroyed by fire during the morning. The house and its valuable contents were completely consumed. The loss is not less than $100,000.

Another Failure in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—B. K. Jamieson & Co. have made an assignment. They were largely interested in outside industrial schemes but did a considerable stock and bond business with a fair line of deposits. The firm is 35 years old.

Starter Caldwell's Case Abandoned.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The examination of James F. Caldwell, the starter at the race tracks charged with assaulting J. E. Kelley, the book maker, was adjourned at the Jefferson Market Police Court until Dec. 10.

Returning Home With an Embezzler.

BRADFORD, Pa., Nov. 29.—Thos. W. Osborne of this place arrived in Toledo from Desmoines, Iowa, with Albert W. Yearin in his charge, who is wanted here for embezzling $600 from Dubois & Newell.

Four Cars Wrecked.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Nov. 29.—Two freight trains collided on the New England Railroad at Hamlin's Pond during the morning. Four cars were smashed and their contents destroyed. No person was hurt.

Died After Five Months' Fast.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 29.—Benjamin Wright, aged 82, died during the morning. He has eaten nothing for five months on account of stomach trouble. He became helpless four weeks ago, and took to bed. He died without apparent pain, and was reduced to skin and bones.

What It Costs to Run Fast.

People have no idea of the cost of the high rate of speed of the ocean steamers of the present day. Machinery will easily bear a moderate and constant work, but just the moment the engines are pushed, each additional mile in speed attained per hour is gained at an enormous expenditure of fuel and a terrific wear and tear of machinery. Indeed, so great is the wear and tear of machinery, when put upon a strain, that it soon breaks down and becomes useless.

We see the same thing in the human system. Men and women are constituted to work, and can do an ordinary amount each day without ill-effect. But just so sure as they overwork—attempt to live or labor at a greater rate of speed, strain their brains and nerves and use up their vital energies in a continuous or unusual amount of work, either mental or physical, just so surely will they in time become nervous and physical wrecks, with weak bodies, tired brains and shattered nerves. So true is this that our cities and manufacturing villages are filled with men and women who have thus sacrificed their health and strength by mental or physical work beyond the power of endurance. As a result they are excessively nervous, restless, irritable and sleepless. They lack their old-time vim and energy, and with tired brains, trembling nerves and exhausted systems endeavor to still pursue their employments.

How absolutely necessary it is for such persons to use something to restore their health and strength, and we would unhesitatingly say that nothing will so quickly and surely do this as Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great nerve and brain invigorant and health restorer. The effects of this great medical discovery are perfectly marvellous in curing all weakening and exhausting nervous diseases, and no one should lose time in trying uncertain things when this wonderful remedy offers an absolutely certain cure. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and may be procured at any druggist's for $1.00 per bottle.

Perhaps This Case Was Like Yours.

For the good of the public I would like to state the wonderful change that has come over me since I commenced taking Dr Greene's Nervura. I was completely broken down in health and suffered from extreme exhaustion and could not rest day or night. I had rheumatism and neuralgia in my sides, and all-gone feeling in my stomach, and a terrible palpitation, causing me to think I had heart disease. I had to give up work. I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura. From the first bottle I noticed very little change, but I am thankful that I continued its use, for I am now well, have gained 28 pounds in weight and work every day. That trembling feeling and terrible throbbing and palpitation of the heart have left me. I could fill columns that would interest people afflicted as I was, and will be glad to converse with any one so afflicted. W. C. MILES,

40 Blue Hill avenue, Boston, Mass.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case. 99 y eod

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes, and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

SAVED BY HER APRON.

It Issues a Cry for Help Her Lips Dare Not.

A LONG, dusty, noisy street. Seemingly unending streams of trucks, drays, cars and struggling, jostling humanity below. On either side high, dingy, brick buildings, with row upon row of windows, each grimy, each filled with stacks of merchandise, or showing bent heads, belonging to busy hands, and each the counterpart of its neighbor. Nothing but noise, heat, bustle and toil.

At a window on one side of the street sat a young man busy at a desk. Occasionally he would raise his eyes, as though to rest them, and glance out of the window. But it was all so monotonous—nothing to be seen except the high, dingy buildings, with the same grimy, tired-looking workers, each intent on finishing his day's work. Aimlessly his eyes would wander until they reached a window almost directly opposite, rest there for a moment, and then return to the work before him. Why this particular window should attract his attention in this manner he had never explained to himself. Perhaps it was because its occupant formed the only bit of brightness in all that dingy row; perhaps it was because its occupant was a young girl with neat, dainty form and golden hair. So much the young man could see from his position across the street, and he found himself wondering who she was and what she was doing, what her name was, and then, with an impatient shrug of the shoulders, would resume his work.

On the other side the young girl had also noticed her vis-a-vis, at first with indifference, and then, she, too, with growing interest. And so it happened that they were in each other's thoughts oftener than either suspected, and, being high-minded and honorable, flirtation was never dreamed of; and so matters might have stood to this day, but for the incident about to be related.

Jennie Alton was assistant bookkeeper in the branch office of Silas Stanton & Co., the large iron dealers. The only other occupants of the office were the book-keeper, a young lady who acted as cashier and general office assistant, and the office boy. On certain days of the month Mr. Stanton, the senior partner, spent a few hours at his desk, the remainder of his time being devoted to the principal office.

Jennie had passed a very trying morning. The young lady cashier had asked and obtained leave to visit a sick relative; the book-keeper had been called away on business, and, finally, even the office boy had to be sent out with a message to a customer. So she was left entirely alone. Although this was unusual, Jennie thought little of it, as she was particularly busy.

Suddenly the door opened softly, and a strange voice asked: "Is Mr. Stanton in?"

Jennie, startled, turned and saw a tall, gaunt form, clad respectably enough, but with strange, wild-looking eyes. She answered quickly: "No; Mr. Stanton is at the general office in B——."

"Ah, then he has not yet come. I will wait for him. He usually spends the fifteenth in this town. He will be here soon. I will wait, as my business is of the greatest importance."

He was right. Mr. Stanton did come the fifteenth of each month—a fact she had for the moment forgotten. She resumed her work, or attempted to, but the stranger was regarding her with such a fixed stare, and, glancing at him a couple of times, and still finding him looking at her with that peculiar gleam in his eyes, which did not turn from her as she looked up, she grew uneasy and found it impossible to accomplish any thing.

A few minutes passed. Still the silent stare. Would the book-keeper or the boy never come? Or Mr. Stanton—why was he so much later than usual? If the man would only say something. She must try and get rid of him in some way.

"If your business relates to the office, sir, perhaps I can be of service," she said, timidly.

Without a change of feature, with eyes still fixed upon her face, he terrified the girl by replying: "Yes; I was just thinking you might help me. When I leave this office I must take with me Mr. Stanton's brains!"

"I MUST TAKE WITH ME MR. STANTON'S BRAINS."

Without seeming to notice the white, terror-stricken face of the girl, he continued: "Listen—I will tell you. But wait, it will not do to be disturbed." So saying, and to Jennie's increased terror, he turned the key in the door. Her brain reeled; she sunk, faint and trembling, in her chair. Locked in with a madman! Would no help come? She strove to cry out, but could give forth no sound. The man returned, and again seated himself near the frightened girl.

"I must be brief. I must finish before Mr. Stanton comes. Mr. Stanton and I started in business at the same time. I had plenty of money and he comparatively none. I started on a grand scale—he on a small one. I had hosts of friends. I married, had a beautiful home, and every thing that man could wish for, and the future seemed bright. To be sure I lost steadily in my business, but I still had plenty, and it would only be a matter of a short time when the business would pay. Mr. Stanton was succeeding with his small capital, why should not I with my great wealth? But, finally, and almost before I realized it, the crash came. Every thing was swept away. Business, home, friends, all. Why was it? Why could not I succeed when I had every thing to start on, and Stanton nothing? My once friends laughed, and said: 'You didn't have Stanton's brains, you know.' And, again, as I struggled hopelessly to regain a footing, the sarcastic remark was: 'Get Stanton's brains.' I tried in every way to succeed. But no; I got deeper in debt each day. And then, when all hope had fled, those words rung in my ears. Ah! that was the grand secret of future success! I must get Mr. Stanton's brains. I hear the words night and day. I see them wherever I look. And now, not only my success, but my peace of mind depends upon accomplishing my object. I must have them, and you will help me!"

Like one turned to stone the girl sat, too frightened to speak. But the maniac, his eyes flashing, his hands convulsively working, noticed nothing, so intent was he telling his story.

"See," continued he, "I have a knife, a surgeon's knife. Ah! but it is sharp! Now I shall soon have rest," and he handled the gleaming, polished steel with a caressing motion.

Jennie's eyes, full of agony, instinctively sought the window where young Darcy sat. But he, looking at her, could see nothing of the pain and terror on that young face. Oh! if she could only signal to him! If she could only cry out! Once or twice some one tried the door, but finding it locked, walked away. But no sound issued from her lips. And bear in mind all this took but a few minutes, although it seemed hours to the almost paralyzed girl. If the man would only leave her, do any thing but finger the shining blade, it would be a relief. Again she looked across the street. Again the appealing look from the girl. Oh! surely he sees something is wrong, for he has placed his pen on his desk, and his face is turned steadily toward her. Perhaps he has caught a glimpse of the steel and is puzzled to know what it means. If she could only signal to him for help now that he is looking. But what can she do with this man before her, watching her every movement. But see! the man with stealthy tread now moves slowly toward the door, and with bent knee places his ear to the key-hole, as though listening for footsteps.

Now is her chance. She raises her arms on high with an imploring gesture. She dares not cry, even though she could. Thank Heaven! the young man has risen to his feet and stands with his hand resting on the back of his chair. Again the imploring gesture. The young man turns in an uncertain, hesitating manner, while her eyes roam across the room, wildly hoping for some other means to convey to him her need of assistance. She sees the marking-pot, with its big, black brush, but where the paper large enough for her to write on in letters that he may see across the street?

Suddenly the watcher across the way sees a hurried movement on her part; the arms are again raised, and, between them, on a white surface, he reads: HELP! Her neat white apron, in which she had take such pride that morning, had formed her signal.

Young Darcy hesitated no longer; but, with a hurried call for assistance, rushed across the street, closely followed by a fellow-clerk.

None too soon, for the maniac had turned, and, seeing the white signal raised, had sprung toward the girl with uplifted knife. Then, with a wild scream, Jennie fell, just as the upper glass sashes of the door were burst open and the men rushed into the room.

The man was captured and his story found to be substantially as he had related it to Jennie. Inheriting money from his father, being naturally extravagrant, and with no business ability, the inevitable crash came almost unexpectedly, not so much, as, one of his boon companions and intimate friends said, because of lack of money, but because of lack of brains. The worry, loss of his business, and, finally, of his health, deprived him of his reason and necessitated his incarceration in a private asylum, where he constantly raved over what his friend said was the cause of his failure, and from which he one day made his escape, with the result given.

As to our two young friends, they were married, of course, and one of their most valued keepsakes is the white apron, which Jennie insists was the means of saving her life.—Chicago Daily News.

THE WIDOW SCHMIDT.

A Court Scene in Berlin—Servantgalism at the German Capital.

[Translated from the German for this paper.]

THAT proceedings in a German court of justice do not differ materially from those in our own courts, will be seen in the following sketch from a German journal. The accused was richly dressed and very stout. Although not all wool she was unmistakably a yard wide. Sitting down on two chairs she requested a court official to bring her a glass of water, as that "brazen creature" out in the corridor had given her so much impudence that her nerves were unstrung. Her wish having been complied with, she seemed to be more composed, and fanning herself violently she announced her readiness for trial.

"You are the Widow Schmidt, are you not?"

"Yes, your honor, but my maiden name was Von Knippenburg. I am related to that celebrated family. Our coat-of-arms—"

"We have nothing to do with that here. You are in court now."

"For the first time, your honor, and you have no idea of the humiliation it is for a Von Knippenburg, who owns three houses on the Lange Strasse, not to speak of bank stock."

"Madame, we have nothing to do with the financial affairs of those who are brought before us. You are accused of having assaulted Johanna Meyer, a servant girl in your employment."

"If your honor keeps a servant girl you must know all about it yourself. There is a great fuss made about German Social Democrats and Nihilists, but they are angels of light compared with the German servant girls. The papers says that the Socialists tamper with the soldiers, but they don't run after the soldiers half as much as these servant girls do. I don't see why the authorities should try to suppress the Socialists and let the servant girls do as they please."

"Please confine yourself to the case on trial."

"Yes, your honor, as I was going to say, I have nine rooms elegantly furnished, and of course, I can't be expected to sweep and dust them myself, particularly when I have money to pay to have it done."

AMERICAN MAID AND MISTRESS.

"Do you admit having struck Johanna Meyer on the head with a poker?"

"It was the parlor poker, and has a nickel plated handle."

"Do you regard a nickel-plated poker as the proper means of communicating your desires to your servants?"

"If your amiable wife, may it please your honor, kept a servant, you wouldn't have to ask such a question. We people of property ought to stick together and help one another out when servant girls try to climb on our necks."

"Once more, madame, will you please state the facts in regard to this case?"

"All right, your honor; on the first of October I hired this good for nothing creature. If I had known what sort of an impudent thing she was, and what an appetite she had, and how many military acquaintances —"

"No personalities, madame; continue if you please."

"I was real good to her, but that's all thrown away on such reptiles. There is barracks full of soldiers on the next block, and whenever I needed her she was promenading the streets hanging to a soldier's arm; One evening my sister, the high-born Baroness Knippenberg von Kuhschwappel-Kuhschwappel Mottenburg and a friend, the Baroness Kreutzmillonen von Donnerwetter—"

"Madame, we do not care to hear the pedigree of your family."

"After the high personages had supped sumptuously, my high-born sister, the Baroness Knippenberg von Kuhschwappel-Kuhschwapple Mottenburg, said she needed some beer, so I pushed the electric button for Johanna. The more I pushed the less she came, and finally my sister and her friend had to leave without the beer. Just think of my mortification, me, a lady of birth, owning three houses on the Lange Strasse, and not one of them has got a mortgage—"

"Confine yourself to the question at issue."

"Well, I sat up, just to see how long that reptile would stay away. About eleven o'clock here she came traipsing home with a soldier, and I had to go to the door to open it for that piece. I says to her: 'Good evening, Miss, have you had a pleasant time?' The saucy minx gave me back talk. She allowed she always had a pleasant time when I wasn't around. I don't know how I came to have the poker in my hand, but I tapped her on her fool cocoanut a time or so, just to teach her how to talk to a lady of quality."

"That will do. You have, no doubt, had provocation, but that is no excuse for violating the law. I will now examine the witness, Johanna Meyer."

Johanna, an impudent-looking girl, testified to materially the same facts.

"Johanna," said the judge, "you have acted very impolitely toward this lady."

Johanna, tossing her head: "I don't see any lady. None of the ladies I have ever seen mistook a calico apron for a handkerchief, as she does all the time."

Judge—The accused is fined ten marks—for not hitting Johanna a couple of times more with the poker, added his honor sotto voce.

"Call the next case."

FORTUNE'S FAVORITES.

Their Movements Recorded by "The Help Ladies' Elite Gazette."

The following personal paragraphs are from the latest issue of the Help Ladies' Elite Gazette:

Miss Kate McCarty, cook lady to a woman on Fifth avenue, returned on Wednesday from a visit to her old home in Ballyshannon, Ireland. She was cordially received by the local nobility, and reports having had a good time.

The beautiful Miss Nora Cleopatra O'Donehoo spent the summer in the Adirondacks. Miss O'Donehoo is parlor lady for Mrs. T. Vandergoold, and whether at home or enjoying a well-earned vacation, is sure of any number of beaux.

Miss Clytemnestra Bridget Geoghegan, general house lady at Commodore Fletcher's, reports having a very enjoyable outing at Saratoga, from which fashionable resort she returned on Monday last. While there she carried on a delicious flirtation with the Commodore's son, who did not recognize her as one of his mamma's help ladies.

Miss Betsy O'Halleran came back the early part of this week from Atlantic City as brown as a berry. She became engaged three times during her stay. Miss O'Halleran has resumed her duties as wash lady to Mrs. Baxter, of 65 West Steenth street, where she will be pleased to entertain her many friends.

Miss Kitty Venus McMonaghan spent three weeks at Bar Harbor, acting as nurse lady to Mrs. T. Thompson Brewster. She said she had as much fun as though she had gone in an unincumbered capacity, as she jabbed the infant with pins so unmercifully that it yelled when she approached, so that its mamma had to nurse it all the time, thus affording Miss McMonaghan an opportunity to enjoy herself.

Miss Esmeralda Maginnis will be led to the altar in about two weeks by Mr. Dennis Rafferty. Miss Maginnis met Mr. Rafferty while accompanying Mrs. Forundred to Deer Park last summer, in the capacity of lady's maid.

Miss Annie Belle O'Brien, second kitchen lady for a woman on Fifty-seventh street, remained at home this summer, but promises herself a trip to Europe early next season. She will be accompanied by her sister, Judy O'Brien, who is a wash lady for another person on the same street.

The engagement of Miss Mary Anne McGilvray to Mr. Jerry Emerson O'Toole is announced. They will be married at St. Bridget's, and the woman Miss McGilvray has been assisting in the capacity of cook lady has promised to provide a trousseau which will be the envy of all the help ladies in the country.—W. H. Siviter, in Munsey's Weekly.

Not So Monotonous.

First Tramp—Life is awful monotonous, ain't it, Cully?

Second Tramp—Not with me. Not long ago when I was rich and I went into a saloon I slammed down the money. Now when I go into a saloon the barkeeper slams me down and kicks me out.—Texas Siftings.

At the Menagerie.

Drysdale—Say, Brown, that giraffe is a fool!

Brown—Why a fool, my boy?

Drysdale—Why, he is eating!

Brown—And why shouldn't he eat?

Drysdale—If I had that neck I'd economize in eating and only drink wine.—Judge.

A QUESTION FOR MANNISH MAIDS.

He—There is one thing I'd like to know.

She—What's that?

He—What do you girls say when your collar-button slips down the back of your neck?—Life.

AT NARRAGANSETT.

Miss Gowitt—Why did you come down to the pier, Mr. Colday?

Mr. Colday—To see you.

Miss Gowitt—Well, you may as well go back to the city. I don't go into the surf. I only stroll down to the beach to look on.—Puck.

IN THE PENITENTIARY.

Visitor—What brought you to this place, friend?

Convict—Blamed foolishness.

Visitor—No doubt, friend, no doubt. But what kind of foolishness was it?

Convict—Why, the lawyer who defended me didn't know enough to pound sand.—West Shore.

He Could Get What He Wanted.

Agent—What kind of a house do you want, Mr. Funnyman?

Mr. Funnyman—Well, I'm looking for "a lodge in some vast wilderness."

Agent—I can give you a nice flat in Philadelphia. How'll that do?—The Jury.

In a Sick Room.

Invalid—Oh, my friend, you are too kind to come and spend the evening with me, though of course it can be little pleasure to you.

Friend—Nonsense; you musn't talk like that. Life isn't all pleasure. We can't expect to do what would be most agreeable to us to do. Some one had to come and see you, you know.—Texas Siftings.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

The Best Remedy

in this world, says J. Hoffner of Syracuse, N. Y., is Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son who was partially paralized three years ago and attacked by fits, has not had any symptoms of them since he took one bottle of the remedy. I most heartily thank for it.

Nervous Prostration Cured.

CROGHAN, N. Y. June, 1889.

I was not able to do anything for 10 months, was confined to bed most of the time, couldn't eat nor sleep, was so nervous and dizzy that I could not walk from the house to the garden, I was all run down by what the doctors called nervous prostration. No medicine seemed to help me. Then I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and now I can eat and sleep and have no more sinking spells, can do my housework again. I am very thankful for this and recommend the Tonic to all sufferers.

DARK FOR PARNELL

The Irish Envoys Call for His Retirement.

THEY SEND OUT A MANIFESTO.

They Cannot Follow a Leader Who Will Endanger Home Rule.

Mr. Parnell Condemned for His Acts Toward Gladstone—He Is Urged Not to Plunge Ireland Into Dissension When Liberty Is Within Her Grasp—Harrington Stands by Parnell.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Five of the Irish delegates, John Dillon, William O'Brien, T. P. O'Connor, T. D. Sullivan and T. P. Gill have decided to join in the demand of those of their colleagues in Irelay who call on Parnell to retire from tl leadership of the Irish people. The decision was embodied in a manifesto which was cabled to Justin McCarthy, as vice-chairman of the Irish Parliamentary party. The decision will be placed before the meeting of the Irish members to be held in London this afternoon. Timothy Harrington is the only one of the delegates to stand by Parnell. The manifesto reads as follows:

The Envoys' Manifesto.

To Justin McCarthy, M. P., vice-chairman of the Irish Parliamentary Party:

Our sense of the matchless genius of Mr. Parnell as a leader, of the imperishable services he has rendered to the Irish cause, of the courage, integrity and splendid success with which he has led our people for ten years, and the tie of comradeship and personal respect and affection which for years bound us to him have made us suspend to the latest possible moment our judgment against his further leadership. The obligation to express judgment is to all of us the most painful duty of our lives. No earthly consideration could have moved us to our determination except the solemn conviction that we are driven to choose between Mr. Parnell and the destruction of our country's cause. So painfully alive were we to all that might be involved in the loss of such a leader that we eagerly co-operated with our colleagues in every effort to retain his influence in our councils.

The manifesto which Mr. Parnell has just issued cuts us off from the last hopes to which we clung. Anxious to avoid any word that might embitter the controversy, we shall not dwell upon the cruel injustice with which he treats the members of the party that has followed him with a loyalty and affection such as no leader ever experienced before. His recollection of this fealty to him in many an hour of trial might well have saved them from the imputation that any section of them could have allowed their integrity to be sapped by liberal wirepullers, nor would we do more than enter a protest against this violation of all constitutional principle in flouting by anticipation the decision of the elected representatives of the people from whose votes the chairman of the parliamentary party receives his authority and resortin g to a vague general appeal over their heads.

Considerations like these we should readily have waived in the interest of national solidarity, but the method in which, ignoring the origin of the present calamitous situation, Mr. Parnell endeavored to fasten the responsibility for it upon Messrs. Gladstone and Morley, compels us to disassociate ourselves in the strongest manner from imputation which we believe to be reckless and unjust.

We view with abhorrence the attacks that have been made on Mr. Parnell by his public and private enemies under cover of his present difficulties.

In deliberately bringing things to this position Mr. Parnell has entered upon a rash and fatal path upon which every consideration of Ireland's safety as well of personal honor, forbid us absolutely to follow him.

In the future of a party thus isolated and discredited, we cannot imagine how any Irishman can see anything but destruction of the hopes of self government, happiness and peace which but a few weeks ago were on the point of being realized for our people, so tried by many years of sacrifice and suffering. What Mr. Parnell asks us to do, stripped of all side issues, is to sacrifice all the hopes of an early settlement of the Irish struggle to his resolution to maintain his personal position. We are driven to choose between our leader and our cause. In that sad choice we cannot hesitate.

We have now to confront the statement that Mr. Parnell's leadership opens an impassable gulf between the representatives of Ireland and the Liberal party who have faithfully observed their part of their side of the agreements as to the national claims of Ireland and the situation is aggravated by deplorable expressions of ill will toward the British people who have again and again within the last five years manifested their determination to do justice to Ireland and save by their votes paralyzed the arm of coercion.

We lay these views before all our colleagues of the Irish Parliamentary party in the earnest belief that a decisive vote on their part will deliver Ireland from the fearful anxiety that now overhangs her people.

We cannot relinquish the hope that in face of such decisive action by the elective representatives of the Irish people Mr. Parnell's sense of patriotism will withhold him from plunging Ireland into those horrors of dissension which have so often already in her tragic and unhappy history robbed her of liberty at the moment it was within her grasp and will save him from undoing in one passionate hour the results of all his incomparable services to his country.

Parnell Will Produce the Proof.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—It is reported that unless Mr Gladstone withdraws the denials contained in his letter, Mr. Parnell will produce the proofs upon which he relies to establish the accuracy of the statements made in his manifesto.

Big Excess Duties Recovered.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1—Judgments for over $90,000 has been formally entered against the United States in the United States Court. The judgment are in favor of George Oberteuffers & Son and E. E. Buchey & Co., of New York. They are for certain excessive duties levied upon importations by the parties named.

POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT.

Growth of the Postal Service and Recommendations for Needed Reforms.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—In his annual report Postmaster-General Wanamaker gives figures to illustrate how much the business of the department has grown. The gross revenue is nearly $5,000,000 larger than it ever was before. Almost 5,000 new postoffices, more than in any one year before, have been established upon the petition of communities which have needed them. A decreasing limit for the extension or the free delivery has permitted the employment of letter carriers in over fifty towns.

"Three times as many sub-stations and stamp agencies, which will soon pay for themselves, were established as during the previous year. Over 5,000 miles of R. F. O. service, so called (where traveling postoffices distribute the mails for instant dispatch), have been put on. The 58,000 transportation schedules have been examined, and adjusted or extended where it has been possible. Thirty-six per cent. more of city mails have been distributed on trains for instant dispatch than during the previous year. The star route mileage has increased over 5,000,000 miles and the railroad mileage over 11,000,000. The railway postal clerks have reduced the number of pieces usually sent to the Dead Letter Office by 2,000,000. By encouraging postmasters in free delivery cities to prepare supplementary directories, and by general suggestions to the public through the newspapers to take greater care in the direction of matter, the Dead Letter Office expects a reduction of its labors by at least one-third."

Referring to needed reforms, the Postmaster-General says:

"I shall have the honor to advocate this year, as last, with whatever persuasiveness it is possible for me properly to use, certain measures, legislative and administrative, which I believe to be for the benefit of the service.

"The postal telegraph bill I again respectfully commend to the favor of Congress. The recommendation that the postal savings experiment be fully and fairly tried is again renewed. The discussion of the eight-hour question cannot be shirked; I hope the postal clerks will be certain during the next year who their friends are.

"The questions whether the division of the country into postal districts for the better instruction and encouragement of postmasters, new and old, and whether an additional permanent officer of the very highest order of experience and originality would not be a good thing for the department, may well be pressed. Within the department itself many reforms can be worked out, but only slowly, partly because legislation is necessary and partly because even small revolutions are not desired by all. In the matter of simple and uniform accounting the coming year ought to show excellent results. I hope to see the civil service examinations, especially with reference to the railway mail, improved; for only in proportion as these yield the most efficient civil servants can the benefits of the civil service system be extended. The whole postoffice clerical force needs to be scanned thoroughly with a view to Congressional action looking to its better classification."

INDIANS MEAN FIGHT.

The Redskins Concentrating Near Pine Ridge Agency.

PINE RIDGE, Dec 1.—The excitement is increasing. Pickets have been doubled. Over one-half the Indians have left the agency.

The Cheyenne Indians from the Northeast are joining Two Strike. A band of Indians are concentrating at the mouth of Wounded Knee Creek. They send in word that they will fight.

Senator Quay Will Not Resign.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Senator Quay will not resign the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee. The Senator himself set at rest all fears by saying: "I shall not resign just to please a lot of fellows who are not Republicans anyway." The Senator has been the recipient of many calls from party leaders. His friends say that it is at their request that he will continue at the head of the National Committee.

A Criminal's Bride Shoots Herself.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Mrs. Martha Losee, 16 years old, a forger's bride, in a fit of jealousy shot herself last evening while on the station of the suburban elevated railroad at 138th street, between Willis and Alexander avenues. She was carried to the Harlem Hospital, where the bullet, which had passed through the breast and lodged near the shoulder blade, was extracted. The injury is considered fatal.

CONGRESS IN SESSION

The Senate and House Called to Order at Noon.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE READ

The Annual Appropriation Bills to be Reported To-Morrow.

Three New Representatives Sworn In—Many Measures of Importance on the Calendars—Some Doubts About the Passage of the Federal Elections Bill—Annual Reports of Cabinet Officers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The second session of the Fifty-first Congress began at noon to-day. At precisely 12 o'clock Vice-President Morton in the Senate, and Speaker Reed in the House of Representatives called these two bodies to order.

The roll was called and three new members were sworn in. Whitelaw, in place of Walker, of Missouri; Hayes, the successor of Conger, of Iowa, and Pindar, who has been elected to the vacancy occasioned by the death of Miller, of New York. Mr. Breckenridge, of Arkansas, also had to be resworn.

The President's message was read at length in each House.

It is not unlikely that to-morrow the House committee on appropriations will be ready to report one or more of the annual appropriation bills. The Pension bill and the Fortification bill will be the first to come up for consideration. What will be done to push the appropriation bills forward will be determined in caucus. The Republican caucus has also to determine upon a postmaster for the House, the office having been declared vacant at the close of the first session.

BILLS BEFORE THE HOUSE.

Important Business to be Disposed of by the Present Session.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—This Congress has much important business before it, a very small proportion of which will likely be disposed of before its expiration at noon on the 4th of March. There are the necessary appropriation bills, without which the business of the government would be suspended at least in part, and the reapportionment bill, which has as yet received no consideration in either House, but which the Republicans in both Houses have said must be passed at this session. Then there are many measures of importance on the calendars which have passed one House and are therefore half through the legislative journey. The most important of these is the Federal Election bill which passed the House at the first session, and which was resisted in the Senate by the Democrats so firmly that it was necessary for the Republicans to agree to a postponement of its consideration in order to bring about the passage of the Tariff bill and an adjournment of the first session.

IN THE SENATE.

Some Doubts About the Passage of the Federal Elections Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—There are on the calendar of the Senate the National Bankruptcy bill, which is being pushed by the representatives of the commercial convention; the bill to transfer the revenue marine service from the Treasury to the Navy Department, which was debated at some length during the first session, the bill to discontinue the coinage of the $1 and $3 gold pieces, and the Conger lard bill. These measures have passed the House.

The Republicans in the Senate are pledged to the passage of the Federal Election bill, but it is a question in the minds of some whether it is possible to pass it against the obstructive tactics of the Democrats, and then the question is raised whether there is any party necessity for its passage now that the elections for the 52d Congress are over. The Republican Senators will probably hold a caucus during the week to determine what is to be done. There has as yet been no consultation of the Republican leaders on this point.

Anxious About the Ethiopia.

GLASGOW, Dec. 1.—Great anxiety is felt here on account of the non-arrival of the Ethiopia of the National Steamship Company. She is overdue and it is supposed that her engines have become disabled.

Amnesty in Italy.

ROME, Dec. 1.—A royal decree granting a general amnesty has been promulgated. Owing to this decree Andrea Costa, the Socialist Deputy who fled the country, will be enabled to return.

Substitute for Natural Gas.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 1.—Pittsburg manufacturers are looking to Lima oil as a substitute for natural gas as fuel. An interesting experiment with Lima oil is now being conducted at the mills of J. Painter & Sons, on the south side. A new compressed oil machine is used to spray the oil. The process is in use on only one puddling furnace.

WOOD'S REPRIEVE.

Warden Brush Has Postponed the Colored Murderer's Execution.

SING SING, N. Y., Dec. 1.—The execution of Wood, the colored murderer, which was to have occurred during this week, has been postponed. The next execution under the electrocution system will be that of Jugigo, the Japanese, whose case was recently decided by the Supreme Court of the United States and who will be taken to New York for resentence to-day.

Warden Brush determined the question of Wood's immediate fate by notifying the jurors and witnesses who had been summoned that they would not be needed. As the law requires that the witnesses shall have three days' notice, it would not be possible to execute Wood before the middle of the week, even if the warden believed that the appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States did not act as a stay of execution. Who the witnesses were to have been the warden would not say, and it is likely their names will not be made public when the execution occurs, as they have asked the warden not to reveal them.

Warden Brush believes that the citation for him to appear before the Supreme Court of the United States in January acts as a stay of execution. It was in this belief that he notified the witnesses, who were summoned yesterday, that they would not be needed.

THE MURDERERS ESCAPE.

Great Excitement Over the Wholesale Jail Delivery in Pennsylvania.

SOMERSET, Pa., Dec. 1.—Great excitement prevailed here all day over the escape from jail of four prisoners, among them the Nicely brothers, who are under sentence of death.

One of the Sheriffs who went in pursuit of the fugitives has returned and reports the pursuing party on the track of the escaped prisoners.

The reward for their capture has been increased to $500. Few persons have any idea that the Nicelys will allow themselves to be taken alive.

Pan-American Steamship Line.

GALVESTON, Dec. 1.—The Pan-American steamship line, plying between Galveston and South American ports in the banana and general fruit business, has been established with a capital of $50,000,000. The principal stockholders reside in Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Kansas City, Des Moines, Topeka and this city. The principal offices of the company are located here, and several vessels will be engaged in the trade by the early part of 1891. Several cargoes of bananas have been discharged here recently and the greater part put on the cars for Denver, Pueblo, Salt Lake, Ogden and other cities.

The Alliance Convention.

OCALA, Fla., Dec. 1.—More than half of the delegates to the National Convention of the Farmars' Alliance, which opens tomorrow, have arrived, and the town is crowded by these and other strangers. All of the national officers of the Alliance are here, and the preliminary caucusing and canvassing which will settle probably the action of the convention upon political subjects has actively begun. It may be said without qualification that the third party movement will not be endorsed by the Alliance at the coming convention.

Guarded His Master's Corpse.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 1.—Henry M. Hanney, an aged hermit, who lived at No. 87 Thurbers avenue, started out during the morning to visit his brother, who lived on Colfax street. He was attacked with heart disease and fell dead on the way. A yellow dog, which had been his sole companion for many years, stood guard over the body and growled and snapped when any one approached. The dog had to be pulled away and muzzled before the body of his master could be removed to the morgue.

New Hampshire Political Troubles.

CONCORD, N. H., Dec. 1.—Governor Goodell's message to the Legislature has been written, and will be transmitted to the House to-morrow. The document will be a sort of argumentative statement of the legislative situation, covering fully the points which he assumes make necessary an extra session. He will simply describe the troubles that exist without suggesting a remedy for them, leaving that matter in the hands of the Legislature.

Had Nothing to Do With Jamison Failure

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 1.—The report from Philadelphia that the failing of B. K. Jamison & Co., bankers and brokers of that city, was due in a measure to transactions with the St. Paul and Minnesota Mortgage and Trust Company is pronounced false by the officers of that institution in this city. Ex-Governor McGill, who is President of the concern, says the only transaction they ever had with Jamison & Co. was a policy of $225,000 at the usual rates of commission.

Rutgers' Coming Installation.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 1.—There will be another meeting of the trustees of Rutgers College on December 22, at which time the date for the inauguration of Dr. Austin Scott, the new president, will be fixed. It will not occur before the early part of February, as the Doctor has considerable work to do in arranging his private affairs.

Warfare on the Knights.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The delegates to the Central Labor Federal Federation decided to inaugurate a systematic warfare against the Knights of Labor, because, it is said, the latter threatened to destroy the Brewers, Paper Hangers and Bricklayers' Unions affiliated with the Federation.

Mr. Crocker's Body Found.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 1.—The body of F. Crocker, president of the Board of Public Works, was found in a cornfield three miles from the city by a farmer who was crossing the field. Mr. Crocker disappeared from the city last Sunday morning.

WIDENED THE GULF

Parnell Said to Have Formed a Tory Combination.

MANY SURMISES ARE AFLOAT.

One Is that Salisbury May Concede Parnell Home Rule.

Parliament to Be Dissolved After the Passage of Two Bills—Archbishop Croke Says the Irish Leader Must Retire—Parnell Has a Talk with His Supporters—Mrs. O'Shea at Brighton.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Rumors are current that Mr. Parnell has been in private consultation with two members of the Salisbury cabinet. One of them, Lord Knutsford, is known to possess the peculiar personal confidence of Lord Salisbury.

Nothing is known as to the object or meaning of the consultation, but surmises are afloat, apparently countenanced by prominent Conservatives, to the effect that an understanding may be arrived at between Lord Salisbury and Mr. Parnell, the former to pass the Land Purchase bill, as amended in accord with Mr. Parnell's views, and to concede at least partial Home Rule to Ireland, in the form of provincial councils for the administration of the local affairs of the several provinces. This would be satisfactory to Ulster and allay the strenuous opposition which Home Rule has encountered in that section of Ireland.

Mr. Gladstone and Sir William Harcourt were in conference yesterday. It is understood that Harcourt will lead the Liberal side of debate in the House of Commons this week.

THE TORY PROGRAMME.

Parliament to be Dissolved After the Passage of Two Important Bills.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Club gossip has it that the Tory plan for taking the best advantage of the disruption of the opposition is to hastily pass the Land Purchase and Tithes bills, and then dissolve Parliament and go to the country on a platform made up of these promises: County government for Ireland; an eight hour law for miners, and a royal commission on the subject of a general eight hour law and free education.

By issuing his manifesto in the Saturday morning papers, Mr. Parnell gained 48 hours in time in Ireland over Mr. Gladstone's reply, which could not reach most points in that province before Sunday night or Monday morning. It is likely that the resolutions passed at many places in Mr. Parnell's favor were secured by this fact, the Parnell document having been most assiduously distributed by Mr. Parnell's excellent machine.

Many priests in Ireland introduced into the masses yesterday a special prayer for unhappy Ireland, now exposed to new and grave perils.

GLADSTONE SPEAKS.

The Recent Disclosures Have Separated Parnell from the Liberals.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Mr. Gladstone, writing to Mr. Mellor, the Liberal candidate at Bassetlaw, says:

"Mr. Parnell's manifesto has widened the gulf made by recent disclosures and separated him from the Liberal party, who have now to consider the great and noble cause of justice for Ireland apart from any individual name.

"But I am glad to think, so far as appears, there will not be a severance between us and the Nationalist party, for Mr. Parnell throws over his colleagues. He acknowledges in them no right or authority, and goes past the constitutional representatives of his country in his fancied appeal to the nation which had chosen them to speak its wants and wishes."

There is no longer any doubt that Parnell will be overthrown, but he will fight the battle all the same.

The opinion of Ireland is divided, but Cork seems to be against him, as only one of its members out of nine, Mr. Joseph Edward Kenny, who represents the southern division of the county, is in his favor. The clergy of Cork, too, is ranged in opposition to him.

A telegram from Killarney says that the opinion there is that Parnell should resign.

A Limerick manifesto has been approved by the Nationalists in favor of his retention as leader, and a vote of censure will be passed on the Limerick members if they vote against Parnell.

Archbishop Croke's Advice.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Archbishop Croke's telegram to Justin McCarthy is as follows: "We are all sorry for Mr. Parnell, but will, in God's name, let him retire quietly and with good grace from the leadership. If he does so, the party will remain united in honorable alliance with the Gladstonians, success at the general elections is assured and Home Rule is certain. If he does not the alliance will be dissolved, the elections lost, Home Rule indefinitely postponed, coercion perpetuated and the tenants hopelessly crushed."

Parnell Will Fight.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Mr. Parnell wired invitations for his colleagues favorable to him to meet him at the Westminster Palace Hotel. Twenty-four members responded. Mr. Parnell discussed his position, informed those present of his relations with the Liberal leaders, and expressed a determination to fight for the retention of his place. A canvass of the Nationalist members showed (not counting the envoys in America) 48 against Parnell, 24 for him and seven doubtful.

Parnell's Visits to Mrs. O'Shea.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Mrs. O'Shea is stopping at Brighton with her four daughters. Mr. Parnell was with her there during the recess. He also returned there after the trial. Mr. Parnell is expected at Cork this afternoon.

ANOTHER WIFE APPEARS.

The Property of Editor Storrs Wanted by Two Women.

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 1.—Henry A. Storrs, editor of the Star of Liberty, an organ of liquor dealers, died here recently, leaving a widow, to whom he bequeathed his estate.

An attorney went into court and presented a petition signed by Mrs. Ursula M. Sedgwick, of Natick, Mass., who claimed to be the lawful wife of Henry A. Storrs, alias James H. Sedgwick. Mrs. Sedgwick sets forth in the document that she married Sedgwick in 1847 and that he deserted her and her children in 1867 and that she had never heard of his whereabouts until after his death.

Storrs was conspicuous in this State, New York and Ohio for several years as the head of an organization known as the "Sons of Liberty." It was composed of men whose ideas on the uses of liquors were liberal. The order came to grief at the death of its founder, and the local officers are paying its liabilities at the end of an execution. Wife No. 2 is keeping a boarding house here.

A DAUGHTER'S CHARGE.

She Accuses Her Old Father of Killing Her Mother.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—At the inquest to ascertain the cause from which Jane Newman died suddenly at her daughter's home, Eli F. Newman, the aged husband, took the witness stand and began his testimony by saying that he saw his wife six months ago. His daughter excitedly interrupted:

"Now, don't lie, pop. You haven't seen her for four years."

Newman finally admitted that he had not seen his wife in several years. The daughter, Mrs. Rothermel, asked for an autopsy and wished to be present when it should be made. Newman then arose to leave the room, whereupon she shouted:

"Oh! you old, gray-headed devil! You killed my mother. She died of a broken heart."

Eva Hamilton to Go on the Stage.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—Mrs. Eva Hamilton is now in this city, and an elderly gentleman who arrived with her is authority for the statement that she is to go on the stage as soon as the litigation over her husband's will is ended. A melodrama of romantic type is being built to order, and just as soon as it is finished preparations for her debut will begin. Several theatrical managers, he said, were already striving to engage her initial appearance.

Voted Against the Women.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Of the sixty charges comprising the Kingston district Methodist Conference fifty-six have reported to Presiding Elder Alfred Coons the vote taken in their respective churches on the question of the admission of women to the General Conference. The result is 588 for and 795 against their admission.

King Leopold Feared an Uprising.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Advices from Brussels state that the bill enlarging the suffrage was introduced in the Belgian Parliament by the personal direction of King Lenpold, who feared an uprising, and was alarmed by reports of Socialist agitation in various parts of his kingdom.

Fenian O'Leary Supports Parnell.

DUBLIN, Dec. 1.—John O'Leary, the Fenian, in an interview, thus refers to Mr. Parnell: "Though I never was Parnell's follower, I say Parnell is the only fit leader of the Nationalists. It is stupid to abandon him because Gladstone screeches. Gladstone's revised scheme can satisfy no possible party in Ireland."

VOTE FOR CUTTER AND REFORM

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Vote for Aaron W. Rand for Collector,

Judge Fernald, of Washington, D. C., with Mrs. Fernald, is visiting his son, the Rev. J. C. Fernald, of West Front street.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Rebecca Randolph, of Rahway, to Harrison Randolph, of Plainfield.—New York World.

Upon invitation, the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, of this city, will speak at the Preachers' Meeting in Newark, to-day, on the Mills meetings in this city.

There were twenty-five more accesions to the membership of the Rev. Mr. Mitchell's church, by profession, yesterday, making a total of eighty in the past two Sundays.

The Rev. Dr. Clark, of the American Baptist Publication Society, appealed to the congregation of the First Baptist church, yesterday morning, for funds, and received liberal subscriptions.

Twenty-three new converts were immersed by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes at the First Baptist church yesterday. The Rev. Dr. Everett, of Junction, N. J., made an appropriate prayer during the services.

Mrs. Fred Knowland has left Plainfield for a visit with her daughter in Chicago, and Mr. Knowland has gone to New Mexico in the interest of a syndicate that has in view the purchasing of a large number of valuable mines.

Ralph Opdyke, of Broadway, has arrived home from a four-months' trip in Europe. He expected to be absent a year, but the death of Samuel H. Jacobus, whose son was with Mr. Opdyke, called young Jacobus home, and his traveling companion came too.

Their thirteenth child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Deems, of Cedar street, North Plainfield, last night. It was a girl. Of the thirteen, nine are living. They were all born in Plainfield. Mr. Deems is employed nights as a baker, and sleeps in the day time.

J. M. Bingham, partner of the firm of Messrs. J. G. Johnson & Co., wholesale milliners, Broadway, New York, and brother of M. Bingham of this city, sailed Saturday on the Steamship La-Bourgogne for Havre, to attend the Paris and London markets. He will return early in January.

Vote for Rev. Joseph P. Taylor for School Trustee.

A WORD BEFORE TO-MORROW.

Cast Your Politics Behind You and Vote for the City's Good Alone.

To-morrow's election is probably the most important one the city has ever known—and, in many ways, the strangest. Until the votes are counted, the result is one of those things no fellow can tell; but it seems assured at this writing that Joseph S. Cutter will be elected Mayor by a majority of between one and two hundred, and that Joseph A. Haynes, DeWitt C. Ivins, Ernest R. Ackerman and Arthur T. Gallup will be elected Councilmen.

The causes that will bring about the reversal of the Republican majority for Mayor are many. The principal one seems to be mutiny within that party itself. The majority say openly they are tired of the old ring rule yet cannot overthrow it themselves. Their plan is, therefore, to help elect a Democratic Council and a Democrat as Mayor, to turn the chronic Republican office holders out and unseat the bosses. The next year the Republican party can take possession of their own again, unfettered.

This is a righteous cause, which every citizen can join in accomplishing regardless of politics and without the sacrifice of the city's interests in any way, form or manner. In Mayor Cutter the people will have an executive officer to be proud of. He will be at his post every minute of the day. His nominations for the several municipal offices in his bestowal will be creditable to him and satisfactory to the people they serve.

To use the words of the Republicans themselves—when they worked for the election of Edward Nelson as Councilman only a year ago—"It is a good thing to have a representative connected with the railroad company." There are many little benefits to be desired for the city, that only a Councilman on the inside of the railroad corporation can secure. Therefore the Republicans too should hope for the election of Joseph A. Haynes in the first ward. He is another who will always be at hand during the day, as will also Arthur T. Gallup in the fourth ward. The latter's re-election will be a vindication of the disgusting attacks made on him by the policeman with the foul mouth and his organ.

In the second ward the people propose to elect a second Spangenberg in DeWitt Clinton Ivins. He will come down to Richmond street with the unanimous vote of both parties. In the opinion of THE PRESS he will prove one of the best Councilmen the city has ever been favored with. He is a large property owner here, a man of extended business experience, far sighted, shrewd and broad. In the third ward the Republican nomination is equivalent to an election. But this year there is reason for congratulation that is unusual. Often and often the third ward has elected a representative to serve the people, who has served only those who sent him and has voted only as they ruled. But Ernest R. Ackerman is a different sort of a man.

VOTE FOR CUTTER AND REFORM

The Voice of Another Republican.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It seems so very clear that the very best interests of Plainfield would be conserved by the election of our worthy townsman, Joseph S. Cutter, to the position of Mayor, to-morrow, that it is superfluous at this time to utter a word to the voters of all parties in relation to the matter. Still, a reminder can do no harm. It of course will be remembered that Mr. Cutter thoroughly understands the affairs of our city. He has served as Councilman and Fire Commissioner to the entire satisfaction of the people, because of his ability and strict honesty, and as a defender of the tax payers against raids of "high-flyers" and profligates, and against any "boss" or "ring" rule, whether such rule were attempted by caucus or parlor influence. Being such a man, and desiring that the future of our city shall be one of progress and prosperity, and realizing that economy and an hourly watching of the administration of its affairs are imperative, he is beyond question the best man before the people to-day for their suffrages.

ANOTHER REPUBLICAN.

Vote the Whole Democratic Ticket.

A Scotch Thanksgiving Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scott, of West Third street, gave a reception to a number of their Scotch friends, Thanksgiving Eve. After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts had been duly honored by the quaffing of harmless beverages, singing became an especial feature. Some of Scotland's choicest gems were sung. Doncing was engaged in to the stirring strains of Wilson's band, till the "wee short hour ayont the twal", when, after singing "Auld Lang Syne", all departed for their various homes, happy to meet, sorry to part, and soon to meet again.

VOTE FOR JOSEPH A. HAYNES.

Another Big Investment in Plainfield Realty.

Mr. Brownell, a very wealthy Brooklynite, has purchased The Crescent building on Broadway. He is the same investor who bought "Oakwood," another part of the Evans estate. The value received for both properties was something over $100,000.

VOTE FOR ARTHUR T. GALLUP.

Two Valuable Christmas Boxes.

The ladies of the Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, sent, last Wednesday, a box of clothing to a missionary in Northwestern Michigan. This is a worthy case. The missionary's salary was to be $300 a year, but because of poor crops he got only $200. With that he is to provide for a family of four children and a wife. The box was one of the finest ever sent by the church. It was valued at $275.78, but the contents were more than mere values. There was a new suit for the minister, new overcoats for the boys, three new dresses for the wife, new bed linens, under garments, flannels and many other valuable new garments, besides many garments slightly worn.

The "Whatsoever Circle" of King's Daughters," of Trinity church, sent to the Sunday school of the missionary a box for a Christmas tree. This box was valued at $61.79, and contained gifts for eighty scholars. S me of these scholars walk six miles to Sunday school, and six miles back. The total value of both boxes was $347.57.

VOTE FOR THEODORE S. MILLER.

Reform Hall.

At Reform Hall last evening, after a touching prayer by Mrs. G. F. Opdyke, the announced speaker, Aaron M. Powell, delivered one of his finished and fact-founded addresses. Mr. Powell in a thorough and interesting manner reviewed the temperance question in its various phases, held up to view the terrible evils of liquor drinking and the liquor traffic, urging all to become total abstainers, and to dedicate increased efforts towards awakening public sentiment in hostility to a liquor oligarchy now covering our country as a net-work and endangering home happiness and the best interests of the people. Mr. Powell was listened to with close attention.

The following announcements were made by President Harper:

Regular annual meeting of the Reform Club Thursday evening next for the election of officers.

Sunday evening next, Gospel temperance addresses by Messrs. W. H. Sampson and C. T. Kissam of Plainfield.

VOTE FOR CUTTER AND REFORM

To Close up Its Affairs.

At a regular monthly meeting of the Middlesex Gun Club, held at Force's Hotel, last Saturday evening, it was decided to wind up the affairs of the club by offering its property for sale and using the proceeds to liquidate the club's indebtedness. This is done partly on account of a notification having been received from the owner of the grounds to vacate the same by January 1, next, as they were wanted for other purposes. The buildings of the club and fence are in good condition, and all the shooting paraphernalia of the best quality and improved make. Bids will be received by the Secretary up to Dec. 8. If not sold then the property will be sold to the highest bidder at auction on December 11 at 3 P. M.

Not Only Stole, but Threatened His Mother.

Charles Donohue, the fifteen-year-old son of James Donohue of West Third street, was arrested early Sunday morning charged with threatening to cut his mother's throat. The boy ran away from home about ten days ago, but was captured in Newark and returned to his parents. Jewelry valued at $100, stolen from the home of Patrick Day, was found in his pockets. Mrs. Donohue chided her incorrigible son for his waywardness, and in return was threatened with a violent death. His father had him arrested. The lad pleaded guilty to the charge, and will be taken before Judge McCormick at Elizabeth for sentence.

Vote the Whole Democratic Ticket.

Sidney E. Flower, the Democratic candidate for City Treasurer, is worthy of the warm support of every old soldier, and all friends of old soldiers. He served with credit in the First Michigan Calvary through the whole war of the rebellion, was wounded at Winchester, Va.; participated in every battle in which his regiment was engaged, and was honorably discharged after a continuous service of four years and seven months. As an upright and honest citizen his character is too well known to require further comment.

Vote the Whole Democratic Ticket.

Saved the House, but Burned Herself.

Children playing about on the lawn of John Giles, on Eighth street, Wednesday, in the absence of the family, set fire to the grass and endangered the house. A niece of Mr. Giles living across the street, saw the danger of the dwelling and succeeded in extinguishing the flames just as they were communicating to the wood-work. Her hands and wrists were severely burned.

VOTE FOR DeWITT C. IVINS.

—At the recent session of the Synod of New Jersey it was stated that there were twenty-five Presbyterian churches in the State without pastors and twenty-eight ministers without churches. This leads an exchange to ask: "Why not take twenty-five of the 'twenty-eight ministers without churches' and set them to work in the twenty-five churches 'without pastors'? There would then be only three unemployed ministers."

Judge Ulrich Opened the Ball.

Some one suggested the appropriateness of changing the name "Ripley Hill" to "Lawyer's Hill". There are three lawyers living on the eminence to-day, and three more are about to build. The bell-wether has started on the gallop in the direction of Ripley Hill; all the sheep are scampering in that direction now. Let them go; you can't stop them, if you would. It would n't take ninety days to unload Ripley Hill, the way things are going on, and the best thing for all of us to do now is to whoop it up for Ripley Hill.—Union County Standard.

Only Another Dream of the "Notorious Somerset Street Fake Writer".

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The long article published on Somerset street, as to the alleged City Hall project, is false in toto. The purchase of the Hand Building or any other was never seriously entertained by the Common Council. The whole statement is a falsehood from start to finish, and is only on a par with the entire make-up of that sheet. The plans referred to are not the plans that Mr. Clum has brought suit to recover on, but are an entirely different set.

A COUNCILMAN.

Want No Foreign Councilman.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The circular letter of the Republican candidate for Council in the First Ward, advertising his law firm in Jersey City, just gives the whole matter away. The voters of Plainfield want no Jersey City lawyer as their Councilman; but on the contrary need a citizen whose business is with the people of this city, who knows their wants, and who will attend to the city's needs.

The P. M. T. Co. Foot-Ballers Challenge the World.

At 11:30 o'clock of Thanksgiving Day, two foot-ball elevens of The Pond Machine Tool Co's men, met in an exciting contest on their grounds opposite the Works. The score at the close of a hard and scientific struggle stood 1 to 1. The P. M. T. Co.'s team are ready to accept a challenge from any club to play under American Association rules. Address W. F. Brown, care of the Company.

Notice.

The Independent Colored Club, which was recently organized in this city, has no connection whatever with the colored "workers" of the First Ward.

FIRST WARD COLORED VOTERS.

In croup and whooping-cough it is important to have a remedy at once at hand that is reliable and safe. Hires' Cough Cure fills the bill better than any medicine that has ever been discovered. Its effects are positive, quick, and sure. It acts like magic. Remember it.

A COMPARISON OF CANDIDATES.

Some Interesting Comments on the Mayoralty Question.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—And laboring men of the city of Plainfield, be he white or black, Protestant or Catholic, Republican or Democrat: To-morrow is to be held the Charter election, to decide who shall rule the destinies of the city for the coming year. There are two candidates in the field for Mayor: one is Alexander Gilbert; the other is Joseph S. Cutter. One is under a salary of $10,000 per year in the city of New York; sleeps out here; a very fine gentleman; a man financially capable of negotiating an unlimited amount of city bonds. Do you want it? The other candidate, Joseph S. Cutter, is a gentleman who keeps a grocery store here in the city; supports himself and family on the small profits of said grocery. Now voters, I want to ask you a fair and square question, and I leave it to you to answer at the ballot-box on Tuesday; don't be persuaded by wily politicians here to give your answer, but make it from your own mind. Here is the question to be answered: If you were in trouble or needed help for yourself or family, which of the two gentleman would you apply to for assistance? I mean after election is over. Think of it conscientiously and give us the answer on Tuesday.

Now as to the article published on Somerset street Saturday, concerning the extravagance of the present Council. The Somerset street man I presume forgot to state that when the present Council came into office they found an indebtedness of some $18,000 left over by the out-going Council, for which they had to provide; therefore the increase of tax-rate. Who was the cause of having the half of one per cent. increase in our taxes? The very same people who made the Republican nomination. How did they do it? By first going to the temperance men and agreeing with them that if they would vote for the one half per cent. increase in tax there would be no need of granting any licenses to run the city. After that was all fixed they got full power of Mayor and Council, and in order to carry out their contract with the temperance men they raised the license fee, as they said, "so high that none would apply, and so that Plainfield would be made a temperance city." We know the results.

Now, voters, look at the conditions of the two nominations. The Republican nomination was obtained by the candidate seeking the nomination by parlor caucusing for delegates, getting his men in line ready for the battle. If there is no profit in that office why so fierce for the possession? The other had the nomination thrust on him. Mark the difference, and give your answer.

What the Rev. Mr. Mitchell's "Visitor" Has to Say of General Interest.

Dr. Carroll continues to be in much demand for pulpit services, both at home and abroad.

Charlie Hurlbut, Clifford McGee, Minnie French and Clara Burt were home for Thanksgiving.

Mr. E. P Stevens, 65 Grandview avenue, has returned from Denver somewhat improved in health.

Mrs. Joseph Yerkes and son, George have returned home from a month's visit in Northern New York.

Mr. James McGee preached last Sunday morning in our church at Westfield, to the delight and profit of all who heard him.

None should overlook the respect and delicacy of taste which prompt the communicant to approach the Lord's Table with ungloved hand.

Mr. George Cornwell, our Assistant Sunday School Superintendent, did most efficient service as Chairman of the Committee on Ushers, during the Mills meetings.

It is remarkable that Dr. Hurlbut can accomplish so much labor with no apparent strain upon his health. We all wonder how much longer he can do two or three men's work.

Recent news from Kansas City informs us of the very critical condition of Mrs. George C. Martin. Her long and painful illness has been a great sorrow to her numerous Plainfield friends.

The plans for the North Plainfield chapel are most beautiful, and have been accepted by the Committee. It will cost $5,000 to erect the chapel.

The Monroe Avenue chapel is now inclosed, and its architectural beauty is admired by all who see it. Go and see it, and, if you have not already, you will want to take some stock in that enterprise. Look at the populous unchurched district in that part of the city, and you will commend the wisdom of our church in going to that people.

The following marriages have been solemnized by the pastor. Oct. 26, Benson M. DeWitt, Port Jervis, N. Y., to Jennie H. Martin, Deckertown, N. J.; Nov. 5, Cornelius A. Haring, Pearl River, N. Y., to Ruberta Adams, Plainfield; Nov. 20, Edmond Walter, to Stella DeCamp, both of this city; Nov. 24, Geo. A. Clark, Lowell, Mass., to Cora Weldon, Plainfield; Nov. 26, Joseph L. Hummer, Newark, to Laura Force, North Plainfield.

Our Sunday school is in a most flourishing condition. It could not be otherwise with so excellent a Superintendent and efficient corps of devoted officers and teachers. 346 were present last Sunday, and seven new scholars were admitted. So large a school with less than one dozen non-professing Christian pupils speaks most eloquently of the work of that faithful band of teachers.

A Letter from Dr. Lewis.

TO THE PUBLISHERS OF THE DAILY PRESS:—The report of my sermon on Thanksgiving Day of last week, as published by you on the 28th ult, and the head lines placed over the note of Dr. Carroll, in your issue of the 29th, call for further explanation. If the report of my sermon had been an accurate stenographic one, no need for explanation would have arisen. The list of "Titles of Religious Bodies," showing the divided state of Protestant denominations, which was the main point in my sermon, was obtained from Dr. Carroll's office, and from this, the facts touching that part of my sermon were taken. That list with Dr. Carroll's permission, I beg to present herewith for publication, if you care to use it. In regard to the statistics, which I did not consider an important part of my sermon, they were, as Dr. Carroll has said, taken from a Lutheran Year Book, loaned me from the Census office. They were presented by me as sufficiently accurate for my purpose, but not as the "official figures" from the census bureau: I never stated in public or private that they were such "official figures". At the request of your reporter, I furnished him the figures, without knowing what connection he was to place them in, or what he had written concerning my sermon. The injustice done me by the head lines placed over Dr. Carroll's note is too apparent to need recital. Such a heading asserts that I said what I did not say.

The central thought in my sermon was this: Protestantism claims to be a reformatory movement, out from the Roman Catholic church. It differs from Roman Catholicism, upon the fundamental point of "church authority", and claims to build its faith upon the "Bible alone". As such, Protestants ought "to be one": as Christ prayed that his followers might be. It is the duty of the hour for Protestantism to "become one", in order to justify its secession from the Catholic church, and to prevent its overthrow, or its reabsorption by Catholicism. To emphasize this need, I presented the facts concerning the divided state of Protestant churches, and urged them to unite, according to the prayer of Christ.

Yours truly,

A. H. LEWIS.

"The Jingling of the Guinea Helps the Hurt that Honor Feels."

But there are deeper hurts than those that honor feels. The seeds of disease are sometimes deeply sown, the system is secretly and surely giving away to some deep seated malady. Especially among females are many sufferers from inflammation, weak back, sick headache, nervousness and kidney diseases. For all these affections peculiar to women no surer remedy than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, prepared for their special benefit, can be found. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper and faithfully carried out or many years.

Anxious About the Bonds.

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 1.—The city of Corry a short time ago issued $110,000 in improvement bonds and intrusted them to B. K. Jamison & Co., of Philadelphia, who failed, to place them on the market. The city has no security, and they do not know whether the bonds have been negotiated or not. The city a few years ago issued $100,000 in bonds for local improvements when almost a similar misfortune happened.

THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

Secretary Tracy Dwells Particularly on Building New Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—In his annual report Secretary of the Navy Tracy says that since March 4, 1889, nine new vessels, which were at that time in various stages of progress, the first two being practically out of the constructor's hand, have been completed and put into commission, and that during the coming winter four more will be added to the list.

After making various recommendations for the improvement of the navy, the Secretary concludes his report as follows: "I would repeat here the proposition that was laid down at the opening of my report last year, that 'the purpose for which the United States maintains a navy is not conquest, but defense.' The best guaranty of peace is a judicious expenditure for the navy, such as will meet the necessities of the country. At the present time it has not such a force, nor will it have the force required even when all the ships now authorized are completed. The problem of naval construction has been simplified almost beyond belief in the last eight years. It only remains to add to the number of vessels of types already in existence.

"The price is not too high to pay if it affords the means whereby the United States, for the first time in many years, may be enabled to preserve and defend its rights. War is a great calamity, but it is not the greatest calamity that can befall a free, intelligent and self-respecting people."

Gen. Miles in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Major-General Nelson A. Miles, who is to take care of the crazy Sioux Indians and keep them from scalping the palefaces, according to their supposed plans, arrived here last night.

Defaulter Smith at Home.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Julius E. Smith, the absconding teller of the Merchants' National Bank, has arrived home, his friends having paid the amount of his defalcation, nearly $10,000. Mr. Smith had been in New York, where he tried to get something to do, but failed. It is not likely the District Attorney will prosecute.

NOT CONSUMMATED.

But the Marriage Will Take Place as Soon as Sam Can Be Caught.

During several seasons young Parks had been a constant visitor at the house of Abemleich Morrison. Sunday after Sunday the young fellow would come, and after sitting nearly all day stealing glances at Sookey, old Abemleich's daughter, he would go home. He was so bashful that when the time came for his departure he would glide out the door, jump over the fence and run like a jack-rabbit. Last Sunday he took his place as usual.

"Sam," said old Abemleich, "whut's your daddy doin'?"

"Makin' uv a steer yoke, uh, huh, huh."

"Whut's Lige doin'?"

"Ain't doin' nuthin'. Dun gone to meetin' with a gal, uh, huh, huh."

"Whut's your mother doin'?"

"Got sorter behind on her quilt an' is a-cardin' uv her bats to-day."

"Made your plant bed yit?"

"We've made one uv them, but we ain't made the big one whut we 'lowed to make."

"Sam?"

"Yas, sar."

"Whut's the usen actin' sich a blame fool. You love Sook?"

"No, I don't uh, huh, huh."

"Yes, you do."

"I don't nuther."

"Yes, you do, an' you wanter marry her."

"I don't now, no such uv a thing, uh, huh, huh."

"Yes, you do."

"Would you give her to me ef I wus ter wanter marry her?"

"Yes, you may have her. Come here, Sook," calling the girl.

"What do you want, dad?" she said, entering the room.

"Hold on, Sam; come back, you blamed fool!"

Sam had jumped over the fence and was running like a jack-rabbit. Old Abemleich says that the marriage may take place as soon as Sam "ken be hemmed up an' fotch to the house."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Literature of the Day.

Young Man—Let me have ten quires of the best supercalendered foolscap, three bottles of the best writing fluid, a dozen blotters, a couple of gold pens, three pen wipers, a steel eraser, an ink rubber and a box of brass paper fasteners.

Clerk—All right, sir. Going to write a book?

Clerk—May I inquire upon what subject?

Y. M:—Oh, I haven't thought of that yet. I want to write a book, so I thought I'd buy the necessary stationery, which is the most important part of the undertaking.—American Stationer.

He Probably Did.

"Here is a watch I bought of a fellow-passenger on the train to-day," said a man to a Woodward avenue jeweler. "Can you tell me its value?"

"Ten dollars would be a big price for it," was the reply.

"But I gave him $50 for it."

"Can't help that."

"But he said it was worth $150."

"It's worth about $8."

"What is he doing?" asked Mr. Figg, from the next room.

"Making a circus of himself trying to stand on his head."

"Oh, well, let him learn it if he wants to. It will come handy when his collar button slips down his back."—Indianapolis Journal.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

MANAGING A HUSBAND.

Ethel Carroll's Experience at Such Was Not Pleasant.

"SOMETIMES I think that you hate me."

"Well—I—I—do hate you."

As the words passed Ethel Carroll's lips she caught her breath and a frightened expression replaced the angry gleam that flashed from her dark eyes.

"I am glad that you are honest enough to confess your aversion to me," replied Robert Carroll, frigidly, without glancing toward the woman whom he had vowed to love and cherish. He rushed from the house, and, hurrying to the depot, jumped upon the train and was soon speeding toward the neighboring city of N——.

"Thus ends my dream of happiness," he muttered, bitterly. "Ethel is evidently striving to excel Mrs. Edwards in the art of 'managing' a husband, but," pulling his blonde mustache fiercely, "I do not choose to be managed—in that way." The words, "I do hate you" kept ringing in his ears. "She shall never say such words to me again," he muttered, determinedly.

"I am glad that you have made up your mind to take that European trip, Carroll," said Mr. Johnson, the senior member of the firm. "You are better fitted to attend to business of that sort than a man of my age. When do you start?" he asked, as he turned to leave the office.

"I have engaged passage on a steamer that leaves P. St. wharf early to-morrow morning."

"Nothing like promptness in matters relating to business," said Mr. Johnson, approvingly.

During the hour that followed Mr. Johnson's departure Robert wrote a number of business letters, then penned the following missive to his wife:

"ETHEL: I shall leave for England early to-morrow morning. You will receive a liberal allowance during my absence. An interview, under the circumstances, would prove painful to both of us. Good-night and good-bye.

"ROBERT."

"Those dreadful words!" she murmured brokenly. She felt half tempted to follow Robert to his office and ask him to forgive her. She hesitated, and the next moment her evil genius whispered that Robert had been "very aggravating," and also hinted that her own dignity would be compromised if she yielded one inch of the advantage gained.

"Mrs. Edwards would call me a weak little fool," declared Ethel, emphatically. "She says that Mr. Edwards would not think of opposing her now." Ethel's brown eyes twinkled and a silvery laugh echoed through the room. "Fancy Robert behaving like Mr. Edwards. He is so little, so meek and so—so extremely insignificant." A sober expression crossed her countenance. "There are husbands and husbands—and also different ways of 'managing' them," she concluded, meditatively.

The afternoon seemed very long to Ethel. She roamed restlessly from room to room and glanced at the clock every few minutes to assure herself that the hands were really moving towards the hour of Robert's home coming. Seating herself in the commodious depths of a great easy chair she clasped her hands above her head and mused on the events of the morning. Suddenly she hears the rumbling of a train of cars. She sees Hadley's bridge in the distance. The train moves rapidly—it is the evening express from N——. The engine dashes against an obstruction—quivers like a human being in distress, and the next instant the whole train lies wrecked upon the rocks forty feet below the bridge that spans the ravine.

"It is Robert's train and I have not taken back those cruel words!" wailed Ethel, wringing her hands.

"You do not care, you hate him," whispers a mocking voice.

"Robert is dead, and he will never know," cried the young wife, as she ran towards the scene of the accident. She dashes down an almost perpendicular

"I DO HATE YOU!"

precipice. Sharp stones pierce through her thin slippers and her hands are torn and bleeding. She throws herself beside a prostrate figure. "Robert, Robert, speak to me," she cries, frantically endeavoring to staunch the blood that flows from a wound in her husband's temple. "Robert, speak to me," she pleads, but the pale lips are silent.

"Oh! how horrible!" cried Ethel, springing from the chair where she had fallen asleep. "Thank God, that it was only a dream." She shuddered and turned pale at remembrance of the horrible dream. "If there should be an accident," she murmurs, tremulously. "I am nervous. It was only a dream—and yet—" she glances at the French clock that stands upon the mantel. "The express from N—— is due here in an hour and a half. Robert will be on the train. I will go to the station and tell them my dream—no. I can not do that, they will pronounce my fears the vagaries of an insane person."

Ethel clasped her hands nervously. "Hadley's bridge is only half a mile from the village," she mused; "it will be a relief to know that the bridge is all right and, in case there should be any thing wrong I can use one of my Chinese lanterns for a signal."

Twilight was rapidly merging into the somber shadow of night when Ethel reached the bridge. "Every thing seems to be all right," she whispered in a tone of relief. As her eyes became more accustomed to the gloom, she saw what appeared to be a huge body lying across the track near the center of the bridge. Lighting a match, she glanced at her watch. "No time to go back for help. What shall I do?"

The precious moments were passing. With a prayer upon her lips, Ethel stepped upon the bridge. Slowly and cautiously she felt her way. Once she glanced downward through the cross beams that connected the post of the bridge—she almost lost her footing; with a frightened exclamation she clutched the rough post frantically; with a mighty effort she controlled her swaying body and continued her perilous journey. Creeping on hands and knees she finally reached the object that lay upon the track. Miscreants had fastened two immense logs to the rails with strong wire. Ethel almost shrieked in her despair. "I must warn them," she panted. It seemed an age to Ethel ere she reached the opposite end of the bridge. "Thank Heaven that this is safe," said Ethel, taking the little lantern from her pocket. It was the work of a moment to light the small candle, and as the ruddy glare illumined the space around Ethel, she became aware of the fact that her slippers had fallen from her feet, her hands were bruised and bleeding, and, as she raised the lantern above her head, a red stream slowly trickled down the white arm from which the sleeve had been rudely torn during her perilous journey across the bridge.

A rumbling noise is heard, then a sharp, quick whistle sounds upon the air. Ethel realizes that there is not a moment to lose. A hundred yards have been traversed; onward she flies like the wind; the train rounds a curve in the distance; she swings her lantern frantically; the engineer does not see the signal; the brave little woman will be run down. She totters onward, waves the lantern wildly and shrieks aloud in her agony. The signal is seen. A moment later train hands and passengers crowd around Ethel, who has just sufficient strength left to tell about the bridge ere she sinks into unconsciousness.

"There is no time to lose," muttered Robert Carroll as he hurried toward P. St. wharf. Thrusting a dime into the grimy hand of a newsboy, he snatched a morning Herald and boarding the steamer and went directly to his stateroom.

At last the moving of freight, hurrying of footsteps and clanking of chains ceases and the great mass of iron and wood moves slowly out of the dock and, guided by a busy little tug boat, moves majestically down the harbor towards the broad Atlantic.

Robert leaves his state-room and going on deck paces restlessly to and fro. At the end of half an hour he takes the Herald from his pocket and glances listlessly through the columns. Suddenly his face blanches, he utters an exclamation, passengers who are in his vicinity gaze at him curiously. The words:

"TERRIBLE CALAMITY AVERTED!
HEROISM OF THE YOUNG WIFE OF ROBERT CARROLL, OF THE FIRM OF JOHNSON, CARROLL & CO."

danced before his eyes; with a mighty effort he read on, when his eyes rest upon the words:

"She thought her husband was on the train and went through the terrible ordeal to save him."

He jumped upon his feet and rushed into the presence of the captain. A few words explained the situation and an hour later Robert Carroll was transferred to the returning tug which carried him safely to the wharf from which he had taken his departure earlier in the day.

The hours that followed seemed like an eternity to Robert Carroll. As the train approached Hadley's bridge, he pictured in his imagination the slender form of his young wife moving cautiously across the long stretch of trestle work to save the life of the man whom she declared that she hated.

"Poor little girl," he murmured, tenderly.

With eager footsteps he traversed the well-known pathway. His heart beat tumultuously as he crossed the threshold of the cozy little sitting-room. Ethel met him with a glad cry: "Oh! Robert! I knew that you would come back to me," she exclaimed, joyously. "Forgive me, Robert, and forget if you can the cruel words that have caused us so much suffering."

Ethel raised her hands, all bruised and scarred and gently stroked her beautiful brown tresses now so thickly streaked with silver.

Before the expiration of another week Robert Carroll and his wife were on their way to Europe, and Ethel never knew that Robert had planned to go alone.—M. A. Thurston, in The Home.

A DAY OF TRIALS.

How It Was That Uncle Bobby Didn't Go to Church.

OLD BOBBY GIVENS sat on the steps of his little back porch early one Sunday morning strapping his razor preparatory to shaving himself. This was a regular Sunday morning job, for Uncle Bobby, as the neighbors called him, although a tolerably fair Christian and an elder in the Sugar Run Presbyterian church, was not so strict in his orthodoxy as to deny himself the luxury of his Sunday morning scrape. He even went so far sometimes as to take a pan of salt and go out to the "fur eend of the plaist"—and salt the sheep, although he never did this without a protest from his good wife Polly, who thought it "a sin an' a shame to work on the Sabbath 'nless there wuz a needcessity fer it."

It was his custom, too, in summer time to go out on the little back porch, which fronted the south, to sharpen his razor; this done, he would go into the house and, taking down the little kitchen mirror, would take it out and hang it on a nail on the porch where he could get a better light for his weak, old eyes. On the particular morning of which I am now writing Uncle Bobby had been having a hard time of it. He had started out early, as was his custom, to do the chores, and found that the horses, led by old Tom, the equine rogue of the farm, had all been in the cornfield all night. The old gentleman had a vast lot of trouble getting them out and up to the barn. He finally accomplished it, however, but not until he had kept the breakfast waiting for nearly an hour and worried the "wimmin folks" nearly to death for fear they'd "be late to meetin'."

Then the next trouble came when he found that he was utterly unable to get his razor in "good runnin' order." Three different times had he tried to shave and had given it up in despair.

So there he sat, in the soft morning sunshine, carefully strapping his old-fashioned horn-handled razor on the softest part of his boot-leg. Finally he succeeded in getting it so that it would

SO THERE HE SAT.

"cripple a hair," although it would not cut one clear and smooth like any good, well-behaved razor ought to do. Once more, then, he lathered his face and had just nicely finished one side when he heard a loud and excited "Helloa," proceeding from the lungs of somebody who had stopped at the front gate.

With razor still in hand, Uncle Bobby stepped off the porch and around the corner of the house to see who it could be that had hailed him in so boisterous a manner and on a Sunday morning, too.

The individual who had thus so broken in on Uncle Bobby's morning toilet was none other than Jake Taylor, the village postmaster, and that he had an important communication to make, the following will show:

"Helloa, Uncle Bobby," he exclaimed, as soon as he caught sight of that personage. "I wuz jess comin' eround the crick road an' I seed Bill Honnicut's hogs in that air bottom field a-wheat o yourn. They're tearin' down shocks an' raisin' the devil. I thought I'd better stop and tell you even ef 'tis Sunday."

"Much obliged, Jake," replied the old man, "I'll go right down and git 'em out." Then turning, he hurried back onto the porch, laid his razor on a chair, seized a towel and wiped the lather off his half-shaven face, snatched his hat from its accustomed nail inside the kitchen door and was hurrying away when Aunt Polly stopped him with: "Whar on airth are you-a-goin' now, Robert?"

"Them yar dad-burned, dog-bited hogs o' Bill Honnicut's has got into the bottom wheat-field an' I've got ter go an' git 'em out; whar's Tige?"

"Pap Givens!" ejaculated the old lady, "do you know what you're a-sayin'? Don't fergit that you're an elder in the church an' this is communion day, too."

"Oh, go long, mother. I hain't got time to listen ter you now. Yer, Tige, yer, Tige, yer, yer!"

The dog came bounding out from under the porch, his accustomed sleeping-place, and the old man, foaming with wrath, set off, Tige at his heels, "to get them fetch-taked hogs outen the wheat."

An hour later he returned to the house only to find fresh troubles awaiting him. As he came up the steps there sat his two daughters, Tillie and Callie, both in tears, while from the inside could be heard the shrill tones of the old lady alternately scolding and wailing over the ill-luck which had this morning befallen them. "Oh! pap," said Tillie, the younger of the daughters, and herself a buxom, rosy-faced girl of eighteen; "Oh! pap, what do you think? Cal and I went to hitch up old Doll to the buggy, and the mean old thing got away from us with the harness on, jumped the bars in the hoss lot, an' she's way out there in the back pastur' now. What'll we do? It's time now we wuz gettin' ready for meetin'."

"Goshermighty!" exclaimed the old fellow in despair, "what on airth'll happen next, I wonder? Wall," he continued as he took off his hat, and, sinking down on the steps, began to wipe his heated face, "wall, gals, unless you kin go an' drive her up she'll hev to stay thar 'til I git a leetle mite rested. I'm too mity nigh tuckered up now to go racin' eround after that old heffer."

The girls demurred to that proposition and went upstairs to finish their cry, while Uncle Bobby quietly stole into the cool, old-fashioned front parlor, where he lay down on the floor and soon forgot the troubles of the morning in sleep. When he awoke, dinner was ready and old Doll had, of her own accord, come back to the house and was standing at the watering trough in the barn-yard neighing for a drink. He went out and watered her, put her in the stable, ran the old buggy back in its place under the shed and then went into the house and took another long nap. That evening a neighbor driving by stopped to chat for a few moments and, in the course of the conversation, asked Uncle Bobby why his folks had not been to church that day.

"Wall," answered the old fellow, and there was just the faintest suggestion of a smile playing around the corners of his mouth: "Wall, it wuzzent jess quite convenyunt fer us to git out to-day, so we concluded to stay at home an' git rested good; fer nex' week's ergoin' ter be er powerful busy time at our house."

But that particular Sunday was long remembered in the Givens family as "a day of trouble."—Ed. R. Pritchard, in Arkansaw Traveler.

HE SAW THE DRIFT.

The Old Man Did Not Fall In With the Plan Proposed By His Son William.

IN ONE of the Southern counties of Arkansaw lived a pair—old Bill Aikens and his son Bill—who were characters in their way. They were well-known as sharp dealers and to drive a hard bargain. Young Bill was married and lived with his wife at his father's house. Bill assisted about the farm, while Sally, his wife, assisted his mother with the onerous duties that fall to the lot of a farmer's wife in the rough countries.

When strangers and uninitiated traders were scarce the two Bills would trade with each other, and it often happened, as a result of disagreement concerning these inter-family transactions, that a hand-to-hand scuffle between the father and his dutiful "chip" would ensue. The results were generally a draw, with the odds in favor of the old man.

Young Bill had been unusually sober and thoughtful for some time, and the old man suspected that something was on his mind, but he said nothing. One day they were behind the barn looking at the field of corn, when young Bill opened the conversation:

"Pap, you've done a heap of work in your day!"

"Yes, William, I've scratched er bit."

"You've just kept at it frum sun-up 'till after milkin', and by the sweat ov yer brow raked together this hull farm!"

"That's so, William," replied the old man as he shifted his quid of tobacco uneasily from one cheek to the other, "that's so."

"And, pap, it's gin me a deal of uneasyness to see you, at your age, rasslin with the cares of life. You oughter be jest settin' 'longside the fire, smokin' your pipe, or layin' out under the trees in the shade."

"That's so, William, I oughter."

Bill was so engrossed with the beauties of his own thoughts and plans that he did not notice a dangerous light in the old man's eyes, and that he spat on the palms of his hands and rubbed them together once or twice.

"Now, pap, bein' as you are gittin' old and feeble and your light just a flickerin' you give me a deed of the farm and you and mam kinder jog along the rest of your days with me and Sally."

"William," said the old man as he pushed back his sleeves and rubbed his hands together, "I think I see the drift of them remarks. My light's er flickerin', is it? Gittin' old and feeble, am I?

THE OLD MAN SEES THE DRIFT OF WILLIAM'S REMARKS.

When your old pap's ready for the poor house he'll talk to you. William!"

"Yes, pap."

"See that field of cornstalks?"

"Yes, pap."

"Well, to show that your old pap's light ain't er flickerin' as much as you reckon on, I'm goin' to knock down half an acre of them stalks with your heels."

When the argument was concluded Bill crawled painfully from under the barn and whispered to himself:

"Sally was to kinder bring mam to the point at the same time. I wonder if her light's put out, or if she's only crippled for life."—Edwin Ralph Collins, in Texas Siftings.

HIS ANNUAL MESSAGE

Text of the President's Recommendations to Congress.

AT PEACE WITH ALL THE WORLD

The Tariff, Reciprocity, Election Laws and Pension Matters Discussed.

The Amount of Money in Circulation and Expenses of the Government—Work of the Departments—The Mormon Question—Recall of Minister Mizner—Appropriations for the Public Service.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

The reports of the several Executive Departments which will be laid before Congress in the usual course will exhibit in detail the operations of the Government for the last fiscal year. Only the more important incidents and results, and chiefly such as may be the foundation of the recommendations I shall submit, will be referred to in this annual message.

The vast and increasing business of the Government has been transacted by the several Departments during the year with faithfulness, energy and success. The revenues, amounting to above four hundred and fifty million dollars, have been collected and disbursed without revealing, so far as I can ascertain, a single case of defalcation or embezzlement.

Friendly Foreign Relations.

The friendly relations of our country with the nations of Europe and of the East have been undisturbed, while the ties of good will and common interest that bind us to the States of the Western Hemisphere have been notably strengthened by the Conference held in this capital to consider measures for the general welfare.

The International Marine Conference, which sat at Washington last winter, reached a very gratifying result.

Negotiations have been opened for a new and complete treaty of friendship, commerce, and navigation between the United States and the independent State of the Congo.

Toward the end of the past year the only independent monarchical government on the Western Continent, that of Brazil, ceased to exist and was succeeded by a Republic. Diplomatic relations were at once established with the new government, but it was not completely recognized until an opportunity had been afforded to ascertain that it had popular approval and support. When the course of events had yielded assurance of this fact, no time was lost in extending to the new government a full and cordial welcome into the family of American Commonwealths.

The peace of Central America has again been disturbed through a revolutionary change in Salvador, which was not recognized by other States, and hostilities broke out between Salvador and Guatemala, threatening to involve all Central America in conflict and to undo the progress which had been made toward a union of their interests. The efforts of this Government were promptly and zealously exerted to compose their differences, and through the active efforts of the representative of the United States a provisional treaty of peace was signed August 26, whereby the right of the Republic of Salvador to choose its own rulers was recognized. General Ezeta, the chief of the provisional Government, has since been confirmed in the Presidency, and diplomatic recognition duly followed.

Minister Mizner's Recall.

The killing of General Barrundia on board the Pacific mail steamer Acapulco, while anchored in transit in the port of San Jose de Guatemala, demanded careful inquiry. Having failed in a revolutionary attempt to invade Guatemala from Mexican territory, General Barrundia took passage at Acapulco for Panama. The consent of the representatives of the United States was sought to effect his seizure, first at Champerico, where the steamer touched and afterward at San Jose. The captain of the steamer refused to give up his passenger without a written order from the United States minister; the latter furnished the desired letter, stipulating, as the condition of his action, that General Barrundia's life should be spared and that he should be tried only for offenses growing out of his insurrectionary movements. This letter was produced to the captain of the Acapulco by the military commander at San Jose, as his warrant to take the passenger from the steamer. General Barrundia resisted capture and was killed. It being evident that the minister, Mr. Mizner, had exceeded the bounds of his authority in intervening, I was constrained to disavow Mr. Mizner's act and recall him from his post.

Our relations with the French Republic continue to be cordial. Our representative at that court has very diligently urged the removal of the restrictions imposed upon our meat products, and it is believed that substantial progress has been made toward a just settlement.

The new extradition treaty with Great Britain, after due ratification, was proclaimed on the 25th of last March. Its beneficial working is already apparent.

The Behring Sea Question.

The difference between the two Governments touching the fur-seal question in the Behring Sea is not yet adjusted, as will be seen by the correspondence which will soon be laid before Congress. The offer to submit the question to arbitration, as proposed by Her Majesty's Government, has not been accepted, for the reason that the form of submission proposed is not thought to be calculated to assure a conclusion satisfactory to either party.

In the tariff act a wrong was done to the Kingdom of Hawaii, which I am bound to presume was wholly unintentional. Duties were levied on certain commodities which are included in the reciprocity treaty now existing between the United States and the Kingdom of Hawaii, without indicating the necessary exception in favor of that Kingdom. I hope Congress will repair what might otherwise seem to be a breach of faith on the part of this Government.

The friendship between our country and Mexico, born of close neighborhood and strengthened by many considerations of intimate intercourse and reciprocal interest, has never been more conspicuous than now, nor more hopeful of increased benefit to both nations. I recommend that our mission in the City of Mexico be raised to the first class.

Revenues of the Government.

The revenues of the Government from all sources for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, were $463,963,080.55, and the total expenditures for the same period were $359,618,884.52. The postal receipts have not heretofore been included in the statement of these aggregates, and for the purpose of comparison the sum of $69,882,097.92 should be deducted from both sides of the account. The surplus for the year, including the amount applied to the sinking fund, was $105,344,496.03. The receipts for 1890 were $16,030,923.79 and the expenditures $15,739,871 in excess of those of 1889. The customs receipts increased $5,835,842.88 and the receipts from internal revenue $11,725,191.89, while, on the side of expenditures, that for pensions was $19,312,075.96 in excess of the preceding year.

The Treasury statement for the current fiscal year, partly actual and partly estimated, is as follows: Receipts from all sources, $406,000,000; total expenditures, $354,000,000; leaving a surplus of $52,000,000—not taking the postal receipts into the account on either side. The loss of revenue from customs for the last quarter is estimated at $25,000,000, but from this is deducted a gain of about $16,000,000, realized during the first four months of the year.

For the year 1892 the total estimated receipts are $373,000,000 and the estimated expenditures $357,852,209.42, leaving an estimated surplus of $15,147,790.58 which, with a cash balance of $52,000,000 at the beginning of the year, will give $67,147,790.58 as the sum available for the redemption of outstanding bonds or other uses. The estimates of receipts and expenditures, for the Postoffice Department, being equal, are not included in this statement on either side.

Circulation of Treasury Notes.

The act "directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon," approved July 14, 1890, has been administered by the Secretary of the Treasury with an earnest purpose to get into circulation at the earliest possible dates the full monthly amounts of Treasury notes contemplated by its provisions and at the same time to give to the market for silver bullion such support as the law contemplates. The recent depreciation in the price of silver has been observed with regret. The rapid rise in price which anticipated and followed the passage of the act was influenced in some degree by speculation, and the recent reaction is in part the result of the same cause and in part of the recent monetary disturbances.

The recent monetary disturbances in England are not unlikely to suggest a re-examination of opinions upon this subject. Our very large supply of gold will, if not lost by impulsive legislation in the supposed interest of silver, give us a position of advantage in promoting a permanent and safe international agreement for the free use of silver as a coin metal.

The efforts of the Secretary to increase the volume of money in circulation by keeping down the Treasury surplus to the lowest practicable limit have been unremitting and to a very high degree successful. There have been purchased and redeemed since March 4, 1889, 4 and 4½ per cent. bonds to the amount of $211,832,450, at a cost of $246,620,741, resulting in the reduction of the annual interest charge of $8,967,609 and a total saving of interest of $51,576,706.

I notice with great pleasure the statement of the Secretary that the receipts from internal revenue have increased during the last fiscal year nearly $12,000,000, and that the cost of collecting this larger revenue was less by $90,617 than for the same purpose in the preceding year. The percentage of cost of collecting the customs revenue was less for the last fiscal year than ever before.

The War Department.

The report of the Secretary of War exhibits several gratifying results attained during the year by wise and unostentatious methods. The percentage of desertions from the Army (an evil for which both Congress and the Department have long been seeking a remedy) has been reduced during the past year 24 per cent.

The results attained by a reorganization and consolidation of the divisions having charge of the hospital and service records of the volunteer soldiers are very remarkable. This change was effected in July, 1889, and at that time there were 40,654 cases awaiting attention, more that half of these being calls from the Pension Office for information necessary to the adjudication of pension claims. On the 30th day of July last, though over three hundred thousand new calls had come in, there was not a single case that had not been examined and answered.

I concur in the recommendations of the Secretary that adequate and regular appropriations be continued for coast-defense works and ordnance. The defenseless state of our great seaports furnish an urgent reason for wise expedition.

The encouragement that has been extended to the militia of the States, generally and most appropriately designated the "National Guard," should be continued and enlarged. These military organizations constitute, in a large sense, the Army of the United States, while about five-sixths of the annual cost of their maintainence is defrayed by the States.

The Department of Justice.

The report of the Attorney-General is under the law submitted directly to Congress, but as the Department of Justice is one of the Executive Departments some reference to the work done is appropriate here. Especial attention is called to the facts connected with the prosecution of violations of the election laws, and of offenses against United States officers. The number of convictions secured, very many of them upon pleas of guilty, will, it is hoped, have a salutary restraining influence. There have been several cases where postmasters appointed by me have been subjected to violent interference in the discharge of their official duties and to persecutions and personal violence of the most extreme character. Some of these cases have been dealt with through the Department of Justice, and in some cases the post-offices have been abolished or suspended. I have directed the Postmaster-General to pursue this course in all cases where other efforts failed to secure for any postmaster, not himself in fault, an opportunity peacefully to exercise the duties of his office.

Evidence disclosing that a very large number of fraudulent certificates of naturalization have been issued, I beg to renew my recommendation that the laws be so amended as to require a more full and searching inquiry into all the facts necessary to naturalization before any certificates are granted.

Work of the Postoffice Department.

The report of the Postmaster-General shows the most gratifying progress in the important work committed to his direction. The business methods have been greatly improved. A large economy in expenditures and an increase of four and three quarters millions in receipts have been realized. The report will be found to be full of interest and suggestion, not only to Congress, but to those thoughtful citizens who may be interested to know what business methods can do for that department of public administration which most nearly touches all our people.

The passage of the act to amend certain sections of the Revised Statutes relating to lotteries, approved September 19, 1890, has been received with great and deserved popular favor.

The Navy.

The construction and equipment of the new ships for the Navy has made very satisfactory progress. The experiments conducted during the year to test the relative resisting power of armor plates have been so valuable as to attract great attention in Europe. Your favorable consideration is invited to the recommendations of the Secretary.

Pension Claims.

The disability pension act, which was approved on the 27th of June last, has been put into operation as rapidly as was practicable. The examination and adjudication of claims have, by reason of improved methods, been more rapid than ever before. The anticipated expenditure, while very large, will not, it is believed, be in excess of the estimates made before the enactment of the law.

The increasing numbers and influence of the non-Mormon population in Utah are observed with satisfaction. Now, it is quite true that the law should not attempt to deal with the faith or belief of any one; but it is quite another thing, and the only safe thing, so to deal with the Territory of Utah as that those who believe polygamy to be rightful shall not have the power to make it lawful.

Agricultural Department.

The report of the Secretary of Agriculture deserves especial attention in view of the fact that the year has been marked in a very unusual degree by agitation and organization among the farmers looking to an increase in the profits of their business. A very substantial improvement in the market prices of the leading farm products during the year is noticed. The export trade in live animals and fowls shows a very large increase; the total value of such exports for the year ending June 30, 1890, was $33,000,000, and the increase over the preceeding year was over $15,000,000. Nearly 200,000 more cattle and over 45,000 more hogs were exported than in the preceding year. The export trade in beef and pork products and in dairy products was very largely increased, the increase in the article of butter alone being from 15,504,978 pounds to 29,748,042 pounds, and the total increase in the value of meat and dairy products exported being $34,000,000. This trade, so directly helpful to the farmer, it is believed will be yet further and very largely increased when the system of inspection and sanitary supervision now provided by law is brought fully into operation.

Civil Service.

The law relating to the civil service has, so far as I can learn, been executed by those having the power of appointment in the classified service with fidelity and impartiality, and the service has been increasingly satisfactory. The report of the Commission shows a large amount of good work done during the year with very limited appropriation.

I congratulate the Congress and the country upon the passage at the first session of the Fifty-first Congress of an unusual number of laws of very high importance.

General Trade and Industrial Conditions.

The general trade and industrial conditions throughout the country during the year have shown a marked improvement. For many years prior to 1888 the merchandise balances of foreign trade had been largely in our favor, but during that year and the year following they turned against us. It is very gratifying to know that the last fiscal year again shows a balance in our favor of over $68,000,000.

The value of our exports of domestic merchandise during the last year was over $115,000,000 greater than the preceding year, and was only exceeded once in our history. About $100,000,000 of this excess was in agricultural products.

These promising influences have been in some degree checked by the surprising and very unfavorable monetary events which have recently taken place in England. It is gratifying to know that these did not grow in any degree out of the financial relations of London with our people or out of any discredit attached to our securities held in that market.

The Tariff Act.

The general tariff act has only partially gone into operation; some of its important provisions being limited to take effect at dates yet in the future. The general provisions of the law have been in force less than sixty days. Its permanent effects upon trade and prices still largely stand in conjecture. It is curious to note that the advance in the prices of articles wholly unaffected by the tariff act was by many hastily ascribed to that act. Notice was not taken of the fact that the general tendency of the markets was upward from influences wholly apart from the recent tariff legislation. The enlargement of our currency by the silver bill undoubtedly gave an upward tendency to trade and had a marked effect on prices; but this natural and desired effect of the silver legislation was by many erroneously attributed to the tariff act.

There is neither wisdom nor justice in the suggestion that the subject of tariff revision shall be again opened before this law has had a fair trial.

The misinformation as to the terms of the act which has been so widely disseminated at home and abroad will be corrected by experience, and the evil auguries as to its results confounded by the market reports, the savings banks, international trade balances, and the general prosperity of our people. Already we begin to hear from abroad and from our custom-houses that the prohibitory effect upon importations imputed to the act is not justified. The imports at the port of New York for the first three weeks of November were nearly 8 per cent. greater than for the same period in 1889 and 29 per cent. geater than in the same period of 1888.

Reciprocity.

In many of the products of wood and iron, and in meats and bread-stuffs, we have advantages that only need better facilities of intercourse and transportation to secure for them large foreign markets. The reciprocity clause of the tariff act wisely and effectively opens the way to secure a large reciprocal trade in exchange for the free admission to our ports of certain products. The right of independent nations to make special reciprocal trade concessions is well established and does not impair either the comity due to other powers or what is known as the "favored-nation clause," so generally found in commercial treaties. What is given to one for an adequate agreed consideration cannot be claimed by another freely. The state of the revenues was such that we could dispense with any import duties upon coffee, tea, hides, and the lower grades of sugar and molasses. That the large advantage resulting to the countries producing and exporting these articles by placing them on the free list entitled us to expect a fair return in the way of customs concessions upon articles exported by us to them was so obvious that to have gratuitously abandoned this opportunity to enlarge our trade would have been an unpardonable error.

There were but two methods of maintaining control of this question open to Congress: to place all of these articles upon the dutiable list subject to such treaty agreements as could be secured, or to place them all presently upon the free list, but subject to the reimposition of specified duties if the countries from which we received them should refuse to give us suitable reciprocal benefits. This latter method, I think, possesses great advantages. It expresses in advance the consent of Congress to reciprocity arrangements affecting these products, which must otherwise have been delayed and unascertained until each treaty was ratified by the Senate and the necessary legislation enacted by Congress. Experience has shown that some treaties looking to reciprocal trade have failed to secure a two-thirds votes in the Senate for ratification, and others having passed that stage have for years awaited the concurrence of the House and Senate in such modifications of our revenue laws as were necessary to give effect to their provisions. We now have the concurrence of both Houses in advance in a distinct and definite offer of free entry to our ports of specific articles.

Recommendations.

In addition to the important bills that became laws before the adjournment of the last session, some other bills of the highest importance were well advanced toward a final vote and now stand upon the calendars of the two Houses in favored positions. The present session has a fixed limit, and if these measures are not now brought to a final vote all the work that has been done upon them by this Congress is lost. To some of these measures which seem to me most important I now briefly call your attention.

I desire to repeat with added urgency the recommendations contained in my last annual message in relation to the development of American steamship lines. The present situation of our mail communication with Australia illustrates the importance of early action by Congress.

I had occasion in May last to transmit to Congress a report adopted by the International American Conference upon the subject of the incorporation of an International American bank. I renew the recommendation that a careful and well-guarded charter be granted.

I earnestly renew my recommendation that the salaries of the judges of the United States district courts be so readjusted that none of them shall receive less than $5,000 per annum.

The enactment of a National bankrupt law I still regard as very desirable.

The use of the telegraph by the Postoffice Department as a means for the rapid transmission of written communications is, I believe, upon proper terms quite desirable. I recommend that such legislation be enacted as will enable the Postoffice Department fairly to test by experiment the advantages of such a use of the telegraph.

Election Laws.

If any intelligent and loyal company of American citizens were required to catalogue the essential human conditions of National life, I do not doubt that with absolute unanimity they would begin with "free and honest elections." And it is gratifying to know that generally there is a growing and non-artisan demand for better election laws. But against this sign of hope and progress must be set the depressing and undeniable fact that election laws and methods are sometimes cunningly contrived to secure minority control, while violence completes the shortcomings of fraud.

In my last annual message I suggested that the development of the existing law providing a Federal supervision of Congressional elections offered an effective method of reforming these abuses. The need of such a law has manifested itself in many parts of the country, and its wholesome restraints and penalties will be useful in all. The constitutionality of such legislation has been affirmed by the Supreme Court. Its probable effectiveness is evidenced by the character of the opposition that is made to it. It has been denounced as if it were a new exercise of Federal power and an invasion of the rights of the States. Nothing could be further from the truth.

It is not, therefore, a question whether we shall have a Federal election law, for we now have one, and have had for nearly twenty years, but whether we shall have an effective law. The present law stops just short of effectiveness, for it surrenders to the local authorities all control over the certification which establishes the prima facie right to a seat in the House of Representatives. This defect should be cured. Equality of representation and the parity of the electors must be maintained, or everything that is valuable in our system of government is lost.

One can not be justly charged with unfriendliness to any section or class who seeks only to restrain violations of law and of personal right. No community will find lawlessness profitable.

No choice is left to me but to enforce with vigor all laws intended to secure to the citizen his constitutional rights, and to recommend that the inadequacies of such laws be promptly remedied. If to promote with zeal and ready interest every project for the development of its material interests, its rivers, harbors, mines and factories, and the intelligence, peace and security under the law of its communities and its homes, is not accepted as sufficient evidence of friendliness to any State or section, I cannot add connivance at election practices that not only disturb local results, but rob the electors of other States and sections of their most priceless political rights.

Appropriation Bills.

The preparation of the general appropriation bills should be conducted with the greatest care and the closest scrutiny of expenditures. Appropriations should be adequate to the needs of the public service, but they should be absolutely free from prodigality.

I venture again to remind you that the brief time remaining for the consideration of the important legislation now awaiting your attention offers no margin for waste. If the present duty is discharged with diligence, fidelity and courage, the work of the Fifty-first Congress may be confidently submitted to the considerate judgment of the people.

TRACKING THE MURDERERS.

One of the Nicely Brothers Captured and the Others Surrounded in a Cave.

SOMERSET, Pa., Dec. 2.—David Nicely, one of the four prisoners who escaped from the county jail, has been recaptured and is again locked up.

William Ferner, a young farmer, residing a mile from town, who was aiding in the search for the escaped prisoners, returned home before daylight and found Dave Nicely secreted under some hay in Ferner's stable with his leg and arm broken. Nicely surrendered without trouble. He was almost dead from exposure, being thinly clad and suffering great pain from his injuries.

While escaping, he fell from the rope, breaking a leg and an arm. His companions carried him to Ferner's stable, secreted him and abandoned him. Dave says his three companions were also more or less injured while escaping, but that they are now safe from their pursuers.

Joe Queer, the escaping prisoner who fell from the top of the jail to the ground, is said to be dying from injuries received.

One of the pursuers has just returned with the story that Joe Nicely, Keyser and Hambersom have been traced to a cave in the mountain just over the Westmoreland County line, where they are surrounded. They had arms, ammunition and food placed there in advance, and much difficulty will be experienced in taking them. There is now no doubt that Keyser and Hambersom, who were charged with trivial offences, were in the deep-laid plot to rescue the Nicelys, and committed the offences with the object in view of being placed in jail so that they could assist in the escape.

THE IRISH TROUBLE

Stormy Meeting of Nationalist Members of Parliament.

PARNELL MAKES A BOLD FIGHT.

He Tells His Comrades That the Liberal Leaders Cannot be Trusted.

Healy and Sexton Bitterly Arraigned—The Irish Chieftain Tells His Foes that He Gave Them Their Positions Before the Public—After a Long Session the Meeting Adjourns Until This Afternoon.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The meeting of the Irish members of the House of Commons, called to consider what action the Nationalist party shall take in regard to the leadership of the party, was intensely exciting throughout.

The motion for the retirement of Mr. Parnell was made by Mr. John Barry, member for South Wexford, who aided the late Isaac Butt in founding the Home Rule Confederation of Great Britain in 1872.

Mr. Joseph Nolan, member for North Louth, submitted an amendmant that the question of the retirement of Parnell should be postponed until the members had personally ascertained the views of their constituents on the subject, the party then to meet in Dublin and decide the matter.

Parnell made a vigorous speech. He not only showed his old time pluck and tact, but fairly struck fire. Facing Sexton, Healy and his other foes, he told them plainly that he had literally made most of them and given them their position in Parliament and before the public. Whatever genius they have shown was developed under his tutelage and discipline, and for what they are, and for all they are, they are indebted to him.

He then asked, with the voice of a lion at bay, whether they were the men to go back on him in this emergency. He might expect his political enemies to make capital out of recent disclosures, but he had an equal right to expect that his political allies would stand by him to the last gasp. He said that Gladstone was a garrulous old man, and he would not trust one of the Liberal leaders.

Mr. Parnell ruled out of order any reference to his conduct in the O'Shea case, and this brought him into frequent collision with the different speakers, especially Mr. Healy, with whom Parnell exchanged hot words.

Parnell displayed great passion throughout.

At 11:30 last night the meeting adjourned until this afternoon.

A SILVER SCANDAL.

Startling Resolution Offered in the House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—In the House Representative Dockery, of Missouri, offered for reference a resolution reciting that it is alleged that 12 Senators and 15 Representatives, pending the passage of the Silver bill, were admitted to partnership in various "silver pools," by which they realized $1,000,000 profits in the advance of silver after the passage of the act; and directing the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures to inquire into all the facts and circumstances connected with the alleged purchase and sale of silver.

The committee shall have leave to send for papers and persons and to report at any time.

Fire Fighters Killed and Injured.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—Fire in the large cotton yarn factory of the A. Campbell Manufacturing Company, on the canal bank at the foot of Robeson street, Manayunk, last evening, caused damage to the extent of $300,000. One fireman was instantly killed and three others were injured by falling walls. The victims were: Charles Snyder, instantly killed; Joseph Carter, John Colflesh and Edwin Schofield seriously injured.

Parnell's Wedding Day.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Mr. Parnell, it is said, has already appointed the wedding day about six months hence for himself and Mrs. O'Shea. Those who have met the pair say that they are passionately devoted to each other, and that Mrs. O'Shea's one ambition for years has been to become Mrs. Parnell.

Schaefer Defeats Slosson.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The great billiard contest for the championship of the world, a cup emblematic of the same and $1,000 a side, between Jacob Schaefer and George F. Slosson, last night, was won by Schaefer, who run out his 800 points while Slossen was scoring 609.

Robert Rushmore will give a popular talk to young men at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms, Thursday, December 11; and W. D. Murray will tell of "The Land of the Midnight Sun," Dec 18. Reserve these dates.

The sad news was received in this city, yesterday morning, of the death at Trenton of the father of Stevenson R. Hope, janitor of the Bryant School, and grandfather of Clarkson B. Hope. Old age, 86 years, was the cause of death.

The death of Patrick Conneely, uncle of James Conneely and father of Mrs. Peter McDonough, occurred on Monday. Funeral services will be held at the home of his son-in-law, 153 West Third street, at 9:30 this morning, and at St. Mary's church at 10 o'clock where high mass will be celebrated.

The tenth anniversray of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart H. Whitney, was celebrated at their home on East Fifth street, Monday evening. Only their immediate relatives were present but they numbered a house full of happy folks. Mrs. Whitney is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Force, of West Second street.

The children, grandchildren and friends of Richard R. Coriell, gave him a surprise party, Monday evening, at his home, 8 Liberty street, upon the occasion of his 82d birthday. He is one of Plainfield's very oldest inhabitants. Among those present, was his only living brother, Postmaster Abner Coriell, of New Market. Supper was served and a general good time indulged in.

The Electric Light Company Catch It.

President Kirkner, Secretary Murray, Trustees Babcock and Probasco, Principal Bulkley and Clerk Clark, were present at the regular meeting of the Board of Education, last evening. The question of lighting Irving School led to a lengthy discussion.

Mr. Murray said it was an outrage that the Electric Light Company, in the face of the ten-year contract to light the streets, just granted them by the city, should refuse to extend their wire to the school building unless the Board paid full cost of construction. Not only would the Company receive an income from the light used in the school rooms, but also because the assembly room would then be rented for entertainments in that section of the city. The new Chapel now being built by the Methodists, would undoubtedly use the light also. Yet, in spite of such sources of income to the Company, it was trying to compel the tax payers to build its line. The other members of the Board protested in the same plain and emphatic way; and the matter was referred back to the same committee with orders to continue the fight and never surrender.

The Board's proportion of the expense of assessing and collecting the taxes, amounting to $439.94 from April 1, was ordered paid. Chairman Murray of the Finance Committee, reported $2,818.66 as the balance in bank.

The Committee on Teachers reported the engagement of Miss West, "of Massachusetts," a teacher of seven year's experience in public schools. "To correct a discrepancy, and equalize the pay roll," Mr. Murray moved that $1.66 per month be added to the salaries of each of the teachers in the Irving School. It was so ordered. The Board then adjourned for two weeks.

THE COMBINE INTACT.

MAYOR GILBERT HEREAFTER.

NO CHANGE IN THE COUNCIL POLITICALLY.

ARTHUR GALLUP RE-ELECTED BY 76 MAJORITY.

HAYNES CUTS DOWN THE PARTY VOTE AGAINST HIM.

THE DAILY PRESS ALONE PUBLISHES THE NEWS.

Plainfield's municipal election of the year 1890 is over, and—all join in hoping—the best men have won. THE PRESS again proves its right to the title of "Plainfield's Only Newspaper," by publishing exclusively the full detail of the vote as below.

As will always happen under New Jersey's ballot law, it was a quiet election day and no one knew until the votes were counted, what was the result. The most prominent feature of the vote of the people was the reelection of Arthur T. Gallup in the fourth ward. He ran far ahead of his ticket, showing how eager were even his political enemies to honor him because of his brave stand against the policemen with the foul mouth.

In this connection a passing word may be said regarding the principal cause of Mayor-elect Gilbert's small majority. It was believed by the people that he was an admirer of ex-policeman Carey. Maybe he was before he knew the man. But THE PRESS is assured on the best of authority, that Mr. Gilbert will have nothing more to do with him. The tale of the other candidates is told below:

Wanted to Vote Ballots by the Quantity.

The seven men whose ballots were rejected at the Second Ward poll exercised their prerogative of citizenship in peculiar fashion. One voted two Democratic tickets in one envelope; two others deposited two Republican ballots each; a fourth voted two straight Democratic tickets and one Republican ticket scratched; a fifth inclosed in his envelope one Republican and two Democratic ballots, all three straight; a sixth voted a Republican ticket with everything scratched off. The two opposing political parties lost about evenly in this way.

A Plainfielder Protests.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

Cannot the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals cause the arrest of Dr. Phelps? Certainly this disgusting brutality ought to be at an end. Experiments on living animals are vile things. In the name of common humanity cannot this sort of torture be made such an expensive amusement for the torturer that he will be obliged to give it up? It is nothing but wanton cruelty, for some time it has been well known that very little if any good has ever been done by these beastly experiments. And a man who will practice them as Dr. Phelps has deserves the condemnation and contempt of any decent community.

JUSTICE.

Plainfield, N. J., Saturday, Nov. 29, 1890.

Ryan the Pitcher as Iago.

"Cyclone" Ryan, who pitched great ball against the Plainfield Crescents during the last of the season, made his debut on the dramatic stage in the comedy "A Cup of Tea," at East Cambridge, Mass., a few nights ago. He appeared in the third act of "Othello," and in the camp scene from "Virginius," taking the part of Iago in one and the title role in the other presentation. "Cyclone" pitched wonderful ball all Summer, and it is possible may be in a National League or Brotherhood team next season.

The First in Plainfield.

A Junior Christian Endeavor Society, the first in this city, was organized in Trinity Reformed church, Monday afternoon. It will consist of young people between eight and fifteen years of age. There was a large attendance, and 53 signed to become members.

Miss Alice Smith was chosen Superintendent, and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Assistant Superintendent. An election of officers will be held next Monday afternoon.

Ballots Made Worthless by Signature.

Some of those whose ballots were rejected in the Fourth Ward seemed to consider it necessary to record their signatures on the envelops they deposited. As this was a "distinguishing mark" the votes were worthless.

Now's The Time.

Never put off till to-morrow
That which needs doing today;
If you do you may find to your sorrow,
Too late, that you've trifled away

The golden opportunity of a lifetime. If those who complain of weakness and debility, have hacking cough and pain in the side or chest, poor appetite, broken sleep and other symptoms of a general decay of vitality, would promptly procure Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and take it as directed, they might throw off the disease that threatens them, and soon regain a hold on the health they are surely losing. Consumption may be averted, if prompt measures be taken, by the use of this standard remedy. Let those who have reason to feel that their general vitality is running low, be wise, and do something for themselves at once, for delays are dangerous. "Golden Medical Discovery" is warranted to benefit or cure in all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it refunded.

Voted a Receipted Bill for Mr. Ivins.

An absent-minded man who wanted to vote for Ivins for Councilman approached the second ballot box with a Democratic ticket in one hand and a receipted bill in the other. He voted the receipted bill and filed the ballot away among some business documents in his pocket book, then boarded his train for New York happy in the thought that he had voted for a good man.

In croup and whooping-cough it is important to have a remedy at once at hand that is reliable and safe. Hires' Cough Cure fills the bill better than any medicine that has ever been discovered. Its effects are positive, quick, and sure. It acts like magic. Remember it.

THE COUNCIL CLAIMS THE STREETS

And Approves the Ordinance Contesting Water-Works Encroachments—The Water Supply Company Sticks to Its Old-Time Charter and Says the City Can't Abridge Its Rights—Counselor Marsh Hints of a Fight in the Courts—City Fathers Closing Up Their Year of Work.

The Plainfield Common Council, at its regular meeting for December, Monday night, adopted an iron-clad ordinance which effectually prohibits the Plainfield Water Supply Company, and everybody else, from laying pipes, whether for water, gas, or what not, along the public streets, and from digging up the streets for the purpose of laying pipes, without the consent of the Common Council. Under this ordinance the Council strengthens the supreme right which it already possesses of saying just where and how pipes may be laid, and anyone, whether person or corporation, who lays any pipes, or digs up the streets for laying them, without first securing from the Council the necessary consent and the required designation of what streets may be used and how the pipes shall be laid, must pay various fines of $100, must instantly restore the disturbed thoroughfares to their former condition, and must heed the further provision compelling him to contribute to the city treasurer the sum of $20 for every day he neglects to take up his pipes and put the streets again in order. The ordinance of course contains its own provision that it shall not tend to prevent the repairing, and the tearing up of streets to repair, gas and other mains already laid.

But besides establishing the prerogative of the Council to protect the city's streets against the encroachments of designing people, the proposed ordinance goes a step further in bringing the Water Supply Company to terms.

No one—it says—may construct and operate in Plainfield a system of waterworks without at the same time providing an adequate system of sewerage to carry off waste water and other sewage refuse from the waste pipes of its waterworks system. But—it adds—and herein lies a power for compelling the Water Supply Company to adopt in its entirety the old Water-Works Company's contract or one as advantageous to the city—this shall not interfere in any way with the fulfilling of the contract already granted to the Water-Works Company of Plainfield.

Whether or not the ordinance will stand the contest of controversy in the Courts remains to be seen. In the opinion of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, who addressed the Council at considerable length on subject, the question of the validity of the ordinance hinges on the charter granted to the Plainfield Water Supply Company in 1869. This—he said—was a charter of very extraordinary powers, and virtually gave its possessors the right to lay pipes for water-works wherever they saw fit. In 1874, the Water Supply Company having meanwhile failed to continue in active organization, a supplement to the charter was secured from the Legislature, stipulating that none of the Company's perogatives should be injured by any past neglect or lapse. In 1872 the perfected charter of the City of Plainfield was granted, giving the municipal authorities power to regulate and to prevent street obstructions and to govern similar matters. The question whether that city charter limited or repealed in any way the Water Supply Company's charter was one which possessed argument, for both sides. The Water Supply Company would probably claim that the charter rights could not be repealed by corporation ordinances; and there could be no doubt that it was as impossible for the city charter to annul the charter of the Water Supply Company as it was for it to annul the charter of the Jersey Central Railroad. The city charter had the power to make reasonable regulations, but this ordinance sought to do more than that. It virtually attempted to repeal the franchise of the Water Supply Company. The Common Council had undoubtedly the right to say in what manner water mains should be laid but that it had a right to say "You shall not lay any mains" was a question. The clause of the ordinance which was most likely to be sustained by the courts was that which stipulated that no waterworks system should be constructed unless at the same time a system of sewerage should be provided to carry away the surplus water, so that the public health and safety should not be jeopardized. The Council had the right to prevent a nuisance. But Counselor Bergen, of the Water Supply Company, had assured Mr. Marsh that the purposes of his Company had in them nothing to affect injuriously the value of property or the best interests of the city. Mr. Bergen thought that the city had a misconception of the Company's objects, and had decided views to the effect that it was impossible by ordinance to repeal the Company's charter or to lessen its powers. If the ordinance should become a law, Mr. Marsh concluded, and an attempt should be made to ride rough-shod over the city, the men in the employ of the Company, would probably, under the ordinance, be arrested. And if the Company intended to contest the ordinance, they would probably secure an injunction against the city. In any case, it was probable that with such an ordinance as this in effect the city could have the question determined more favorably than if no such ordinance had been adopted; and that, he understood, was the object of the Water Board in presenting the ordinance.

After passing the ordinance on its first and second readings, the Council ordered it engrossed and advertised, preparatory to its third reading and final passage.

The presentment found against the city by the Grand Inquest of Union County, just before adjournment, last Saturday, was read by City Clerk Coward. It called attention to the impassable condition of North avenue near the Netherwood railway station, owing to the road being constantly under water, and reproved the city for its permitting such a state of affairs to continue. The Jury demanded that the nuisance be abated before the next term of Court.

Councilman Smith reported that the whole trouble on North avenue was caused by obstructions on the property of the Railroad Company and Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company, who had repeatedly been notified by the Street Committee that they must remove the obstacles. The matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel, who was instructed to communicate with the Jersey Central Railroad Company and the Land Improvement Company, with a view to abating the trouble.

A number of communications which had been received in response to the city's advertisement in The Electric World for bids for the construction of an electric street railway, were read. The letters all dealt with glittering generalities, and developed nothing of importance. They were mainly from electric "experts" and others who desired to be consulted concerning the contruction of a local rapid transit railroad, and whom the city "ought to engage, if it wanted to do well." An effort was made to have these attractive propositions and "advantageous advantages," as a constructing engineer wrote, referred to a special Committee, but the Street Committee was given charge of the matter by the following vote:

For Street Committee — Councilmen Johnston, Newhall, Roberts, Rushmore and Smith—5.

For Special Committee — Councilmen Hetfield, Jenkins, Moffett and Spangenberg—4.

The one noteworthy communication was from Manager Moore, of the Plainfield Electric Light Company, who wrote that his Company were ready to furnish the motive power for an electric street railway whenever any reputable concern should construct the road and get it ready for operation.

The Overseer of the Poor, J. Oakley Nodyne, presented his report for the quarter just concluded. During the past three months $776.87 had been expended for the relief of the poor. Forty families had been assisted, and forty-three were now on the roll. During the first quarter of the current fiscal year $830.49 had been spent, and during the second $1,095.63, making a total of $2,702 99 for the three quarters.

The City Judge W. R. Codington, reported 86 arrests for the past three months. Fifty-seven prisoners had been fined, seven sent to jail, six acquitted, and on sixteen sentenced had been suspended. The total amount of fines for the quarter was $426.

The following nominations for firemen were confirmed: Wm. H. Blimm, Joseph Wyckoff, Henry C. Bush and Nicholas Seader, to membership in Hook and Ladder Company No, 1; Wm. Chamberlain, Wallace P. Miller and Henry Benner, to membership in Plainfield Engine Company No. 2; and Robert H. Lowrie, Roger F. Murray and A. F. Venino, to membership in Alert Hose Company No. 1.

On motion of Mr. Newhall the Mayor and Treasurer were authorized to borrow, by notes, in anticipation of taxes for 1890, $1,000 for the use of the Fire Department, $400 for the use of the Poor Fund, and $1,500 for the use of the General Fund, the notes to fall due Dec. 31.

Councilman Smith introduced an ordinance, which was adopted on its first and second reading, and ordered engrossed and advertised, to reduce the salary of the Tax Collector from $1,500 to $1,080 per year, to be paid in monthly sums of $90.

An ordinance to change the official grades of Plainfield avenue, West Fourth, West Fifth, West Sixth, and Liberty streets, was referred back to the Street Committee for examination.

The ordinance compelling every pawnbroker in Plainfield to pay to the city an annual license fee of $50 was adopted on its third reading and final passage.

The motion of Councilman Newhall, to have all out-standing bills against the city presented at an adjourned meeting of the present session, so that the old scores of the dying year might be wiped out as far as possible, and no old bills be left to hamper the new Council, was carried.

Councilman Hetfield, at President Moffett's request, occupied the chair during the entire evening. The absent Councilmen were Messrs Dunham and Gallup.

The Council adjourned to meet Monday evening, Dec. 29. A special meeting will be held during the month to adopt certain ordinances on their final passage.

The Bazaar of Holidays to be held at The Crescent, Dec. 9, 10 and 11, will be in every way a charming affair. Various Booths will represent Feb. 14, Feb. 22, April and May 1, May 30, and July 4; also the first Tuesday after the first Monday in December, and Thanksgiving and Christmas Days.

A BRAKEMAN MAIMED FOR LIFE.

First a Foot Crushed, Then a Hand Ground to Pieces on the Track.

George Stapels, a brakeman of the crew of drill locomotive No. 31, will never use his good right hand again. He was coupling cars Tuesday afternoon when a chain to which he was clinging broke, and he fell on the track. His arm lay across one of the rails, and the wheels ground his hand to a jelly, while his forearm was severely crushed. He was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. His home is at Dunellen, where he has a wife and family.

Stapels has been peculiarly unfortunate of late. Only a short time ago he had a foot crushed on the rail, and from that injury he was just recovering when the present accident occurred. He was confined to his home for five months and had only been out a few weeks. His wife has been sick abed for three years.

Now for a Good Laugh.

"A Bunch of Keys," performed by Edouin & Sanger's company, is bubbling over with sparkling fun from start to finish and is just as great a favorite here as when first presented. It is full of droll and ludicrous situations and one has scarcely time to assume a straight face the whole evening. All people who delight in a hearty laugh, a catchy song and pretty dancing will not fail to see "A Bunch of Keys." The company is made up of good artists who throw life into the performance from beginning to end, and the parts are all well sustained. Ada Bothner is charming and vivacious as Teddy Keys, and Louis Wesley and W. C. Crosbie, as Jonas Grimes and Littleton Snaggs are especially clever. The play will be presented at Music Hall, tomorrow evening.

The Rev. Mr. Goodrich's Class Will Meet To-morrow.

Older ones may attend if they wish. The pastor will talk about the creed of the church. This class will be held weekly for a time. Other talks on the covenant, baptism, the Lord's Supper, etc., will follow.

Patton, whose eldest son resides on Ninth street in this city.

What It Costs to Run Fast.

People have no idea of the cost of the high rate of speed of the ocean steamers of the present day. Machinery will easily bear a moderate and constant work, but just the moment the engines are pushed, each additional mile in speed attained per hour is gained at an enormous expenditure of fuel and a terrific wear and tear of machinery. Indeed, so great is the wear and tear of machinery, when put upon a strain, that it soon breaks down and becomes useless.

We see the same thing in the human system. Men and women are constituted to work, and can do an ordinary amount each day without ill-effect. But just so sure as they overwork—attempt to live or labor at a greater rate of speed, strain their brains and nerves and use up their vital energies in a continuous or unusual amount of work, either mental or physical, just so surely will they in time become nervous and physical wrecks, with weak bodies, tired brains and shattered nerves. So true is this that our cities and manufacturing villages are filled with men and women who have thus sacrificed their health and strength by mental or physical work beyond the power of endurance. As a result they are excessively nervous, restless, irritable and sleepless. They lack their old-time vim and energy, and with tired brains, trembling nerves and exhausted systems endeavor to still pursue their employments.

How absolutely necessary it is for such persons to use something to restore their health and strength, and we would unhesitatingly say that nothing will so quickly and surely do this as Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great nerve and brain invigorant and health restorer. The effects of this great medical discovery are perfectly marvellous in curing all weakening and exhausting nervous diseases, and no one should lose time in trying uncertain things when this wonderful remedy offers an absolutely certain cure. It is purely vegetable and harmless, and may be procured at any druggist's for $1.00 per bottle.

Perhaps This Case Was Like Yours.

For the good of the public I would like to state the wonderful change that has come over me since I commenced taking Dr Greene's Nervura. I was completely broken down in health and suffered from extreme exhaustion and could not rest day or night. I had rheumatism and neuralgia in my sides, and all-gone feeling in my stomach, and a terrible palpitation, causing me to think I had heart disease. I had to give up work. I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura. From the first bottle I noticed very little change, but I am thankful that I continued its use, for I am now well, have gained 23 pounds in weight and work every day. That trembling feeling and terrible throbbing and palpitation of the heart have left me. I could fill columns that would interest people afflicted as I was, and will be glad to converse with any one so afflicted. W. G. MILES,

40 Blue Hill avenue, Boston, Mass.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

"The Jingling of the Guineas Helps the Hurt that Honor Feels."

But there are deeper hurts than those that honor feels. The seeds of disease are sometimes deeply sown, the system is secretly and surely giving away to some deep seated malady. Especially among females are many sufferers from inflammation, weak back, sick headache, nervousness and kidney diseases. For all these affections peculiar to women no surer remedy than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, prepared for their special benefit, can be found. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper and faithfully carried out for many years.

DRUNKEN DUCKS.

Mickey Finn and Mrs. O'Brien Have Some Fun.

IT WAS such an August day on Cooney Island as suggests ice, lemons, sugar, and water. All inanimate nature was athirst. The leaves on Gindsley's wood hung pendant, waiting for a breeze. The grass in the meadow was as dry and husky as Mike Finn's throat on the evening before pay day. The cheerful peewee was mute as a eunuch, and even the jocund sparrow had ceased his noisy wooing for the nonce. Phew, but it was hot! The flies bit with unconscionable malice. When repulsed they returned with renewed vigor to the attack, just as they do to a shining skull when the pious are at rest in church.

The clock in St. Mary's steeple had tolled a single stroke when Mrs. O'Brien crossed the Old Point road to the Finn shanty. Leaning on the window sill and looking into the kitchen she said:

"Have ye 'ere a cup o' flour, Biddy, that ye could lind me 'til pay day? Ye see, I want to make an Irish stew, for Paddy when he's comin' home the night, and I want the flour to thicken it a bit."

"Come in, come in," said Mrs. Finn. "Don't be standin' there in the sun and cukin' yersel' like a boiled mackeril. Now, that's right. Take the rockin'-chair, and while I'm brewin' a dhrop o' tay to cool ourselves, I want to tell ye that I have sorrow mighty heavy on me, as Tom, the turkey, said whin the ass ate his bed."

"Dear, dear," said Mrs. O'Brien, sympathetically, as she rocked back and forth and fanned herself with her bonnet. "An fwhat's ailin' ye, Biddy? Did the goat ate your petticoat?"

"Faith, he did not, thin. I hung it too high on the line for him. No, it's not the goat this time, Mrs. O'Brien; it's Flannigan's ducks."

"Do ye tell me so?" exclaimed the visitor, as she drew her chair up to the table, where Mrs. Finn was pouring out the tea. Both women lifted a cup and sipped the Chinese ambrosia with fine appreciation. As Mrs. O'Brien set her cup back upon the table she resumed: "An' fwhat quarrel have you with Flannigan's ducks? Shure, I thought they were as dacent ducks as you could find on Cooney Island."

"Thrue for ye, Mrs. O'Brien, and so did I until I cotch them up to their divilment. Faix, they were as harmless as the wrong ind of the billygoat till they found a hole in the fence. And since that time I couldn't kape thim out o' the garden. Didn't I stand here by the windy and see the drake and the tin ducks waddlin' their way widout sayin' by your lave,' all over me garden, standin' on their hind legs and atin' me currants and chewin' me lettuces and shelling me pase! Oh, dear, oh, dear! I dunno fwhat I'll do at all, at all, wid the dirthy waddlers!"

Mrs. O'Brien's nose had been buried deep in the cup during this mournful plaint. Just as Mrs. Finn concluded she withdrew it and looked inquiringly over toward the simmering teapoton the stove. Mrs. Finn took this delicate hint, and as she replenished the cup she asked:

"What shall I do, Mrs. O'Brien, about the ducks?"

"Lave thim to me. I'll fix thim. Whin does Mickey get home from school?"

"At four o'clock."

"Whin he comes sind him over to me and kape a still tongue in your head."

When little Mike returned from school his mother sent him over to Mrs. O'Brien. Five minutes later he was running at the top of his speed in the direction of Brady's grocery. While he was absent Flannigan's ducks, headed by the drake, had left Brown's pond and were serenely waddling their way homeward. They walked in single file, like Indians on the trail, the drake now and then uttering a peaceful, contented quack, which was taken up in succession by each of the ten ducks in the procession. It was a peaceful, restful scene, and the ducks were cool and comfortable after their protracted bath.

Instead of going around by the road, which was his usual custum, the drake took a short cut through the meadow, followed by his harem. When they arrived at the summit of the knoll adjacent to the Finn estate the drake stood up and shook his wings. The ducks followed his example. Then the leader crept under the fence into Mrs. Finn's garden.

Little Mike, who was on the lookout, saw them enter the garden. He hugged himself with delight and whispered to his mother and Mrs. O'Brien:

"Here they are!"

Mrs. O'Brien had a large earthen bowl in her hand. It was partly filled with broken pieces of pilot biscuit, evidently soaked in some liquid. Dipping her fingers in the bowl and stirring the pieces of cracker, she stepped to the door and began calling:

"Kip, Kip, Kip! Come, Kip; come and get your supper!"

The ducks needed no second bidding. The invitation was an exact counterfeit of the one Mrs. Flannigan uttered every evening. They tumbled over each other in their eagerness to get the food. Ducks are notorious gourmands. These proved to be no exception to the rule. They gorged themselves on the crackers as Mrs. O'Brien threw them upon the ground in handfuls. As the last handful was gobbled by the drake, Mrs. O'Brien said:

"Now, Mickey, me lad, you run out and drive the ducks into Flannigan's yard, where they belong."

Mickey had no difficulty in executing this order, for the ducks seemed to be more than ordinarily amiable. Little Mike lay down behind a currant bush and awaited developments. Meanwhile the two women had gone into the kitchen, where Mrs. Finn exclaimed:

SMELL THE CRATURS BREATH.

"I hope you didn't pisen the ducks, Mrs. O'Brien. It 'ud be a shame to waste all that duck mate. Flannigan's poor."

"Don't I know he is," replied Mrs. O'Brien. "But ye needn't worry yersel'. Divil's the harm'll come to thim ducks."

"Fwhat did you give thim?" asked Mrs. Finn, in a wheedling tone.

"Didn't ye see me givin' thim soaked crackers, acushla! Be aisy now for a few minutes and ye'll see somethin' as'll make you burst your apron strings wid laughin'."

When the ducks went through the fence into Flannigan's yard they had marched in the customary single file. But when they filed out into the door-yard they broke ranks and fell into disorder. The drake began to quack louder than usual and to be more than usually demonstrative in his marks of affection. Somehow his quack was unnatural. It began with a protracted "qua," and ended suddenly with a "ck" which was explosive. The ducks, too, acted queerly. Some of them leaned against the fence in negligent, careless attitudes, and their voices were quiet and subdued. Others swayed a little as they walked and leaned against each other for support. They rubbed their heads together and nodded sleepily. At last the drake staggered to the middle of the yard, flapped his wings, and, with one despairing squawk, gently rolled over on his back. The ducks, as if sympathizing with their leader, all followed his example, and, waddling serenely and vacuously to the side of the drake, gave up the attempt to walk and lay down with their feet in the air.

By this time the Flannigan family had become alarmed. They rushed to the door in a body, and gazed in astonishment and dismay at the picture of ten ducks and a drake all lying upon their backs in the yard, each waving its webbed feet gently back and forth, and all of them uttering in a chorus: "Quack, quack, quack!" which died away in a graceful diminuendo, only to be resumed again with recovered breath.

Mrs. Flannigan picked up one of the ducks. As it lay on her arms its head hung backward over her arm, as if the bird was just about to waddle into eternity.

"Bad luck to thim as pizened ye, me darlint," said Mrs. Flannigan, as the tears ran down her cheeks. "Oh, what shall I do, what shall I do, whin I have no more duck eggs of a Sunda'?"

Meanwhile Mr. Flannigan had come home. He proved himself to be a man of action.

"Mickey," he said to little Mike, who was looking over the fence with mock concern on his face, "run and get your putty blower!"

Turning to his wife he exclaimed:

"Go in the house, woman, and bring out the salaratus."

By this time the ducks had all become quiet. Their wings were outspread and they lay as if dead. When the salaratus and the putty blower were handed to him Mr. Flannigan took the ducks one by one upon his lap and blew a teaspoonful of saleratus down their throats with the putty-blower. There was no perceptible effect from this course of treatment for nearly twenty minutes. Then the drake slowly opened his eyes and emitted a gently protesting quack, which revived hope in the breast of Mrs. Flannigan. Slowly the drake came back to life. His quack gradually became stronger, and at last, with a supreme effort, he rolled upon his feet and began in a maudlin and uncertain way to preen his rumpled plumage. One by one the ducks assumed a decorous attitude until they were all back upward. As the last one regained its feet Mr. Flannigan picked it up and handed it to his wife, saying:

"Smell the cratur's breath!"

Mrs. Flannigan put the duck's bill close to her nose and sniffed long and carefully.

"It seems to me, Patsy, that I smelled something like that before!"

"Faith you did, thin," said Mr. Flannigan, whose suspicions had been awakened by the antics of the ducks. "If that ain't Brady's poor whisky I'll ate that duck, legs, feathers and all."—N. Y. Sun

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

LEARN TO SAY "NO."

[This poem, which will soon appear in "Pollard's Third Reader," shows a good way of teaching temperance to school children.]

In the battle of life you have started, my boy,
And it lies with yourself to succeed,
You can be what you will if you only resolve
To ask for advice and take heed;
There are foes to resist; there are tempters to shun;
These will meet you wherever you go;
But conquests are made, and life's triumphs are won,
By boys who have strength to say: "No."

There are billows to breast, there are tempests to brave,
There are crosses and burdens to bear;
On highway and byway the unwary feet
Are prisoned by pitfall and snare.
So many have perished who started aright,
Allured by earth's glitter and show;
But the conquering heroes who stood in their might
Were those who could firmly say "No."

Then choose at the onset, and write while you may
The record no hand can efface;
Your name may be wreathed with a garland of bay
Or blotted with shame and disgrace.
Be warned by the thousands who stumble and fall;
Be watchful, wherever you go.
And when you reply to the tempter's low call,
Have courage, my boy, to say "No."

THE GAY PERSON.

Opie Read Tells a Story with a Moral Attached to It.

Bench Leg John took care of the rooms occupied by a number of college boys. One evening when the old man came in the boys were talking about celebrated athletes.

"You're known some pretty strong men in your time, haven't you, Uncle John?" one of the boys asked.

"You better blebe I has, chile. I neber tole you 'bout dat gre't rassler, did I?"

"No; tell us about him."

"One time dar wuz er man—wall, we'll say his name wuz Jim. He wuz er good size man an' wuz built ter stay, he wuz. He tuck it inter his head dat he could fling anybody in de whole 'munity, an' he done it. Big men come frum all ober de country, but he flung 'em easy ernuff, an' nachully he commenced ter blebe dat nobody could put his back on de groun'. One day a mighty gay pusson come erlong an' wanted ter rassel wid Jim.

"'Wy,' says Jim, sorter laughin', 'You kain't do nuthin' wid me.'

"'I'll try you anyhow.'

"'Very well, an' dat's all de good it will do you.'

"Da tuck holt an' Jim laid him on de groun' widout no trouble er tall. De gay pusson went erway, but de next mawnin' dar he wuz ergin.

"'Whut you want now?' Jim he axed.

"'Wants ter rassle wid you.'

"'Whut's de use'n rasslin'? You kain't fling me!'

"'But I kin try.'

"'Yas, an' you tried befo', but it didn't do you no good.'

"'I know dat, but I wants ter try ergin.'

"'Wall,' sez Jim, 'ez it ain't goin' ter do no harm I reckon I'll try you ernuder fall.'

"He tried him ernuder fall, an' flung him 'bout ez easy ez he did befo'. 'Now,' says Jim, 'I reckon you'll go on an' nebber bodder me no mo.'

"De gay pusson went erway, an' dar wa'n't nuthin' seed o' him fur some time, but one day he come back an' 'lowed, he did, dat he want ter rassle ergin.

"'Dar ain't no use 'n rasslin' widyou,' said Jim. 'You kain't fling me. Go off summers an' rassle wid er chile.'

"'Den de gay pusson he say: 'It mout 'peer like rasslin' wid er chile, but you keep on errasslin' wid me an' I'll fling you atter while.'

"'Oh, dat won't do, weak pusson! You couldn't fling me in er bunnud years.'

"'Try me ergin, jest fur fun,' de gay pusson begged.

"'Wall, jest fur fun, ter keep my han' in, I will try you ergin.'

"He tried him ergin an' flung him widout no trouble. De gay pusson went erway, 'peerin' like he war puffeckly satisfied, an' de gre't rassler didn't 'speck eber ter see him ergin, but one mawnin' erbout er munt' later yere he waz ergin.

"'Fur greshious sake, whut do you want?' Jim he axed.

"'I wants jest whut I allus wanted,' de gay pusson 'lowed. 'I wants ter rasale wid you.'

"'Go on, weak pusson, an' quit yo' foolishness. You kain't do nuthin' wid me.'

"'Wall, but you won't mine tryin' me jest fur fun, will you? Kain't do you no harm.'

"'Now, lemme tell you,' says Jim, 'I has been foolin' wid you long ernuff, an' now ef you 'sist on me rasslin' wid you I'll fling you an' fling you hard; yere me?'

"'Oh, yas, I yeres you.'

"'An' still you wants ter rassle?'

"'Dat's whut I does.'

"'All right, I'll gin you all you want.'

"Den he seized de gay pusson an' flung him kerwhop ergin de groun' an' it 'peer like he dun bust him open, but de gay pusson he git up an' go on erway. 'Dar,' says Jim, 'I bet you neber will bodder me no mo'. I neber seed sich er' bitious pusson. He has vered folks talk erbout whut er great man I is, an' he ain't got sense ernuff ter know dat he kain't rob me o' my gre'tness. But I reckon he done fur now.'

"It wuz quite er little while befo' de gay pusson come back, but one day yere he come. 'Whut on de yeth kin you want dis time?' de mighty rassler axed.

"'I wants ter rassle wid you, sah.'

"'Now, look yere, ef you doan go way frum yere an' quit bodderin' me I'm gwine hurt you. I ain't got no time ter fool wid you. I rassles wid men.'

"'I'm a man,' say de gay pusson.

"'Now, look yere, ef I grabs holt o' you ergin you will wish I hadn't, fur I gwine hurt you an' hurt you bad.'

"'I wanter rassle,' says de gay pusson.

"'Den Jim he grab him an' bless yo' life da had quite a tussle 'fo' Jim got him down, but he flung him at las' an' flung him mighty hard.'

"'Now, I reckon he dun got ernuff, says Jim, 'an' I lay you don't see him roun' yere no mo' tryin' ter take my honors erway frum me.'

"All de folks ergreed wid him but bless yo' life, de ver' naixt mawnin' yere come de gay pusson.

"'Whut, ain't you got ernuff?' says Jim.

"'No,' says de gay pusson.

"'Now, yere, ef you 'sist on me rasslin' wid you ergin I'll fling you an' break yo' naik, sho!'

"'I wanter rassle,' says de gay pusson.

"'Jim grabbed holt o' him an' da went at it. Da rassled an' da rassled an' da rassled, an' sometimes it would 'peer like Jim had him; but de gay pusson allus flounced roun' somehow an' 'covered de 'vantage dat he had los'. Atter while, when ever' body thought dat Jim had him sho, de gay pusson gin er sudden flounce an' down went Jim kerwhop. De gay pusson hurried erway, an' de folks stood waitin' fur Jim ter git up, but he didn't. Da went ter him, an' whut you think da seed? Da seed blood runnin' outen his eyes, an' da seed his face swellin'. De man wuz dun dead.'

"'But what was the name of the gay pusson?' one of the students asked.

"'Chile, de name o' dat man wuz whisky. You is all flingin' him monst'us easy now, but keep on rasslin' wid him an' he gwine grow stronger an' stronger, an' one deze days when somebody go ter help you up da'll find dat de gay pusson has killed you.'"—Opie P. Read, in Arkansaw Traveler.

KILLING ANIMALCULES.

A Remedy That Is Infinitely Worse Than the Evil.

The following item has been going the rounds of the papers:

"Mr. Thomas Helsop, of Birmingham, Eng., possesses such keenness of vision that he is called the 'living microscope.' He will not drink water because he can see the animal life in it, but drinks whisky, etc."

Probably if he keeps on drinking plenty of whisky and no water he will be able to see "animal life," such as snakes, on dry ground. But substantially the same claim is made in seemingly scientific announcements of various "malt whiskies" and other intoxicants. People are urged to put a little in every cup of water they drink, and to use it even for their little children, to "destroy the animal life" or the "disease germs." We could give numerous instances of this, were it not for helping the liquors with free advertising. The question, especially as entering the home and the nursery, seemed to us so important that we submitted it to that accomplished scientist, Dr. Felix L. Oswald, and received from him the following reply:

1. Will an admixture of alcoholic liquors destroy infusorial life as found in impure water (and, for that, in any water exposed to a moderately warm atmosphere for a couple of hours)?

It will. To deny it would be denying the fact that alcohol is a poison. Any strong poison can be used as a disinfectant and antiseptic for the destruction of organic life-germs or the prevention of their development. Arsenic is thus used by taxidermists, alcohol by collectors of zoological curiosities. A toad pickled in brandy can be preserved for years; maggots and microbes that would otherwise promptly inaugurate a process of putrefaction know better than to touch viands served in a sauce of virulent narcotics.

2. But, can articles of food and drink be improved by such admixtures? "Is it not right, even a duty," to use a little antiseptic alcohol, not only for ourselves, but for our wives and children?

We might as well undertake to keep off gnats by drenching our night-shirts with vitriol. We might as well recommend a plan of expurgating flies by filling our parlors with clouds of arsenic fumes. The vender of alcoholic disinfectants proposes to obviate a possible, and mostly trifling trouble, by inviting us to run a serious and almost inevitable risk. He recommends a remedy infinitely worse than the evil. The organism of a normal human being will protect itself against an infinitude of microscopic disease-germs; our lungs, our digestive organs, eliminate myriads of—almost omnipresent—microbes in the course of a summer day. Nature has provided abundant safeguards against natural perils. Alcohol, on the other hand, even in small doses, inflicts a positive and unavoidable injury, and, moreover, the alcohol habit, like every poison-vice, is progressive; a few drops, administered once a week for "medicinal purposes," will soon beget a craving for daily drams—with beneficial results limited to the pocket of the nostrum vender.

In other words, the advertisers of "malt whiskies," "bitters," etc., propose to exorcise comparatively harmless microscopic imps with the aid of a Beelzebub almost sure to summon seven times seven able-bodied accomplices. There is a better way of dealing with infusorial microbes.

The question as to the prophylactic value of alcoholic febrifuges (——'s Bitters etc., etc.) turns upon an exactly analogous dilemma. The cure is worse than the evil, and (since alcohol, in the long run, tends to weaken the disease-resisting power of the system, and can not be mixed with all articles of food and drink nor with the atmospheric air) is, after all, apt to prove no cure at all. Dram-drinkers succumb to numberless disorders that spare total abstainers.—Better Day.

One ounce of alcohol raises the pulse three beats per minute, or, in other words, causes the heart to beat while its effects last at the rate of 4,300 beats more than natural in the twenty-four hours. The heart can not be made to do this extra work without suffering. The bad effects of alcohol on the brain and nervous system are equally demonstrable.

You will find plenty of people to throw cold water on any new undertaking at the outset. But Temperance people must not be afraid of cold water. It is often a valuable stimulant. When you have made the work succeed, those very people will be the first to applaud your success.—Rescue Day.

WAS IT HYPNOTISM?

Sad Mental Condition of an Economical Book-Buyer.

As I was coming down-town a few days ago I met Grizzly in the car, and as we were old chummies and had not seen each other for a few weeks, I greeted him very cordially.

"What's new in the papers this morning?" I inquired to set the conversational ball comfortably rolling.

"Paper isn't out yet this week. Say, I hear they have discovered gold in California."

I looked at him a little curiously, and before I could make up my mind what he was driving at, he said:

"No use talking, General Taylor is our man for President."

Then I looked at him rather closely to see if he showed any symptoms of insanity in his eye; but he was in appearance as calm and rational as ever.

"Now that we've got the Mexican war closed up in good shape and the Oregon question settled, it is time we—"

"Say," said I, breaking it upon him, "are you crazy or just giving me a whirl of some kind?"

He looked at me blankly for half a minute, and then a smile began to spread over his face. "I beg your pardon, old man, I believe I am getting a trifle off. You see, I got one of those forty-year-old dictionaries as a premium the other day for subscribing to a newspaper that is of no earthly good itself, and it just keeps my mind working about forty years behind the times. Let's get off and take something."—West Shore.

THE OCALA CONGRESS

The Farmers' Alliance Discuss Many Subjects.

OPPOSED TO THE ELECTION BILL

Hot Contest Expected Over the Formation of a Third Party.

The Sub-Treasury Plan Will Have Some Opposition—Alliance Officers Under Investigation—Powderly to Address the Delegates on Saturday—The Colored Members' Demands Startle the Leaders.

OCALA, Fla., Dec. 4.—At the Farmers' Alliance Convention during the morning a resolution was adopted providing for a committee of one from each State delegation to investigate the conduct of Dr. Macone, chairman of the National Executive Committee, L. F. Livingstone, president of the Georgia State Alliance, and President Polk, in reference to the charges against these gentlemen that they were influenced in their action regarding the Georgia Senatorship by monied considerations.

It seems evident that a contest on the Sub-Treasury plan will arise. It is claimed by some that this is class legislation and violates the Alliance constitution in regards to equal right and special privileges.

The committee of conference that is here on behalf of the Knights of Labor is the object of a good deal of interest. There have been rumors that Mr. Powderly was trying to swallow the Alliance and make it virtually a part of his organization. The constitution of the Alliance excludes from membership all city mechanics and many others who are now members of the Knights of Labor. Unless the constitution were changed, it would be impossible for the members of Powderly's body to become members of the Alliance. As for the Alliance joining the Knights, that is out of the question.

The biggest fight is likely to come on the formation and support of a third party. The Kansas delegation is solid for a new party, to be called the People's Party, to be backed by the Alliance, K. of L. and affiliated organizations. Polk and the Southern men generally are against a new party now. They think the movement premature.

Strong resolutions were adopted denouncing the Federal Election bill.

Resolutions were offered providing for changes in the constitution as to eligibility to membership, for the election of a legislative council and for redefining franchise so as to make the convention a strictly representative body.

The colored Alliance is also in session here and the attitude of the members on a third party is alarming the white Alliance leaders. They dare not go ahead so fast, and they fear that they will be seriously compromised before the country by the frank declarations of their negro allies. The demand of the negroes for a third party, instead of strengthening the movement in the white Alliance, will probably weaken it for the present, because of the socialistic aspect which the whole movement would at once assume.

Next Saturday has been designated as "Labor Day." At 11 a. m. T. V. Powderly, General Master Workman of the K. of L., will speak.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Gen. Goshorn Talks About the Progress of the Great Exposition.

CHICAGO, Dec 4.—Gen. Goshorn, who was Director-General of the Centennial Exposition, is in the city and will confer with Director-General Davis. In an interview Gen. Goshorn said:

"I am glad to see that they have got executive management down to the right basis. They could not have carried on the fair with so large a body as was at first proposed. We had this to learn, and it took a long time to learn it."

General Goshorn thought the work on the Chicago Fair was not as far along relatively as it was at this time at the Centennial. "We had our plans all ready in 1872, three years before the exposition was opened," said he. "January 1, 1876, we had all our buildings ready, swept out and decorated. We were favored by a mild winter, and the work was not stopped during the usual cold season. That is something that has got to be considered here. If the winters are severe, work cannot go on."

The general expressed his confidence in the success of the Chicago Exposition. He anticipated no trouble now that the executive management had been perfected.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Many Thrilling Escapes from a Burning Building in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 4.—Fire early this morning burned the building at the corner of Penn avenue and Ninth street. There were about 40 occupants in the building at the time, two of whom, Mr. Irwin, the janitor, and his wife, were burned to death.

The fire caught in the basement and ascended the flues of the heater to the third and fourth floors.

There were many thrilling escapes from the burning building, and several persons were seriously burned.

The building was occupied by the employes of the Hotel Anderson as an annex, of whom there were 16 in the building at the time.

Manslaughter in the Second Degree.

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 4.—Thomas Meskill, the New York house breaker, under indictment for murder in the first degree in connection with the killing of Officer Mosher Burnham, of Lansingburgh, in 1881, withdrew his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the second degree. The district attorney accepted the lesser degree of crime and did not dispute the statement that Burglar Sweeney, who died in a western prison, was the one who fired the fatal shot. Meskill was sentenced to Clinton Prison for six years and nine months.

A Big Contract.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4.—The American Dredging Company, of this city, represented by its president, Captain Isaac Albertson, was the lowest bidder at the opening of proposals for completing the ship channel leading to the harbor at Baltimore, and which were opened in the office of Col. William P. Craighill, U. S. A. The American Dredging Company bid to do the entire work, 6,000,000 cubic yards, more or less. It will cost nearly a million dollars.

Patrick Ford's Paper Supports Gladstone.

PREPARING FOR WAR

Congressmen Want Money to Fight Indians With.

THE QUESTION IN THE SENATE.

Mr. Voorhees Says the Redskins Are Being Starved to Death.

A Long Speech from Senator Turpie on the Elections Bill—Senator Cullom Moves for One-Cent Postage—A Bill to Restrict Pauper Immigration—The Copyright Bill Passed By the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Congressman Cutcheon, the Chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, believes we are going to have a great Indian war. For this reason he intends to introduce a bill appropriating $600,000 to carry on the war should it occur. Of this sum $300,000 is to be used in massing troops, $150,000 for the purchase of horses and the balance for incidental expenses.

In the Senate a long and interesting discussion took place on the subject of the threatened Indian war, apropos of a joint resolution to issue arms to the States of North and South Dakota and Nebraska. Mr. Voorhees having charged the situation to the fact of the Indians being starved, Mr. Dawes said he doubted the statement that the starving condition of some Indians was the cause of the present trouble, or that rations would be a cure for it.

Mr. Pierce said the red man seemed to get more hungry, as well as more noble, the farther people got away from him. [Laughter.] He questioned the statement attributed to Gen. Miles that a large number of Indians were starving.

UNDESIRABLE VISITORS.

A Bill to Restrict Immigration Offered in the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4—Representative Owen, of Indiana, Chairman of the House Committee on Immigration, introduced a bill to restrict immigration.

The provisions of the bill are made applicable to persons who are personally hostile to the principles of the Constitution or to the form of government of the United States; to idiots or lunatics, non-political felons, mendicants, indigent persons, cripples without means of personal support, and who are likely to become public charges, persons suffering from loathsome or contagious diseases, and contract laborers. The prohibition against these classes of people is also made to apply to persons not now in the United States who may endeavor to return.

IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

Mr. Turpie Made a Long Speech Against the Election Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—In the Senate Messrs. Voorhees, Dawes and Pierce had a lively debate on the Indian question, over a joint resolution to issue arms to the States of North and South Dakota and Nebraska.

The Election bill was taken up and Mr. Turpie made a long speech against it.

Senator Cullum introduced a bill making the rate of postage one cent.

In the House, a bill to make any person acting in a fiduciary capacity responsible for the pension money of minors, was debated without final action. A motion to refer it to committee was lost, 83 to 101.

Caucus of Democratic Senators.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The Democratic Senators held a caucus to decide upon a course of action in regard to the Federal Elections bill. It was announced after the caucus that they would continue as at present and debate the bill fully and in this way endeavor to defeat it. An order of business was also discussed, but not agreed upon, as the Republicans had not submitted their order of business, as expected. A meeting of the Republican Caucus Committee to prepare a rule for establishing the previous question will probably occur to-day.

Bogus Drafts on Senator Carlisle.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Senator Carlisle has received two drafts, recently cashed in the City of Mexico, drawn on him by a swindler representing himself as the senator's son, and calling himself John G. Carlisle, jr. The only J. G. Carlisle, jr., is the senator's grandson, 2 years old.

Chief Engineer Melville Honored.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—President Harrison sent to the Senate the name of Chief Engineer George W. Melville, of the United States Navy, with the recommendation that he be promoted one degree, in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress approved Sept. 30.

Passed the Copyright Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The House passed the International Copyright bill by a vote of 133 to 95. The bill has passed the Senate, but is amended slightly and must be returned to that body for concurrence.

YALE TESTS THE LYMPH.

New Haven Doctors Experimenting With Koch's Consumption Cure.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 4.—A small package of Prof. Koch's lymph has been received in this city, direct from Heidelberg, by Prof. Russell H. Chittenden, in charge of the Yale College Biological Laboratory.

Prof. J. P. C. Foster was placed in charge of the lymph and last evening he administered a dose by hypodermic syringe to a patient suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis. The dose was one-half the minimum dose recommended by Dr. Koch, and the reaction noted in cases abroad was immediately observed, though faintly, owing to the small injection.

This afternoon, in association with Dr. Bacon, who provides a case of lupus, Dr. Foster will treat the case and also a case of tubercular laryngitis, selected by Dr. Swain. The amount of lymph is only sufficient for a test in these cases, and it will be useless to make application for treatment of other cases.

It is believed that the lymph is the first received and injected in America.

HE DID NOT RETURN TO LIFE.

His Sisters Watched the Corpse for Sixteen Days Before Burial.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Dec. 4.—The body of George W. Fay, a prominent druggist of this place, was buried in the Greenmount Cemetery, about two miles from Hammonton, yesterday. Mr. Fay died 16 days ago, but his three sisters, who are Spiritualists, would not consent to his burial, believing that he would return to life.

The corpse still retained its lifelike appearance, the cheeks being as red as roses. Not for one moment during the past 16 days have the sisters left the corpse. They took turns in watching the lifeless form of their brother and have not doubted or lost faith in the spirits.

Other Spiritualists of the place had long ago given up the idea that Fay was alive and were anxious for the burial to take place.

Eva Goes to the Woods.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Dec. 4.—Mrs. Eva Ray Hamilton, dressed in widows' weeds and accompanied by a gray-headed old man, left Taylor's Hotel, and, buying a ticket at the Pennsylvania Railroad depot, started to Wyalusing, a small town on a branch of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, in the northeastern portion of Pennsylvania. The old man had the appearance of a prosperous farmer. Wyalusing is only a short distance from Elmira, N. Y., where Eva spent a good deal of time in her riotous youth.

Big Woolen Mills Company Fail.

PASSAIC, N. J., Dec. 4.—The Rittenhouse Manufacturing Company, operating extensive woolen mills here, has failed, with liabilities of about $800,000. The assets of the firm are stated to be about $20,000 less. The failure was brought about by the embarrassment of other houses and the low prices prevailing in the wool market. The company has been in a shaky condition for several days past.

Summer Cottages Burned.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Dec. 4.—Two large summer cottages at Lock Harbor, owned by J. H. Manly, of New York, and P. C. Knight, the large silk manufacturer at Paterson, burned to to the ground, causing a loss in each case of $3,500. It is supposed to be the work of incendiaries.

PARNELL CONFIDENT

The Irish Leader Says He Will Retain His Supremacy.

CHEERED BY AMERICAN SUPPORT

The Nationalists Hope for a Settlement of the Trouble To-Day.

Clancy's Compromise Resolution to be Acted on This Afternoon—Dublin and Cork Anxiously Awaiting the News—The Liberals Not Hopeful and Desire Parnell's Retirement from Political Life.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Notwithstanding the course of the majority of the Irish members, Parnell is gaining strength every hour, and stands the only recognized leader of a cohesive Irish party. He and his followers have been much strengthened, and his opponents disheartened, by the telegrams pouring in from various places in the United States, all upholding Parnell, and some in express terms repudiating Dillon and O'Brien and their colleagues, for antagonizing him.

It is feared that the Irish mission in the United States may prove a failure, owing to the sentiment of aversion which dispatches indicate has been aroused against the delegates in many places by their anti-Parnell action.

Timothy Healy is scored in severe terms by Parnell's friends for the contrast between his fulsome eulogy of Mr. Parnell at the Leinster Hall meeting a few days ago and his present expression of bitter hostility.

Dublin and Cork Excited.

Dispatches from Dublin and Cork say that crowds were assembled all day around the newspaper offices, waiting for news from London, and cheering for Parnell. The Parnellites pooh-pooh the action of the Catholic Archbishops in declaring against Parnell, and claim that the prelates do not possess so much influence as is generally thought. They point to the fact that though the Pope issued a rescript against the Plan of Campaign, the clergy were unable to make any headway in opposing that movement, and they assert that history will repeat itself in this instance.

THE CLANCY COMPROMISE.

The Nationalists Hope for a Satisfactory Settlement To-Day.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—It is learned that Mr. Clancy's compromise plan, to consider which the Irish Nationalist Conference adjourned until this afternoon, involves the temporary retirement from the leadership of the Irish party of Mr. Parnell. Such retirement is, however, to be subject to the extraction from Mr. Gladstone of certain conditions in connection with the promised home rule scheme in the event of a Liberal victory in the next general election.

The Nationalists' hopes are raised that a unanimous, harmonious and satisfactory settlement will be the outcome of the present efforts at compromise.

In Liberal circles these hopes are not shared, and the attitude of those at the front of the opposition to Mr. Parnell in that party is still one of unyielding and resolute determination to drive that gentleman out of the politics of the Empire.

Mr. Parnell expresses himself this morning as confident of retaining his supremacy in the Irish party. The feeling among his adherents is that his position is stronger than at any previous stage of the dispute, especially by reason of the assurances of support received from America.

SALISBURY SPEAKS.

He Challenges Gladstone to Reveal the Facts of the Hawarden Interview.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Lord Salisbury, speaking at Waterfoot, Lancashire, last night, said that while the moral outburst against Mr. Parnell for violation of the Seventh Commandment was creditable, he regretted that Irish breaches of the Sixth and Eighth Commandments hitherto had escaped condemnation.

Messrs. Healy and Sexton, after supporting their leader, had now turned and rent him. The Liberal leaders had refrained from taking any decided view of the scandal until they saw the effect of the revelations upon the religious community.

He challenged Mr. Gladstone to reveal the actual facts of the Hawarden interview. A crisis had been inevitable, sooner or later, from the very nature of the Liberal-Nationalist alliance. Such a dark and vague policy would be impossible in future.

Irish Bishops Issue a Manifesto.

DUBLIN, Dec. 4.—The Catholic hierarchy have issued a manifesto declaring that the judgment expressed by the prelates against Mr. Parnell is not given on political grounds, but solely upon the revelations in the divorce court, after which they are unable to regard Mr. Parnell in any other light than as convicted of one of the gravest offences known against religion and society.

A Prominent Divine Dead.

Was the Bullet Placed in Lawyer Townsend's Brain After Death?

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 4.—Excitement over the mysterious death of John Townsend, jr., the retired New York lawyer, is as great as ever.

People who live near the scene of the tragedy have no end of theories as to the causes which led up to the gentleman's death and the subsequent events connected with it. One story, which has just been started, is of a startling nature, yet it has gained many ready believers.

It is to the effect that a ghastly trick has been played upon the authorities of the town and county. It is asserted that after the body of Mr. Townsend had been removed from the foot of the cliff where it was found, and while it was lying in the morgue here, some unknown person deliberately placed a flattened bullet in the brain of the dead man. This, it is asserted, could be done by pushing it through one of the two orifices in the crushed skull.

The persistent action of one or two parties, who insisted upon having an inquest, seems to have aroused the first suspicion that the ball found in the brain had never been forced there by the discharge of a pistol. The somewhat remarkable conduct of these suspicious parties within the past 48 hours seems to strengthen this theory.

This story has given another sensational turn to the case, and when the inquest is held to-day it will be fully investigated. No direct charge has been formulated against any person yet, but it is believed that the people will be very much aroused when certain facts come to light.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Mary E. Slevin, of New York city, is spending a few weeks with her cousin, Sadie F. Blyth, at Netherwood.

F. H. Martin arrived home from Denver Wednesday evening. He has gained in weight, and looks the picture of health.

Several ladies of Plainfield are attending the meeting of the New York League of Unitarian Women held to-day in the Second Unitarian church of Brooklyn. A paper was read at 11:30 A. M.; on the "Ethics of Giving," by Mrs. Charles T. Catlin, who gave an interesting and exhaustive discussion of the subject.

A Plainfield Lawyer Against the United States.

Daniel F. Beatty, the Washington, N. J., organ and piano manufacturer, on returning from his trip around the world, found that his enemies had taken advantage of his absence to injure him. The United States Grand Jury soon afterward, on ex parte evidence, found indictments against him under the act of Congress regulating the use of the mails. They are the same character of indictments as that on which he was acquitted two years ago after three days' trial in the United States Court.

Craig A. Marsh, of this city, who conducted Mr. Beatty's defense on the occasion of the former trial, has been retained in the present case. He denounces the attacks on his client as the spiteful work of jealous rivals and enemies of Mr. Beatty in the organ trade, and confidently expects first to gain an acquittal and next to look after the conspirators and see that they are properly punished. Beatty makes no mistake in coming to Plainfield for his lawyer, even though there are eminent counsel already engaged by the government on the other side, who will be assisted by other counsel engaged by rivals of the accused.

Adjusting the Loss on Mr. Cooley's House.

The insurance companies represented by M. Marvin Dunham have paid to Martin I. Cooley, whose residence in the borough was recently damaged by fire, $3,576.83 as the loss on the furniture. The companies paid Mr. Dunham a compliment by making him their adjuster, instead of sending out a man from New York.

In the matter of loss on the house itself, there is a dispute over the actual damage. The insurance companies' builder and Mr. Cooley's builder differ as to the amount which will cover the repairs. A third builder will be called in to help arbitrate the matter.

Plainfield Again to Hear the Hampton Singers.

A public meeting in the interest of the Christian education of the negro and Indian will be held in the Crescent Avenue church, Monday evening, December 8, at 8 o'clock. Brief original addresses will be made by negro and Indian young men from the Hampton Institute. There will be singing by a Hampton quartette, and addresses by General Armstrong and the Chaplain, Mr. Frissell. The Rev. E. M. Rodman will preside. All are invited.

Slippery Sidewalks Must Not Be.

George Grant, Captain of Police, calls public attention to the city ordinance which imposes a penalty on property-holders who fail either to remove snow, slush and ice from their sidewalks or to cover the ice with ashes or sawdust, and gives timely warning that he is prepared to enforce the law.

In croup and whooping-cough it is important to have a remedy at once at hand that is reliable and safe. Hires' Cough Cure fills the bill better than any medicine that has ever been discovered. Its effects are positive, quick, and sure. It acts like magic. Remember it.

HYMENEAL.

Rushmore—Murray.

At the Crescent Avenue church, last evening, took place the marriage ceremony of Councilman Rushmore, son of ex-Councilman Isaac W. Rushmore, and Miss Jean Bertram Murray, daughter of John W. Murray, all of this city.

The time of the ceremony was fixed at seven o'clock, but although the guests began to arrive long before that time it was after the hour before the stream of carriages could deposit their loads at the door.

The floral decorations, by Denton of this city, were profuse, but in thorough good taste. The church altar was hidden beneath a mass of chrysanthemums, callas, and palms. The numerous white and tinted dresses of the ladies present also added to the beauty of the scene.

The bride was attired in white brocaded silk trimmed with point lace and orange blossoms. She carried Nephetus roses. The maid of honor, Miss Gussie Murray, and the bridesmaids, Miss Minnie Murray and Miss Gertrude Rushmore, wore white and carried Mermet roses. The "best man" was Robert Rushmore, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Wm. D. Murray, James Murray and Walter Murray, brothers, and Jules Erickson, cousin, of the bride, also Ernest R. Ackerman and George Griffen.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given at the residence of the bride's parents. The bridal pair stood in a bay-window under a lattice of smilax dotted with pink and white carnations. Large bowls of roses decorated the rooms, and the refreshment tables were also adorned with flowers. Supper was served in the dining and billiard rooms, under the direction of Maresi. The presents were unusually handsome, and one room was entirely filled with them.

The newly married couple departed on what is called the 9:28 train. It was nearly an hour late, and, as a special car had been engaged, the fact was telegraphed to the house, so that they did not leave till nearly ten.

Lukens—Clark.

The wedding of Miss Edith Clark, eldest daughter of ex-Councilman and Mrs. Edward B. Clark, to Lewis Nevius Lukens, took place yesterday, at high noon, at the residence of the bride's parents, on East Front street. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, of the Grace Protestant Episcopal church. The bridesmaids were Miss Helen R. Clark and Miss Bertha M. Clark, sisters of the bride; Miss Mary L. Betts, of Plainfield; Miss Mary L. Clark and Miss Margaret McF. Lukens, of Conshohocken, Pa., and Mis Marion Sharpless Bettle, of Philadelphia. The "best man" was William A. Cooper, of Conshohocken, Pa. The ushers were Noah F. Morrison, Frank Lukens, V. Herbert Lukens, and Arthur T. Pendleton, of Elizabeth, and Alan N. Lukens and William W. Lukens, of Conshohocken. A wedding breakfast was served by a Newark caterer. The house was handsomely decorated with flowers and potted plants. The bride and groom have gone South on their wedding trip.

Slush and Ice Follow the Snow.

Yesterday was almost an ideally uncomfortable day, one of those which open with crisp air and snowstorm and end in a combination of fallen snow, soaking rain, and slush-covered streets.

It began snowing in Plainfield at about two o'clock in the morning, when the election edition of THE PRESS was being prepared for the public. By eight o'clock there was perhaps an inch of snow on the sidewalks. In a leisurely way it continued snowing all the morning, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon a mantle of snow four inches deep covered the lawns and roof-tops of the Crescent city.

At two o'clock, almost as quickly as a man could turn his hand over, snow ceased to fall and rain came in its stead. An hour afterward, the man or woman who made a pedestrian tour anywhere in the paved section of the city had a most unpleasant experience. The condition of the streets was very slushy. This morning ice covered everything, and people and horses had to exercise great caution in using their feet. The man who complains of mild Winters is not heard from to-day.

Odd Ladies and Their Successful Enterprise.

The fair of Mizpah Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Ladies, now being conducted at Amphion Hall, is receiving the generous patronage which it deserves, and the enterprise promises to be highly successful. Those to whom the credit of the excellency of the affair is due are as follows:

Managing Committee—Mrs. E. C. Morse, Mrs. Chas. Westphal, Mrs. W. Brokaw.

Candy tables—Mrs. Ella Demarest and Miss Maggie Schuck.

Fancy table—Mrs. Kauman, Miss Ida Schuck, Miss Abbie Schuck and Mrs. A. Cock.

Refreshment table—Miss Ella Bolsterly and Miss L. Kingston.

Music—Miss Buckley.

A Good Time for 60 Minutes.

A. C. La Boyteaux, who has had a large experience in conducting evangelistic meetings, both in this city and elsewhere, will conduct the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms next Sunday afternoon at 4:15. Those who have heard him on former occasions need not be reminded that he is a magnetic and earnest speaker. Let every member strive to take some young man with him to this service. The singing will be an especially attractive feature. Every man is invited.

STUNG BY ADA'S HORSEWHIP.

A Westfield Physician Chastised by His Sister-in-law.

The New York papers have been reveling in sensational accounts of how Dr. William Gale, the leading physician of Westfield, suffered a horsewhipping at the hands of his pretty sister-in-law, Mrs. Ada Aguirre, of New York, Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Aguirre is a dashing blonde, the divorced wife of Dr. Carlos Aguirre, a well-known Cuban dentist of of New York. She is a daughter of the late Rev. Dr. J. T. Wright, a prominent Methodist clergyman of Elizabeth, and is a sister of Dr. Gale's wife, between whom and herself the Rev. Dr. Wright divided his property. She is celebrated for her beauty and accomplishment throughout New Jersey and New York city, where she achieved fame under the stage name of Miss Ada Wright as an elocutionist of considerable ability. She is well and favorably known in society, has travelled extensively and is a woman of rare attainments as a conversationalist and as an entertainer. She is a graduate of a fashionable seminary and is highly educated. Recently, however, her relatives allege, she has become addicted to the morphine habit, and 'tis claimed that 'twas while she was under the influence of the drug that she visited his pharmacy Tuesday. On that occasion she was accompanied by Mrs. Charles Arnold, at whose home in New York she had been under treatment for the morphine habit. When the women appeared before the doctor Mrs. Aguirre's first move was a demand for some diamonds and jewelry which she said belonged to her. Dr. Gale responded that he had none of her valuables. After an altercation Mrs. Aguirre drew from under the folds of her dress a stout whip, with which she struck him repeatedly, lashing his body and arms, which he held up to shield his face. Several lamps and glasses were smashed, and he himself had suffered considerably, before he could get out into the street in search of an officer.

He found Justice-of-the-Peace Hart, who issued a warrant for Mrs. Aguirre's arrest, but when the constable went to the railway station to serve it the woman had gone.

Dr. Gale, who is a tall, handsome man, about fifty years of age, said to a reporter this morning:

"I know nothing about the jewelry which Mrs. Aguirre demanded. There is no money difference between us, nor any trouble about the division of her father's property under his will. I cannot account for Mrs. Aguirre's conduct in any other way than she was under the influence of morphine. I am not hurt much. It was not a big whip she used."

Mrs. Arnold was a calm, non-interfering woman during the affair, and walked off with Mrs Aguirre smilingly.

Sad Death of a Young Mother.

Rebecca Elizabeth, wife of Adam Dealaman, who died at the home of her parents, in Dunellen, last Thursday morning, from typhoid malaria, was in her twenty-eighth year and leaves two young children, a son and a daughter. She was the daughter of Jeremiah D. Dunham, so well known in this vicinity and on the line of the Central Railroad, where he has been employed as engineer for nearly thirty-five years.

Mrs. Dealaman had been a resident of Newark, where her husband conducted a large grocery business, with a flourishing branch at Dunellen. She went to the home of her parents about two months ago in impaired health, with the hope that a few months' care would restore her. Her many good qualities of mind and heart made her the centre of a large circle of admiring friends. Her sunny face and her bright, cheerful manner endeared her to all who knew her.

Her funeral services were held in the Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon, and were conducted by the pastor, the Rev. W. C. Stinson. The building was crowded to its utmost capacity and many were unable to get in. The floral offerings were elaborate and equally significant in sentiment and design. The words "Mother," "Our Daughter," "Rest," and a beautiful design of the "Gates Ajar" in choice flowers bearing under it the word "Lizzie," appeared. The remains were deposited in the family plot at Westfield.

The Bicycle Club in Plainfield's Government.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club stands to-day second to none in the State, as regards number and character of members; its roll bears an even hundred names of bona fide, paying men, of all ages over eighteen; which is the minimum age limit according to the constitution.

Prominent among the active members may be named Mayor-elect Alexander Gilbert, Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, ex-City Judge Wm. M. Stillman, Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed, ex-Mayor of the Borough Dr. J. H. Cooley, Councilmen O. L. Jenkins and Townsend Rushmore, and Councilmen-elect Ernest R. Ackerman. The advantages offered for bodily exercise by the addition of the new gymnasium are availed of by the members in large numbers, and the situation of the club house within a half-minute's walk of the North avenue railway station makes it particularly convenient for those who ride to the train in the morning to store their wheels in during their absence in the city.

Another Score to be Baptized.

Twenty-two additional converts applied for baptism and church membership at the First Baptist church last evening. They will be baptized Sunday morning, Dec. 14. A special communion will be held at this church Jan. 4.

DYING AT THE HANDS OF A FRIEND.

A Young Student from Orange Mortally Wounded by a Fellow-Hunter.

Fred White, an eighteen-year-old medical student, of Orange, is dying from a gun-shot wound, at the home of Israel Vail, who lives about three miles from Plainfield, on the road to Rahway. Young White was out hunting, Thanksgiving Day, with a companion, George Magrath, from Newark. In tramping through the fields and woodland near Mr. Vail's farm Magrath fell over a brush heap, his gun was discharged, and the entire charge of heavy shot lodged in White's hip, causing a terrible wound. Magrath ran to Mr. Vail's house for assistance, and White was carried indoors and put to bed. He has suffered continual agony ever since, and the physicians say is now nearing his end. White did n't want his friends to hear of the accident, so pleaded that the news be withheld. Now that he is dying he is unconscious a great deal, and cannot tell where his family, whom the physicians wish to notify, may be found.

Employes Must Live Near Their Work.

Superintendent Peddle, of the Jersey Central Railroad, has issued an order which has spread unhappiness in the homes of Central Railroad employes from Plainfield to Phillipsburg. The superintendent orders those railroad men who live at intermediate points between the above-named cities to make immediate preparations to move to Bergen Point, Centreville or some other place nearer to Central's main depot at Jersey City. He has issued this order, he says, because so much delay, trouble and inconvenience has been caused by employes assigned to through runs between Centreville and Mauch Chunk in consequence of their living so far away from their work. Superintendent Peddle wants the men to live where they can promptly respond when called on for services.

AS VIEWED BY A FELLOW-MINISTER.

Mr. Mills's Success due to the Wisdom of His Methods—Not by Appeal to the Emotions, but by Assaults on the Reason.

The Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, pastor of the M. E. church, writes as follows in the New York Independent of Nov. 30. "Plainfield, N. J., one of the most beautiful of New York suburban cities, is at present favored with the most extensive revival in its history. The results have reached such large proportions that it seems to the writer the readers of THE INDEPENDENT would be interested in knowing something of the marvelous work of grace.

"Several months ago the pastors of all the Protestant churches in the city (the two Protestant Episcopal churches excepted, united in extending an invitation to the Rev. B. Fay Mills, evangelist, to come to this city and hold union revival services. Mr. Mills accepted the invitation, and, assisted by Mr. Greenwood, who has charge of the music, held the first service Monday evening, Nov. 3. The conditions were favorable for a successful meeting. The pastors and churches in this community are on exceptionally friendly terms. There are no unseemly rivalries, and the best of feeling prevails among the Christian people. Preparatory services had been held in all the churches, and the Christians were thoroughly aroused before the union services began. Another favorable condition was the fact that it had been several years since any extensive revival spirit had been present in the community, and hence there were large numbers of unconverted people to be reached.

"The pastors, in selecting an evangelist, made a wise choice. Mr. Mills is just the man to be influential in such a cultured community as this. He is a Christian gentleman, who impresses all with his unfeigned consecration to his work. He is scholarly, cultured, fluent in speech, guarded in his statements, chaste in all his utterances, yet presents his message with a fervor and abandon of enthusiasm which shows an utter forgetfulness of self. His success is due to the strength of his preaching and the wisdom of his methods. His sermons command the attention and respect of the most thoughtful, yet are easily understood by the children. He does not attempt to be a teacher, rarely offers any exposition of his text, but devotes his energies to persuading men to act, and act at once, on the knowledge they already possess. He does not argue about the Gospel, but presents the great saving truths for their immediate reception. There is little, if any, appeal made to the emotions; but most tremendous assaults are made upon the reason. While all classes are reached, it is to be noted that large numbers of thoughtful business and professional men are led to decide for Christ. Mr. Mills does not possess the slightest eccentricity. There is nothing peculiar in his appearance or address. There is nothing about the man to attract others to himself. The hearer forgets the speaker and thinks only of the message. Although in every service the deepest seriousness and solemnity prevail, there is never any excitement nor responsive ejaculations. In the calmest, yet in the most solemn manner, men are led not only to stand up in the great congregation and thus manifest their determination to become Christians, but they are urged to confess Christ with their lips.

"At the present it is not known how many have given their hearts to God, and possibly only eternity will reveal the vast good which has been done; but it is safe to say that many hundreds have started in the Christian life, and the whole church has been stirred to a deeper consecration. The whole community has been so aroused that the largest church edifice, accomodating fifteen hundred people, will not now hold the crowds. In order to accommodate the people, services are held frequently for men only, and at such times the church is crowded with that class. Last Tuesday business was practically suspended, and many commuters to New York remained at home. All day services were held, and the day was spent as a second Sabbath.

"One of the most hopeful signs in connection with this work is the deep interest manifested in the Sunday schools. In most of the Sunday schools all of the pupils having reached the age of accountability have given their lives to Christ. The whole community is shaken as by the power of God, and this favored city will long feel the power of this religious uplift. The pastors and churches feel their responsibility; for on them will now fall the task of shepherding and nursing the hundreds of lambs which have come to their fold.

"These lines have been written for the purpose not only of making known the great joy and thanksgiving of this people, but also for the purpose of commending Mr. Mills and his most devoted and efficient co-laborer, Mr. Greenwood, to other communities. It has been the writer's privilege to be associated with many of the leading evangelists of this country, and, without saying any word of disparagement concerning others, he wishes to express the opinion that Mr. Mills has no superior as an evangelist either in the strength of his preaching or in the effectiveness and wisdom of his methods. He is a young man of strong physique, husbanding wisely his resources, and giving promise of long and effective usefulness in the work to which he has devoted his life. His preaching is free from all sensationalism, and in his methods there is nothing of clap-trap. From what I have thus far seen I am confirmed in believing what others have told me of the permanency of his work. He is a man whom God has raised up for this especial work, and his wonderful success is sufficient evidence that no eccentricity of speech nor peculiarity of method is essential in awakening in men an interest in religious things. Plainfield will long thank God for the labors of Mr. Mills, and hundreds of the redeemed will point to him as the human instrumentality in bringing them to crown and palm-branch."

Woman's Work in Church Debt Cancellation.

The Ladies' Aid Society of All Saints' Episcopal church at Scotch Plains have accomplished much good, and have succeeded in reducing the bonded debt of the church to the point where it now stands. "This"—comments a member of the church—"is a noble work and worthy of every encouragement, as there is nothing which so retards the usefulness of a church as being compelled to drag along a heavy load of debt. Through every report, whether favorable or otherwise, Miss Kyte has kept steadily pushing forward to the goal set before her, and it is mainly owing to her praiseworthy efforts and influence that the indebtedness has been so largely reduced. Her big book, containing all the canceled bonds and the name of every contributor, is very interesting."

The officers of the Ladies' Aid Society are: President—Miss Kyte; Treasurer—Mrs. Geo. Kyte; Secretary—Mrs. Chas. Richardson.

Now's The Time.

Never put off till to-morrow
That which needs doing today;
If you do you may find to your sorrow,
Too late, that you've trifled away

The golden opportunity of a lifetime. If those who complain of weakness and debility, have hacking cough and pain in the side or chest, poor appetite, broken sleep and other symptoms of a general decay of vitality, would promptly procure Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and take it as directed, they might throw off the disease that threatens them, and soon regain a hold on the health they are surely losing. Consumption may be averted, if prompt measures be taken, by the use of this standard remedy. Let those who have reason to feel that their general vitality is running low, be wise, and do something for themselves at once, for delays are dangerous. "Golden Medical Discovery" is warranted to benefit or cure in all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it refunded.

A RAILROAD'S FEELINGS.

How a Traveler Gleaned Some Strictly Original Information.

"I should like to go out to Lansing on your road," said a man at the ticket office of the Third street depot the other day.

"Very well."

"What is the fare?"

"Two forty."

"That is too much. I must economize. I am always willing to be just and liberal, but there is a limit to my finances. I will give you two dollars."

"Can't do it."

"I will put the cash right down in your hand."

"No use."

"Then I can't go. I have to economize."

"I'll tell you how you can get out for $1.50," said the agent.

"How?"

"Walk."

"By George, old man, shake! I'll do it. I'm a thousand times obliged. I thought of it first, but I didn't want to hurt the railroad's feelings and so kept still. Put 'er thar, and if I can ever help you save a dollar I'll go a mile to do it."—Detroit Free Press.

Not Up in Nautical Terms.

Alonzo Gushington (to Miss Anastasia, Prim, his affianced)—See yon yacht, Anastasia, how it lingers near the shore, as if loth to leave it? I am as the yacht, with you the shore, Anastasia.

Miss Anastasia (stiffly)—Alonzo, you are not a nautical man, are you?

Young Gushington—No, Anastasia.

Miss Anastasia—Then I pardon you.

Young Gushington—Pardon me, Anastasia. Why pardon?

Miss Anastasia—Because you evidently are not aware that yon yacht is hugging the shore.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

A Pleasing Change.

Jack Wylie—Have you been playing any poker lately?

Mr. B. T. Flush—No: I've quit. My luck was too bad. But I've got a cinch on that new game, "Tiddledy Winks." Ever hear of it?

Jack Wylie—Oh, yes; they call it "Idiot's Delight." But why do you do better at that?

Mr. B. T. Flush—Because the man who puts in the most chips wins.—Judge.

Sweet Charity—A La Mode.

"Mr. Potts, we have come on behalf of the Charitable Cooking School. We wish to get all the things at cost or below. If you refuse this, Mr. Potts, we are in a position to make you regret it—But, dear Mr. Potts, we feel sure you will oblige us. It is such a beautiful charity."

Mr. Potts (aside, sadly)—They get the halo, and I pay the piper.—Life.

He Wasn't a Singer.

Two men were talking about the growth of Buffalo, and one of them was kicking himself because he hadn't made more money out of it. "Why," says he, "If I'd bought land out there"—naming a growing district—"ten years ago, I could have been worth a hundred thousand now. And it could have been bought then for a song." "Why didn't you buy it, then?" "I couldn't sing."—Buffalo Express.

A Mean Advantage.

Jack—I'll never smoke in the presence of a lady again.

Tom—Why not, if she doesn't object?

Jack—I was once smoking while with a lady and began blowing rings. She slipped her finger through one and considered herself engaged.—Munsey's Weekly.

His Occupation.

"Have you no occupation, my poor man?" asked the good woman as she put a plate of beans before the turnpike tourist.

"Yes, mum," he answered, with his mouth full. "I'm a fancy stone-cutter."

"A lapidary?"

"Yes'm; a dilapidary."—Chicago Tribune.

The Youthful G. A. R. Idea.

New Minister—And, Johnnie, what are you going to be when you grow up?

Johnnie—Oh, I'm goin' to be a soldier for awhile.

N. M.—Indeed?

Johnnie—Yes, and then after that every body in the family'll get twelve dollars every month for nothing, just like we do now.—Life.

Little Tin Saints.

Mary—It has gone so far that 2D respectable people read the newspapers now.

Anne—That's a fact. Did you ever read any thing like that divorce case in the Evening News?

Mary—No; I never did.—Judge.

"What is the most striking feature of your celebrated variety show?"

"The boxing match, of course."—Munsey's Weekly.

Fangle—Certainly. Why?

Freddy Fangle—Because the Bible says, They rent their garments.—Judge.

Terrible Neglect.

A little stream of water was seen one day trickling through one of the great Holland dikes which in that country keep the sea, with its level many feet above the ground, from inundating the cities. The small leak remained unheeded, as something too small for notice. The stream gradually enlarged, and finally became a torrent, the dike was undermined, until in a fatal moment the vast embankment gave way and the great flood of waters overwhelmed the city. Careless neglect thus sacrificed thousands of lives.

By a similar heedless neglect myriads of lives are sacrificed every year. Nervous Prostration, Insanity, Paralysis, Heart Failure, Consumption, Fatal Kidney Disease and Premature Death in all cases follow neglect of the first symptoms. The sufferer becomes weak, tired, languid, run down, and work becomes an effort. There is a nervous, restless, depressed feeling, with more or less sleeplessness nights, and a tired waking mornings, with a bad taste in the mouth, dull head and general lack of vim and vigor. The appetite becomes capricious, there may be headaches or pain in side or back, possibly attended by palpitation, numbness, trembling, with strange sensations and weariness of the limbs. Altogether there is a feeling of both nervous and physical exhaustion, with loss of energy, life and ambition.

These symptoms and feelings show that the health is undermined, and that just so surely as they are neglected, the strength and vitality of nerve and body will give way and fatal disease result.

There is but one plain course for the sufferer to pursue, and that is to use immediately that greatest of all health restorers, Dr. Greene's Nervura. This wonderful discovery, which is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, is the most marvelous remedy in the world to restore vigor to the tired brain, strength to the weak and shattered nerves, vitality and health to the run down and exhausted body. For sale by druggists at $1.00 per bottle.

COMPLETELY CURED IN A FEW WEEKS.

I suffered much pain, could not eat or sleep well, and felt miserable. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura, and took it but a few weeks before I was completely cured. I advise all who are complaining to use Dr. Greene's Nervura.

GEORGE W. LUMB,
17 to 27 North Water st., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounebury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

Lady Florence Dixie and Her Crusade for Emancipation.

Mrs. Mona Caird Pours a Good Cup of Tea —At Putney with John Strange Winter—Edna Lyall's Study and Mrs. Hawels' Drawing-Room.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

LONDON, Oct. 17. — Lady Florence Dixie is one of the most talked-of women in the United Kingdom. She has a head like a handsome and possibly erratic boy, with short, wavy hair full of threads of gold. Her features are bold, eyes fine, nose a little heavy, mouth attractive and decided. Her complexion is brilliant as of a woman who lives much out of doors.

The first time I saw her she was pointed out to me on a country road, riding a chestnut mare. As all the world knows, Lady Dixie uses a cross-saddle. Her habit was black, the short, divided skirt partially covering high riding boots of a natty description. Indoors she has equally the courage of her dress reform convictions. A very usual costume with her is a white flannel blouse or shirt with tartan kilts just covering the knees and long tartan stockings. To this she added when a friend introduced me to her library, a loose shooting jacket and shoes with silver buckles.

This library is a long, low room with ivy peeping in at the windows. An open fire burns on the hearth, and souvenirs of travel are scattered about. The prominent feature is a large, solid-looking writing-table, with proof-sheets strewn on one side, piles of letters and children's school books on the other, and in front a vase of purple fox-gloves and photographs of Mrs. Mona Caird and John Stuart Mills.

Lady Dixie talks vivaciously, pointing her remarks by tapping the table energetically with a huge paper-cutter having a chamois-hoof handle. She has a tremendous fund of enthusiasm that has gone out in adventurous travel, in educating her two little boys up to cold plunges and fearless horseback riding, and is now expending itself in scouting the notion that her novel, "Gloriana," which excited so much comment this summer by its dramatic intensity and utter lack of balance, was meant as an extravagant satire.

"If women," she says, "who love other women would only drop their fads and join hands heartily we would soon show the world that 'The Revolution of 1900' was written seriously. With a universal organization working from a central headquarters, with a branch in every country, yes, in every village, it would not take until 1900 to bring about for my sex complete emancipation."

"What do you mean by emancipation?"

"A revision of the marriage service to begin with, so that man and woman should pledge the same vows, and woman should not sell her natural freedom. Then we would give the vote to every woman, married or unmarried, and put women into Parliament and into all positions now filled solely by men. We might even have a woman Prime Minister."

Mrs. Mona Caird, whose views of marriage are known to fame, is a woman of quite another type, a lover of jewels and laces and dainty draperies, open to all æsthetic influences. Her drawing-room in London reflects her quaint and original taste in its arrangements, its inviting ingle nooks and the odd windows over the mantel. The "den" in which she writes cries out against its name. It is a marvel of white enamel and delicate tintings, even the book-cases and the pretty writing-desk showing the fleckless finish. Here she has a special drawer for the manuscripts of her new books: "One That Wins," "Whom Nature Leadeth" and "The Wing of Azrael."

MRS. MONA CAIRD.

Mr. Caird proclaims himself ready to maintain against all the world that his wife makes the best cup of tea in London. She is a pretty figure while serving it, clothed in a long, falling house-robe in tints of pink and gold. Her soft, heavy brown hair waving low on her forehead, the dainty cups and saucers, fragile as eggshells, seeming fitter burdens than sociological treatises for her fingers. Mr. Caird is a son of Sir James Caird, and, judging from his quizzical expression when the subject arises, is more interested in his wife's tea than in her theories. He listens respectfully, however, while she tells me that her views of the marriage relation have been misunderstood quite generally.

"Instead of holding," she said, "that men and women should be allowed to marry and separate as easily as they would meet for a visit in a country house, I believe most steadfastly in life-long marriages; but the bond should be a free contract, resting on love and conscience, and if husband and wife found that, after all, their union was a mistake and harmonious life together impossible, they should not be forced to live on for the rest of their days a terrible existence, outraging both body and soul. Strange as it may seem, I believe that to make marriage dissoluble is the way to greater permanence in the relation. The fact that a thing can not be undone is enough to make many wish to try."

It is not every visitor to Putney who has the entree of the nursery of Mr. Winter, so-called, until the favorable receptions of "Hoopla" and "In Quarters" induced the author to let the public into the secret of her sex. She is the mother of three chubby babies, the eldest of whom is five years old. These mischievous, sunny-tempered youngsters fill their end of the house with laughter. With a toddler on each knee and another hanging over a chair behind, she answered a question as to the happiest hour she had ever seen.

It is not by haunting the purlieus of Piccadilly or pacing the boundaries of Belgravia that "Edna Lyall's" acquaintance is to be made. The author of "Donovan" and "We Two" does not care for society, as might be judged from the fact that she put the profits arising from the first-named book into a peal of bells for St. Saviour's Church, Eastbourne, instead of buying new gowns. The curate of this church is her sister's husband, Mr. Jameson, and it is with this sister that Edna Lyall, or to give her her proper name, Miss Ada Ellen Bayly, has lived for some years.

The old-fashioned red brick house buried among trees is almost monastic-looking. Miss Bayly herself dresses with a plainness approaching severity. Her short brown hair is brushed back from her forehead without adventitious crimp or curl, exposing a high, white forehead. Her eyes are her only beautiful feature; they are large and expressive, but rather sad-looking. Her voice is soft and low, and as she sits by the fire, the glowing embers lighting up her face, you are not surprised to learn that her favorite poet is Whittier.

Mrs. Haweis, whose "Chaucer for Children" is included by Sir John Lubbock in his final list of the "best hundred books," is a unique figure in literary London. Mr. and Mrs. Haweis, who are amiably happy in the consciousness that whatever they do is right, live in one of the oldest dwelling-houses in Cheyne Walk, interesting from the legends connecting it with some of Queen Elizabeth's flirtations, but more interesting because, for a brief period, it was Dante Rossetti's home, and retains in some features, notably in the coloring of the rooms, the impress of his personality. The long drawing-room has seven tall windows looking on the Thames and hung with curtains that once belonged to Bonaparte. There is an old Spanish leather screen that was Byron's. Costume parties are an occasional feature, and, clad in robes of all the centuries, literary and artistic Bohemia may be seen discussing the "æsthetics of dress," the "art of beauty" and other such mysteries. Mrs. Haweis illustrates her husband's books and designs the covers. She has really been a benefactor to the British matron by introducing art, even of the Pre-Raffaelite order, into home-decoration.

Mention of the Rossetti's reminds one that many American visitors find their way to the rather dreary old house in Torrington Square, near the British Museum, where Miss Christina Rosetti lives in retirement, nursing two aunts who are infirm and advanced in years. Miss Rossetti has one of the loveliest faces ever seen on a woman, a face full of mysticism and spiritual insight, with heavy-lidded eyes. Her life is as ascetic as her verses. She is said to be impoverished by her charities.

ELIZA PUTNAM HEATON.

IN A JOKE FOUNDRY.

Howard Fielding Surrounds Himself with a Cheerful Atmosphere.

How He Drew Inspiration from a Comic Artist, a Punster and the Knock-Kneed, Dyspeptic Editor of a Bow-Legged and Bilious Funny Column.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

"A man in your business," said my friend, the artist, "should be surrounded by a more cheerful atmosphere when he works."

"I don't wonder that you speak of it," said I. "Nobody can come into this office without being struck by the atmosphere, and it's as solid as a club when all my tenants are at home. The Kentucky Colonel has an heirloom pipe in which he smokes disintegrated West Virginia 'stogies;' the real-estate man raises his own tobacco on Staten Island, and the agent burns Egyptian cigarettes which smell like an inferior grade of mummy and are assessed as rags at the custom-house. All these together make an atmosphere which, as you say, is not cheerful. It is not so favorable to work as it is to tuberculosis."

Then he told me that it wasn't the air he meant, but the psychic status, the fine influence of surroundings, the inspiration of companionship. I looked about me sadly and admitted that I lacked some of those things.

"You ought to have some jolly fellows in here," said he. "Get some men in the humorous line, and every one of you will inspire the others. Just fill the place up with mirth and laughter."

"You're right," said I, slapping him on the back. "I'll turn this shop into a regular joke-foundry if I can find the men. Ha! ha! Let us be merry! I'll have this crowd 'fired' by next Monday, and you send round half a dozen of the funniest men you know. Tell 'em it isn't rent that I want; it's jovial company."

* * * * * * *

The foregoing is supposed to be Act I. An interval of six days elapses between Acts I and II. The jolly fellows have moved in. I had never met any of them before. They all come late in the morning and look as if they hadn't slept well.

At half-past nine o'clock I am there alone. Enter Willard, editor of a funny column. He is tall and thin, and his face is shaped like a coffin—broad.

high cheek-bones; narrow forehead, and lantern-jaw with a beveled edge. I always imagine that his nose is a silver plate with a piece of mortuary poetry on it.

"Good morning, Mr. Fielding," said he, "do you suffer much with dyspepsia?"

"No," said I. He looked so disappointed that I felt as if it was unkind of me to have a good digestion. Then he brightened up.

"Perhaps you may have it soon," said he. "It attacks long, thin, bilious looking people very suddenly, sometimes."

"I will do my best," said I, humbly. "Why do you ask?"

"I am a great sufferer myself," he replied, with a sigh. "A friend has just recommended a remedy to me. He says it is a sure cure in some cases, while others die in horrible agony. I am looking for a man whose symptoms are similar to mine. Do you ever feel a sort of—"

"Never," I replied firmly; "I can eat a fifty cent table d'hote with North Caro'lina claret, and not even feel remorse."

"None of your family afflicted?"

"No; my wife eats her own cooking three times a day while I lunch down town."

He sank into his chair and began to open a batch of contributed jokes. By and by I heard him swear.

"These fellows have no souls," he muttered; "here are ten jokes and every one of them deals with dyspepsia, as if that were a subject for mirth."

He put his hand upon his stomach, and resumed work, with a groan. I was just touching up that subject myself, and I began to feel mean. Just then Durgin entered. He is another jolly fellow. He draws humorous illustrations. An editor sends him jokes, and he makes pictures to go with them. He looks a good deal like Willard, and they hate each other because of the resemblance.

"Fielding," said he, ignoring Willard altogether, "what do you think of a funny picture representing an entire family being run over by a street-car? Don't you think you could write a few pleasant lines to go underneath it?"

Willard groaned.

"You'd better apply to George Washington Childs," said I; "he's in that line of business."

"There's a good humorous suggestion in it," he persisted. "I've dreamed of it all night. Most frightful nightmare I ever had in my life."

"Some of these street-car companies might like it for an advertising cut," I said, not wishing to discourage him. "They're the only people I know of who seem to regard that sort of thing as a joke. Why don't you try it on Dan Lamont?"

Willard groaned again.

"If this is the Chamber of Horrors," said he, "I'm sorry I moved in."

"If it is," said Durgin, "I don't see why you should regret an action so eminently appropriate."

They glared at each other for a minute, and then Willard's dyspepsia got the better of him and he leaned over the edge of his desk. Seeing that hostilities were temporarily suspended, I resumed work. Durgin got out his drawing materials. Willard opened another letter. It was a bad morning for me. Words came hard. I sighed. Willard groaned. Durgin swore. The atmosphere was not so cheerful as I had been led to expect.

The door opened slowly and a head appeared around the corner. Then a body cautiously followed the head into the office. It was Bender, a general contributor and collector of valuable books. His method of collection is such as to dissuade me from bringing any portion of my library down to the office. It is said that he acquired his manner of entering a room by long experience in dodging creditors.

He never meets anybody by chance nowadays. Bender has a fearful habit of making puns. I have known him to write poems that were as full of them as Harlem is of flees. But, gentle reader, don't be alarmed. I am not going to work any of them into this story. I will indicate the places where they occur, and leave the rest to the imagination.

"Come in, Bender," said Willard, cheerfully, "there's nobody here to be afraid of. It's so long since I lent you those two dollars that I've forgotten all about them."

"You are quite too † * * ‡, as usual, Willard," said Bender. "Good morning, Mr. Durgin, * ‡ ‡ ‡ * *!"

"Shut up, Bender," said Durgin, "or I'll make a picture of you being run over by a horse-car. I'd have done it any way, only I didn't care to raise false hopes in those who know you."

"We shan't see your name in the papers so often, now, Fielding," said Bender, turning to me.

"Why not?" I asked, wearily, perceiving that my turn had come.

"Because the b—e b—l season is over," he replied, with a chuckle. I threw four bound volumes of Harper's Weekly at him; Durgin contributed some water-colors; and Willard wound up the bombardment with a waste basket full of rejected manuscript.

"I regard this as flattery," said Bender, crawling out from under the magazines. "By the way, Fielding, I've got a good story that you can have. I can't use it myself, and I'll let you have it for a dollar and throw in an autograph of Pocahontas."

"What's it about?" I asked, and then went on working, and tried not to hear. But I couldn't help catching something about the census, whereat I ventured to remonstrate on the ground that anybody who sprung a census joke at this late day was almost certain to have justice done him. He wouldn't stop, however, but persisted in telling me of a man who mixed up the enumerator, the dumb waiter, thermometer in a way susceptible of infinite puns if he only had time to work them out.

"Bender," said Durgin, "I want you and Willard to pose for me a minute. I'm going to draw a picture of the most disagreeable man in the world throwing the biggest infernal nuisance in the world out of a seventh-story window. How do you like the idea?"

"I like it first-rate," said Willard, and he threw Bender out into the hall. "If you didn't catch my attitudes that time, Durgin, I'll go through it again with you."

"I don't allow any knock-kneed dyspeptic editor of a bow-legged and bilious funny column to talk that way to me," exclaimed the artist, with fire in his eye.

GOT RID OF THEM ALL AT LAST.

They tackled and wrestled, and whether Durgin threw Willard out or Willard threw Durgin, I really couldn't say, but at any rate they both followed Bender and I heard them bumping down the stairs.

Then I locked the door on the whole mob, and for the first time in some moons enjoyed a cheerful atmosphere.

A Run of Bad Luck.

Not Infallible.

"Remember, my son, that college is no playground. Improve your opportunities from the start."

SHE DIDN'T SEE IT.

But It Took Her a Long Time to Inform the Court of the Fact.

IN a case of assault and battery tried before one of the county justices the other day a woman was called to the stand. Being asked to describe the row, she began:

"About noon I says to my daughter Nelly, who had just got back from town, and had—"

"Never mind what you said to your daughter Nelly," interrupted the lawyer.

"But I said something to her."

"No matter."

"And she's my daughter."

"We don't dispute that. Tell us what you saw of the fight."

"Well, I started over to a neighbor's to borrow some sugar. On the way I met my oldest boy, John, and I says to him, says—"

"Never mind about John."

"Isn't John in this?"

"No, ma'am. Tell what you saw of the fight."

"Well, I got to the house and Mrs. Blank was making soft soap. She had a sassafras stick in the kettle. I was calculating to make soap myself, and so I says to her, says—"

"We don't want to know what you said to her or what she replied. Skip all that and come down to the row."

"Isn't Mrs. Blank in this?"

"No, ma'am."

"Can't I tell how I got to the fight?"

"You walked there, probably. Now, then, what did you see?"

"Nothing."

"Why! Are you blind?"

"No, sir. I didn't see nothing, because when I heard Mr. Roberts say he'd knock Mr. Peters' head off I fainted down behind a stump and hivered my head with my apron and hollered for daddy to hurry up and separate 'em."—Detroit Free Press.

THE CLIFF MYSTERY

To-Day's Inquest on the Body of Lawyer Townsend.

SEVERAL WITNESSES EXAMINED

Prosecutor Campbell is Assisting in the Examination.

A Score of Detectives Working on the Case—Some of the Cobwebs of Exaggeration Swept Away—The People About Englewood Believe that the Lawyer Was Assassinated and Robbed.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Dec. 5.—Coroner's Hill began at 10 a. m. to-day the formal inquiry into the cause of the death of John Townsend, jr., who was found at the foot of the Palisades last Friday afternoon. There are at least ten witnesses to be examined, and the inquest will probably last several days. Prosecutor Campbell is present and is assisting in the examination.

Among the witnesses are the boy who saw the body falling from the cliff, and the boy who saw a stranger wandering about in the lonely forest within 600 feet of the cliff at just about the time when Mr. Townsend must have been in the neighborhood and still alive.

Of these two boys, the first, Louis Norman, the 12-year-old son of a fisherman, is not particularly bright, and does not tell the same story twice. The other, Jimmie Hagerty, is only 10 years old, but he has a connected story, which he tells with persistence and accuracy. No one has been able to furnish any further information of the man in the light brown coat whom this boy saw.

Those who believe in the theory that the man who got off the train at Englewood at 12:15 o'clock on Friday afternoon and was driven by Tim Coakley to the empty Floyd cottage near the turning into the Hudson Terrace road, was not John Townsend, jr., are anxious to hear the testimony of Tim Coakley, who is now by no means sure that the dead man was his passenger. By a singular oversight Coakley never viewed the body, but took the word of Ed Lacey, the hackman who made the bargain.

A good deal has been said about a nephew of Mr. Townsend who looked very much like him and bore the same name. It now appears that this nephew has no existence, and that the person supposed to be he is Frederick A. Howes.

There is great interest taken in the inquest, and it has been learned that a score of detectives are working on the case. A great many interesting and important details have been collected by the reporters and some of the cobwebs of fabrication and exaggeration are swept away. But neither the relatives of the dead man, nor the New Jersey authorities, nor the reporters, who are working night and day, have yet arranged the facts to fit a satisfactory theory.

About Englewood, where the belief that Mr. Townsend was murdered is now general, the suspicion has been expressed by many that Mr. Townsend was assassinated and robbed by some of the people who are known to frequent the cliffs in that vicinity.

DEATH BEFORE DISGRACE.

An Albany Salesman a Defaulter in the Sum of $80,000.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 5.—Joseph B. Abbott, late salesman, bookkeeper and confidential man for H. W. Sage & Co., lumber dealers, is a defaulter and a corpse. His body lies cold in death at Merange's undertaking rooms in Maiden Lane.

Unable to face the world at a time when arrest and disgrace stared him in the face, he took this means to escape the punishment sure to follow as the wages of sin and destroyed his own life with the aid of a deadly poison.

The news of Abbott's death, and close upon it the rumor that he was a defaulter, reached the public when his dead body was found in the apartment house over Johnson's Maiden Lane tailor shop.

About 2 o'clock, Mrs. Johnson, wife of the owner of the premises, who was cleaning the rooms, called to one of the porters in the Windsor Hotel to aid her in opening the door of one of the rooms which was secured on the inside. The porter clambered in through a window and found the room occupied. Stretched upon the bed, clothed in street costume, lay Joseph B. Abbott, his head resting on his right hand. He appeared to the porter, who stood still in the center of the room for a moment, to be sleeping.

Abbott's defalcation, it is said, will reach $80,000, and the knowledge that his crookedness had been discovered by the firm and that he was about to be exposed to the world no doubt goaded him on to self-destruction.

Some time ago H. W. Sage & Co. sold to C. T. Riley & Co., of Philadelphia, a cargo of lumber worth $40,000. The money was paid by Riley & Co. to Abbott, who said nothing to the firm but pocketed the cash, and represented that the sale was on "time." Abbott made a confession to his employers. He admitted that he had been robbing them systematically for a long time. Abbott was about to be arrested when news of his suicide reached police headquarters.

Abbott was about 45 years of age, and leaves a widow and four children.

The Famous Stallion Electioneer Dead.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 5.—The famous trotter Electioneer died at the Palo Alto stock farm yesterday. Rheumatism from which he suffered a long time was the direct cause of his death. Electioneer was a stallion. He was purchased eleven years ago by Senator Stanford from the Stony Ford stock farm for about $11,000. He was 25 years of age, and had eleven sons and daughters all of whom had records of 2 30.

DIXON AND McCARTHY.

The Featherweights Sign for a Twenty-Five Round Fight.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Cal McCarthy, the featherweight champion of America, and George Dixon, the colored boxer of Boston, who won the title of champion of England by defeating Nunc Wallace in London, signed articles to fight 25 rounds with four ounce gloves, before the Puritan Athletic Club, of Long Island City, on February 5.

The club guarantees a purse of $4,000, of which the loser will receive only $200, and Tom O'Rourke, for Dixon, and Joe Early for McCarthy, made a bet of $2,000 on the outside.

The contest will practically settle the question of superiority in glove fighting, or the referee will be empowered to order additional rounds in case neither man has a decided advantage at the end of the 25th.

Billy Dacey was also at Secretary Hackett's office at the same time to sign articles with Austin Gibons, the Paterson lightweight, for a 25 round match before the club in about a month. Dacey affixed his signature to the document and it was forwarded to Gibbons.

NEW POLITICAL PARTY.

The Farmers' Alliance Working on a Big Scheme.

OCALA, Fla., Dec. 5.—It is now positively known that the Farmers' Alliance favors the formation of a new political party.

A call is to be issued for a national convention on February 12 next, to be held in Cincinnati, to form the new party and promulgate its platform. It will doubtless work on the same line as the People's party in Kansas; that is, renounce all affiliation with the other political parties and place a national ticket of its own in the field.

Eva Hamilton at Home.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 5.—Eva Hamilton was tendered quite a reception at her old country home in Wyalusing. She was accompanied by her father. The country folks who used to know her when a girl crowded around her. Eva says she will remain with her father now as long as he lives. He is old and needs her assistance. Eva told a lady friend that the Hamilton family would eventually provide for her, and that she had plenty of money to keep herself and father nicely. Eva's father is a farm hand and poor.

A Bridge Bandit Convicted.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Dec. 5.—John Gleason, a member of the noted "Bridge Bandits" of Newburg, was convicted of assault in the first degree on Policeman Koch. He was remanded for sentence. The "Bridge Bandits," of which Gleason was a member, is composed of young desperadoes, who, for several years, were the terror of Newburg and committed every sort of crime short of actual murder.

Testing the Lymph in New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 5.—Two more patients received injections of the Koch lymph here. One of these was furnished by Dr. Francis Bacon, of Flushing, L. I., and the other by Dr. H. L. Swain, of this city. The patients are both suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, although not in a very advanced state. Both are expected to receive great benefits from the treatment.

Succi Still Chews Ice.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Signor Succi started the 30th day of his fast very weak and in danger of breaking down. Yesterday he drank 20 ounces of mineral water and 14 ounces of Croton, and chewed three ounces of cracked ice. Eating cracked ice is a new feature of his performance. He has now lost 34 pounds. He smoked a little, but took none of his hunger-destroying elixir.

A Young Woman's Mysterious Death.

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 5.—Miss Emma Pfitzenmyer, aged 22 years, was found dead in her room with her throat cut and a large cheese knife by her side. She is supposed to have committed suicide, though there is no apparent reason for such an act, and some believe she was murdered. The coroner's jury are investigating.

Two Years for a Broken Vow.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Dec. 5.—The suit of a respectable young lady of the community against John Lewis, a prominent mill owner, for breach of promise and betrayal, which began on Monday, was ended late last night. The jury found the defendant guilty and sentenced him to two years in the penitentiary.

About $3,000,000 of Liabilities Covered

BOSTON, Dec. 5.—Mr. Walter Potter states that about $3,000,000 of the Potter-Lovell liabilities have run off by the settlement of notes pledged as collateral on loans. Assignee Haskell's health is much better, and he will soon be able to attend to business.

Appointment of Gov. Hill.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 5.—Governor Hill appointed Frederick W. Devoe, of New York, to be trustee of the Middletown State Homœopathic Hospital in the place of Fletcher Harper, deceased.

A New Scheme to Defeat the Federal Elections Bill.

SENATOR VEST'S SUBSTITUTE

He Will Offer a Free Coinage Bill When the Final Vote is Ordered.

Meeting of the Intercontinental Railway Commission—Mr. Cassatt Honored With the Presidency—A Movement Against Pension Agents—Surgeon-General Baxter Dead—New Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The silver coinage question and the Federal Elections bill have become entangled in a very peculiar manner within the last three days, with the result that the Elections bill may be sacrificed to free coinage.

It has been whispered about on the floor of the Senate for the last two days that Senator Vest, acting on behalf of the Democrats in the Senate, intended to offer a free coinage bill as a substitute for the Federal Elections bill when the time should come for taking a final vote. His idea is that the advocates of free silver on the Republican side of the Chamber will vote for free coinage even at the risk of sacrificing the Elections bill if brought to the point of choosing between the two measures.

Inquiries made among the free silver men on the Republican side of the Senate show that some, at least, of these men will cast their vote for a free coinage bill if it is offered as a substitute for the Election bill.

A proposition for a compromise on the silver question, which is represented as emanating from the Executive Mansion, has been laid before the silver men in both Houses. This proposition is that Congress pass a bill at this time instructing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase the thirteen or fifteen million dollars worth of silver with which the market is said to be stocked at present.

This proposition meets with the approval of the conservative men in both Houses, but the advocates of free coinage feel so confident of their ability to put a free coinage bill through Congress at this session that they do not seem inclined to accept it.

NEWS OF CONGRESS.

Several Important Measures Pass the House and Senate.

RUN DOWN BY A TRAIN.

Three Employes of the Reading Road Meet a Horrible Death.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5.—Shortly before noon a gang of men employed by the Reading Railroad Company at their Port Richmond coal wharves went to the office at pier 7, below William street, for the purpose of being paid off. The office is close to the car tracks.

A crowd of the men were standing in line, when there suddenly shot around the corner a train of coal cars. The men shouted, and those furthest from the window started for the other side of the track, which they succeeded in reaching in safety. Others, however, were not sufficiently quick, and the train came down upon them, crushing the life out of three of them by forcing them against the wall of the office.

The names of the killed are: James Helferty, William McGowan and Michael Newlin.

The injured are Conrad Michael, 19 years old, arm broken and otherwise injured, and George Ransom, 22 years old, badly bruised.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

A Blast Furnace Falls and Several Men Buried in the Ruins.

JOLIET, Ill., Dec. 5.—A terrible accident, with loss of life, occurred at the blast furnace department of the Illinois Iron and Steel Company's works during the morning.

The blast furnace, which was blown out for relining and repairs made necessary by the recent explosion, which was also attended by loss of life, fell to the ground when about 20 men were at work on it. Eleven men were at work in the inside at the bottom and about six on top when the accident happened.

The rescuing party succeeded in extricating all the victims from beneath the mass of debris. The dead are: Nels Larson, John Penderson, Gus Loosa, Thompson Swanson, Slaus Fasmeck, Frank Miller and John Mulusstadis.

Those most seriously injured are: Oscar Lind, Joseph Mason, John Oleson, August Wenberg, A. Seisenair, Peter Erickson John Larson and Patrick Killullen.

A TRUCE DECLARED

Parnell's Plan Adopted by the Irish Nationalists.

TO CONFER WITH GLADSTONE.

The Home Rule Chieftain Securing the Delay Which He Desires.

He Will Retire Until Recalled on Certain Conditions—He Must Have Assurances from the Liberals that Their Home Rule Plan Will Leave the Land Question to an Irish Parliament.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Nationalists held another excited meeting and all sorts of rumors were afloat in the corridors of the House of Commons as to what was being done by the Irish members.

It was confidently given out last evening that the Clancy resolution had been rejected, involving a defeat for Mr. Parnell, and great was the rejoicing of the anti-Parnellites over the news. This jubilation was reflected in the editorials of the papers hostile to the Irish leader. Upon the adjournment of the meeting last night, however, it was learned that the proposal for a conference with Mr. Gladstone and the other Liberal leaders had been carried and that matters were taking on an aspect more favorable to Mr. Parnell.

The joy of Mr. Parnell's enemies was again turned to dismay, as it had been more than once before in this bitter contest, in which the masterly fighting qualities of the descendant of Old Ironsides have been so conspicuously developed. There is still much doubt, however, that Mr. Gladstone will give any assurance whatever as to what the Liberals will do in the event of Mr. Parnell's retirement for a more or less in definite period.

Be the outcome of the conference what it may, nevertheless, the appointment of the committee is in itself a victory for Mr. Parnell, securing the delay which he desires, if nothing more.

THE LIBERAL COMMITTEE.

Parnell at the Head of the Delegation to Wait on Mr. Gladstone.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The committee appointed to wait upon Mr. Gladstone and seek assurances that the Liberal home rule plan shall provide for the leaving of the Irish constabulary, judiciary and land question to an Irish Parliament, in event of which assurances Mr. Parnell will retire from the leadership of the Nationalist party until recalled, consists of Messrs. Parnell, Sexton, Healy, Justin McCarthy, J. Redmond, Deasy, Power and Leamy. Mr. Parnell will not take part personally in the negotiations with Mr. Gladstone. The committee will also confer with Sir William Harcourt and Mr. Morley. They will endeavor to conclude negotiations this afternoon.

Before the appointment of the committee Mr. Parnell asked for an informal show of hands on the Clancy amendment. The show disclosed only Messrs. Barry and Chance as standing out against the amendment.

The Irish Envoys Uneasy.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—The Irish Parliamentary delegates are still waiting for news from London. They have no plan of action, individually or collectively, until they know whether Mr. Parnell or his opponents have won.

Favor Parnell as Leader.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Dec. 5.—At a meeting of the Irish National League of this city last night, resolutions were adopted favoring the retention of Parnell as leader of the Irish Parliamentary party.

LIVELY OXFORD STUDENTS.

They Celebrate a Religious Ceremony While Carrying Cups of Whisky.

OXFORD, Dec. 5.—Queen's College was the scene of a serious outbreak among the undergraduates. A party of 15 or 16 young men set out in masquerading costume. The leader was dressed as a Bishop, with mitre and crozier. Among the others, there was one nun, two acolytes with censors and incense, and the rest in surplices, and all bearing a sanctimonious and highly mock decorous look and semblance. They marched in procession, and carried cups containing large doses of whisky and others filled with water, while a number of biscuits completed the dietary portion of the escapade, all of which was covered with a white cloth.

The masqueraders went the rounds of the college, battering open doors and forcing their way into the bedrooms of the freshmen. When they had dragged out a sufficient number of victims and gathered them together, shivering in their scant nightdress, the masqueraders proceeded to celebrate high mass, and forced their victims to go through the ceremony to its smallest detail, being urged all the time with cutting blows from switches in the hands of their tormentors.

Trouble in Rio Janeiro.

APPEAL TO THE PRESIDENT.

Sioux Indians Tell the "Great Father" They Are Starving.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The following memorial, received by the President, has been referred to the Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs:

"ROSEBUD AGENCY, Nov. 6, 1890.

"GREAT FATHER:—This day I will write you a letter with a good heart. When we gave up the Black Hills, you told us in that treaty that a man would get three pounds of beef a day; the meaning was three pounds for one man. Besides, you said we could get food just like the soldiers. You did not, however, give it to us at this rate.

"Great Father, we are starving, and beg you, therefore, to give to us just so (as you have promised). Thirty men of us get for eighteen days (only) one cow to eat; that is the reason I mention it. And if you do not well understand it, send me (Hollow Horn Bear) traveling money and I will come with five men.

"Great Father, if you do not (want to) do so, then please let us have a soldier for out father (agent) when our present father's term is out. Great Father, please do us this favor."

The above was signed by 102 Sioux Indians.

In reply to this memorial, Acting Commissioner Belt, in a letter to Secretary Noble, says that the law does not promise the Indians "food just like soldiers," but only a ration of beef, flour, bacon, coffee, sugar and beans, or such other articles in lieu thereof as the Commissioner of Indian Affairs may decide. In reply to the charges that the Indians signed an agreement that rations would not be reduced, and that the supply was reduced 2,000,000 pounds, and that those signing the agreement felt imposed upon, Mr. Belt says: "The Indians received rations to the full amount warranted by the appropriations made by Congress."

M. M. DUNHAM.

A Plainfield Pastor Relinquishes an Able Editorship.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of this city, is so overwhelmed with work that he has felt constrained to relinquish some of his pleasant duties, and has resigned the editorship of the Sabbath Reform Department of The Sabbath Recorder, published at Alfred Centre, N Y. He writes to the Recorder as follows:

"Much against what would otherwise be my choice, I am compelled, by pressure of other work, and by the warning given by overtaxed nerves, to relinquish the editorial charge of this department. I have aimed to give you glimpses of the movements in the world of Sabbath Reform, and to make such suggestions as would aid you to a better understanding, and a deeper interest in the cause of Sabbath truth. I trust that some more able pen will carry forward the department which I am compelled to relinquish."

Freight Car Roofs Not a Pleasant Promenade.

Thousands of freight brakemen shuddered Tuesday morning as they looked at the thin film of snow on the tops of the cars. Men who never worked on a train in the Winter did not appreciate the danger as much as did the old hands, who see in the first snow of Winter a menace and an admonition to be careful. Running along the roof of a moving freight train is risky business at any time, but when the footboard is covered with snow and ice it becomes more hazardous than probably any other pursuit in the world. Even the oldest hands cannot always guard against a slip, and many a freight brakeman has had narrow escapes, and just saved himself by clutching the footboard as his feet shot out over the side of the car.

The programme promises to be a most enjoyable one, and comprises some of the best and brightest of local talent, as well as several artists from New York.

A Victory for Methodist Women.

The question "Shall women be admitted into the General Conference as lay delegates?" has been submitted to the congregations of all the Methodist churches in the United States, and the members of each were allowed to vote upon it. The voting was all done during October and November, mainly in the latter month. The results from the churches throughout the country are not all in yet, but the Philadelphia Methodist says that enough of the returns have been received to show that the women have carried the day, and, so far as the popular will goes, they are entitled to seats in the General Conference as lay delegates. Plainfield voted in the women's favor.

The Water Company Decide to "Bide a Wee."

EVA'S SIDE OF THE STORY.

She Says the Westfield Physician Insulted Her, So She Whipped Him Till He Cried.

Mrs. Eva Aguirre, the "tall blonde with a wealth of golden hair," who assaulted Dr. Gale at Westfield, with a horsewhip, Tuesday, has been interviewed by a reporter concerning the sensational affair, and is quoted as follows:

"In the first place, I want to admit that at one time I was a victim of the morphine habit. I had been ill a long time, and it was during that time that I contracted the habit; but I am entirely cured now, and certainly was entirely myself when I chastised Dr. Gale.

"To understand this case thoroughly, I must tell you that I am divorced from my husband, Dr. Carlos Aguirre—that is to say, I secured the divorce. When I was taken ill the last time, my mother said she would pay my expenses while under treatment at Mrs. Arnold's; but before I went there I borrowed $15 from Dr. Gale, giving him as security a diamond ring valued at $150. Last Sunday Mr. Arnold went to Westfield to see my mother, who is visiting Dr. Gale. She refused to pay the bill, and Dr. Gale was very abusive. On Tuesday I asked Mrs. Arnold to go with me to Westfield. I wanted to see my mother and find out why she refused to stand by her agreement, and to get some jewelry which I had left in her possession and which she had put in Dr. Gale's safe for security. On the way out I bought a toy whip for my little boy, who is boarding on a farm near Westfield.

"When we got to the Doctor's store I asked to see my mother. In a few minutes Dr. Gale came down. He looked at me for a minute and then said: 'I don't know you.'

"'What!'—said I—'you don't know Mrs. Aguirre, Doctor!' Dr. Gale then turned and called my friend a name. I then said: 'Doctor, you must retract the insult you have heaped on us, and I want my diamonds.' He denied having any jewelry of mine and again insulted me. Then I lost my temper and struck him over the head with the toy whip, which I had carried in my hand. After the first blow the paper covering came off and I had a freer use of it. When I struck him the tears rolled down his cheeks and dropped to the floor. I suppose I struck him twenty times in all. He took refuge under the counter, but I soon drove him out from there and followed him to the back of the store, where I finished. He then ran upstairs, locking the door behind him.

"After the whipping I tried to see my mother, but the door was locked and the doctor was afraid to unlock it. But I mean to get my jewelry back. If Dr. Gale refuses to give it up I shall invoke the aid of the police. He now has in his possession two diamond pins, a pair of solitaire earrings, a diamond ring and a watch set in diamonds, valued in all at about $800.

"'Yesterday'—continued Mrs. Aguirre—I sent for Dr. Aguirre and told him the whole story. He was very angry, and said that he was going to Westfield to finish my work, and it won't be the first time that Dr. Gale has been confronted by him."

Dr. Tucker, Mrs. Aguirre's physician, told the reporter that Mrs. Aguirre was entirely cured of the morphine habit, and said that he knew she had not had one particle of the drug in the past three weeks.

But Plainfield Is Always Happy.

The new Elizabeth Council will stand twelve Democrats, ten Republicans and two Independent Democrats, and The Journal, Elizabeth's Republican organ, feels lonesome and forlorn. Therefore this plaint:

"Plainfield is the banner Republican city. It may swerve a little one way or the other, under bad advice or misapprehension, but when it knows what is doing it is overwhelmingly Republican every time. There was scarcely a Democrat elected in that happy city, Tuesday."

Two Deaths in a Railroad Wreck.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 5.—The Chicago & Alton passenger train, bound for Kansas City, was wrecked at Jacksonville during the morning. Fred Smith, a merchant of Pekin, Ill., and James Riffle, of Fountain Place, Ill., were instantly killed. Six persons were more or less injured.

Dr. Brayton to Pay $1,000.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 5: The jury in the suit of Susan Ehlein against Dr. Samuel N. Brayton, for malpractice in his treatment of her for inflammatory rheumatism, returned a verdict giving the plaintiff $1,000 damages. The case will probably be appealed.

Excellent Sleighing at Saranac Lake.

SARANAC LAKE, Dec. 5.—The first heavy snow storm of the winter fell here yesterday and last night. Twelve inches of snow covers the ground and there is excellent sleighing throughout the Adirondacks. The temperature is about 15.

PENSION AGENTS TO GO.

Radical Legislation to Reduce the Fees of Attorneys.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Arrangements are being made to have some legislation which will bring about radical reforms in the Pension Office. The proposed law will be a serious blow to the pension claim business, and will cut the fees of attorneys down from $10 to $1 in each case, and will limit the scope of attorneys and make it impossible for them to take advantage of the work of the special examiners who secure private testimony.

Heretofore the attorneys have been given the broadest latitude in examining all kinds of testimony taken by pension officials. At the Pension Office it is stated that the employment of attorneys to secure pensions is no longer necessary, and as they cannot help cases under the new laws and system, it seems that the days of the festive pension agent are about over.

GRATEFUL FOR PLAINFIELD'S CHARITY.

A Noble Work Splendidly Assisted by the Generous Contributions of the Crescent City.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I inclose two letters addressed to me, acknowledging the receipt of money and clothes contributed by Plainfield people for Rescue Work in New York City. Of the $490.30 which came into my hands, I gave $300 to the Rescue Band of the Florence Mission, and sent $190.30 to S. H. Hadley, Superintendent of the old McAuley Mission, 316 Water street.

There were pledges for about $19 more which were collected by the ladies who re-packed the clothing, and the money was sent directly to New York by them.

Trusting that those who contributed this money and clothing may receive rich blessing from God,

I remain cordially yours,
B. FAY MILLS.

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 2, 1890.

To the Rev. B. Fay Mills, Syracuse, N. Y.:

DEAR BROTHER:—I have your esteemfavor of the 25th, inclosing check for $190.30, which I understand was contributed by the Christian men and women of Plainfield, N. J., to help us in our rescue work, which is not provided for by our regular current expenses. I thank you with all my heart, and those dear people also, for this generous gift. Scarcely a day passes but what some poor souls come in either from prison or from the holes of vice and crime, which are so thick around us, naked and starving. We must help them, and we always do help them. Every penny shall be used as you suggest. We also received four barrels of splendid clothing. Oh, how glad we are! If some of those good people will come over some night we will show them some of our new converts dressed up in their clothing, and they won't be ashamed of them, either. This gives us new courage, and will increase our faith, to feel that you and others are thinking of us and praying for us.

Yours in His Name,
S. H. HADLEY.

McAuley Mission, 316 Water street, New York, Nov. 26, 1890.

DEAR BROTHER MILLS:—It is with much thankfulness that we forward you a receipt for the $300 you gave us for our work with the Florence Mission Rescue Band, and also for the five barrels and two cases of clothes. You and our kind friends of Plainfield will never know how they have strengthened us for our work, for which we have each dedicated our lives. We have worked and prayed and prayed and worked in the past, but have been so hampered for want of room!—Poor miserable men and women coming unto us, and we unable to assist them, often waiting in our labor because of want of means; and we never fully realizing how large God's store-houses were, and so we were willing to stop in that way; but now—praise His name!—we are enabled to take a big room to store our goods, and in which to dress our men and also to hold a Bible class in, for the men who are saved through our work. As you know, in the missions themselves it is one constant appeal to the unsaved, and so there is nothing on which a young convert is to grow strong. And here we will meet them and talk to them over their plans, for these men are as children at first, and we are their only friends and consolers.

This will be a wonderful help to us, and meets with the entire satisfaction of the heads of our mission, as we never take any important step in expenditure, etc., without consulting our Advisory Board, of whom A. S. Hatch and G. Mackay are members. And we have also to spend money to buy coffee and food for the men and women we find hungry and cold, in our work. And when they first come unto us we have to feed and bed them for a time. As you know, they are wretchedly weak, and require a little looking after until they get work. For this we buy meat and lodging tickets, so as not to tempt them with the money to buy drink, which they might do just in the beginning; and then as for clothing, we are always in need of clothes, particularly for men, as when they first come from those Mulberry street dives they must bathe and change from head to foot, for when they come a Christian man would hesitate to send them into his cellar to chop wood as they then are, and yet many of these men when saved are capable of holding good positions or have good trades. And now again, thank you and all our kind friends. Trusting that you will pray for us and that God may give us many precious souls, and with best wishes to Brother Greenwood and yourself, I remain,

Your sister in Christ,
CHARLOTTE RESSEQUIL.

P. S.—If you send letter to Plainfield papers please make plain the difference between the Florence Mission and the Florence Mission Rescue Band, as we have distinct funds. Mr. Crittenton supplies the needs of the house, while subscriptions to the Band should be sent to me.

In croup and whooping-cough it is important to have a remedy at once at hand that is reliable and safe. Hires' Cough Cure fills the bill better than any medicine that has ever been discovered. Its effects are positive, quick, and sure. It acts like magic. Remember it.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

ERRONEOUS BELIEFS.

The Effect of Alcoholic Liquors on the Bodily System.

One of the greatest hindrances to temperance reform is the widespread, but erroneous belief of the masses that rum in some form—wine, beer or ale, or whisky—is in some way of benefit to the bodily economy. They discountenance its immoderate use, but think that in smaller quantities it is beneficial. This error is supported by many physicians, especially those of conservative ideas, who do not keep up with the rapid strides their profession is making. The highest medical authorities of this country and of Europe are agreed that alcohol is never a food, and that as a medicine its place can largely be supplied by other safer and better remedies. The most of the conservatives quote a theory proposed many years ago that, up to a certain point—from an ounce up to an ounce and a half daily—alcohol is consumed in the human system, and that up to this point it is not only harmless, but acts the part of a food. You will find this theory quoted to-day, in defiance of the fact that its fallacy was clearly proved years ago.

Let us examine the effect upon the organs of the body of the introduction of alcohol, in any form of rum—for no one would think of drinking rum if it was not for the alcohol in it. It must take its place among the following five classes:

First—As one of the true foods, which supply new material to build up the bodily tissues:

Second—As one of the accessory foods, which, while not performing the office of true foods, yet facilitate nutrition, like salt or the acid principle of fruit.

Third—As a medicine, to correct impaired functions of some organ of the body.

Fourth—As a poison, producing injurious effects upon the bodily functions or tissues.

Fifth—As an inert body, which passes through the alimentary canal without being absorbed or producing any effect whatever, as do small seeds, for instance.

These classes cover the case of every article taken into the stomach, and alcohol necessarily comes under one of them. Every one knows that it does not come under the fifth class; this is self-evident, from the effect it produces. Under which of the other four classes does it come? To test this let a capsule be filled with rum and swallowed. Of course not a particle touches tongue or mouth. In a short time its odor can be perceived on the expired breath, showing that it is being thrown off by the lungs. A chemical examination of the perspiration and urine shows that they contain it in an unchanged state. Therefore three excretory organs of the body—the lungs, kidneys and skin—set to work as soon as alcohol gets into the blood to get it out of the system, and it comes out unchanged.

This excludes it from the first class. It can not be a food, for all the foods are assimilated by the system, and, after performing their function of producing heat or force, or building up tissue, are excreted in an entirely different chemical form from the original one. Sugar, for instance, is a heat-producing food. It is thrown off from the lungs, not as sugar, but as carbonic acid gas—and from the other excretory organs in various combinations, but not as sugar. The same is true of all other true foods. No one of them is thrown off in an unchanged form.

Nor is it an accessory food—one that facilitates nature's processes. The medical verdict is that it does exactly the opposite. It hinders digestion, for example. Now in this we know the popular opinion is just the opposite. At a state dinner, for instance, when a very large quantity of food is taken into the stomach, the general idea is that liquor of some kind—wine or brandy—facilitates digestion by aiding the stomach in the work of getting rid of the mass of food. The fact is, however, that it does nothing of the sort. It deadens the nerves of the stomach, so that we lose consciousness of the uncomfortable load. The process of digestion is retarded by two or three hours.

It is proved that alcohol—and of course rum—diminishes the rapidity of tissue change. Now this, in a healthy man, is an evil, for it keeps in the system molecules of matter which, having fulfilled their office, are but a burden, and need to be thrown off. But alcohol prevents this; hence the unhealthy load of fat which the bloated and blotched drunkard carries about with him, if he have plenty of foot to eat. Alcohol suspends animation—puts on the brakes, slows up tissue change, and conduces to passivity, or a sort of life which is perhaps more nearly allied to death than to true living. Dr. Parkes found that even moderate amounts of alcohol administered to a laboring man deranged the heart's action and greatly lessened his working power.

Not being a food, either true or accessory, it must belong under one of the two remaining classes—medicine or a poison. But nearly all medicines are poisons when taken in excessive doses. Dr. Foote, of New York, speaking on this point, says:

The origin of alcohol will give us a strong clue as to its nature. It is the product of putrefactive processes found more in dead than in living tissues, and its main source is the fermentation due to the activity of a low form of animal life. It appears to be an excrementory product, and its physiological action also confirms this view of its nature. Ammonia is another product of excretion, and the effects of alcohol and ammonia are so similar in important points that Dr. Woods puts them in the same class in his Materia Medica. They are called local irritants, cardiac stimulants, and nerve paralyzers.

If we may judge by such indications as its chemical nature and its origin, it is to animal life more like an ash than like a food. Unlike a food it is quickly eliminated through many channels, and while retained in the tissue it restrains life action in that it is slow in the process of cell growth and retards tissue change. In fact, it suspends life instead of supporting it, and the study of its poisonous effects shows that its influence is all in the direction of death-producing rather than life-giving. In short, it is a poisoner of living tissue and a preserver of dead tissue.

Alcohol is known to reduce the temperature or bodily heat, except in those who are habituated to it. It lessens the oxygen-bearing power of the red corpuscles and retards the elimination of carbonic acid gas. It retards metabolism, or tissue change. The weight of evidence tends to show that it diminishes the excretion of urea. Locally it irritates the mucous membrane, impairs digestion, increases the rapidity of the heart's action, shortens the period of the heart's rest, paralyzes the minute blood vessels and anæsthetizes or benumbs brain and nerve tissue. It produces irritation, congestion and revulsion wherever it strikes. It hardens the connective tissue which goes to make up the structure of the body, and softens or degenerates glandular tissue—that is, the active, living cellular substance which in every organ really attends to or carries on the process of life.

Hence it will be seen that it is a poison, which deranges functions, stops healthy activity, paralyzes, deadens and destroys. It is a poison which comes to a man in the disguise of wine, beer and the stronger liquors. The taste for rum is the taste for alcohol. It should be banished forever, for it works harm, not good, in the human economy.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

How a Dying Girl Made a Man Out of a Miserable Drunkard.

The quiet influence of a child has been the means of saving a parent. I remember a little history related to me many years ago by a Christian abstainer. He said he would give me the facts that led to his reform and the circumstances that arrested him in his career of sin.

Two maiden ladies who lived in a village often noticed a scantily-clad girl passing their house with a tin pail. On one occasion one of these ladies accosted her:

"Little girl, what have you got in that pail?"

"Whisky, ma'am."

"Where do you live?"

"Down in the hollow."

"I'll go home with you."

They soon came to a wretched hovel in the hollow, just outside the village. A pale, jaded, worn-out woman met them at the door. Inside was a man, dirty, maudlin and offensive. The lady, addressing the woman, said:

"Is this your little girl?"

"Yes."

"Does she go to school?"

"No; she has no other clothes than what you see."

"Does she go to Sunday-school?"

"Sunday-school—in these rags! Oh, no!"

"If I furnish her with suitable clothes can she go?"

"It is of no use giving her clothes. He would steal them and sell them for whisky. Better let the girl alone. There is no hope for her or for us."

"But she ought to go to school."

An arrangement was entered into whereby the child should call at the lady's house Sunday morning, be clothed for the school, and after the school was dismissed call again, and change her garments for home.

The little creature was very teachable, and soon became a favorite with her teacher, who gave her a little Testament, probably the first present the child had ever received. She was very proud of her Testament, exhibiting it on all occasions, with the delighted exclamation:

"That's my little Testament—my own."

She would take it with her at night, clasping it in her hands till she fell asleep on the wretched rags called a bed. The child was taken ill. The doctor, provided by her benefactors, declared she would die. Her friends furnished her with what comforts they could, and watched the father lest he should steal them and sell them for whisky.

The gentleman then continued the narrative in the first person:

"One day I went to her bedside. I was mad for a drink. I had taken every thing I could lay my hands on.

"I looked round the room. There was nothing left, nothing to dispose of. Yet I must have drink. I would have sold my child; I would have sold myself for whisky. The little creature lay on the bed, with the Testament clasped in her hand, partly dozing. As I sat there, she fell asleep, and the book slipped from her fingers and lay on the coverlet of the bed. Stealthily looking round the room, I stretched out my shaking hand, seized the Testament, and hastily thrust it into my bosom. I soon sneaked out, like a guilty thing, to the grog-shop. All I could get for it was half a pint of whisky. It was a poor little book. I drank the devil's drink almost at a draught and soon felt relieved from the burning thirst. The stagnant blood in the diseased vessels of my stomach was stimulated by the fiery fluid and I felt better. What took me back to my child, I can not tell, but I sat again by her side. She still seemed to be sleeping, and I sat there with the horrible craving stayed for a time by the whisky I had drunk, when she opened her eyes slowly and saw me. Reaching out her hand to touch mine, she said: 'Papa, listen. I am going to die, and when I die I shall go to Jesus, for He told little children to come to Him. And I shall go Heaven, for He said that little children were of the kingdom of Heaven. I learned that out of my Testament. Papa, when I go to Heaven, if Jesus should ask me what you did with my little Testament. O, papa! O, papa! what shall I tell Him?' It struck me like lightning. I sat a few moments, and then fell down on my knees by the bedside of my child, crying: 'God be merciful to me a sinner.' That half-pint of whisky was the last drop of intoxicating liquor that passed my lips.

"She died in a few days with her hand in mine, and her last words to me were: 'Papa, we shall both go to Jesus now.'"
—From John B. Gough's "Sunlight and Shadow."

It is said there has never been a fight or a quarrel, and that there are no punishments in the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea, Mass. The reason given for this is that no liquors are allowed on the premises, and if a man gets drunk when off on leave for a day he does not easily get permission to go again. If he gets drunk for a third time he is discharged from the home.

ALTHOUGH there are many who would have us believe that the results of the use of alcoholics are not so serious in European countries as in our own, the last census shows that in Germany only 11,655 persons died by murder and suicide, while 25,499 perished by alcoholic drinks.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You All.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Herrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

THE REALM OF FASHION.

The Day of Long Opera Cloaks and Inverness Capes.

The Louis XV. Cape of Gorgeous Hue—A Noticeable Prevalence of Corn-Flower Blue—New Fans and Dress Shoes.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]
[Special Correspondence.]

Now, in all verity, are "the melancholy days" near at hand. We realize that the luxurious, dreamy idling of summer is over, and so in the autumn the maiden's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of ball-gowns and opera cloaks. If her purse happens to know the plenishment of spare cash, her fancies may soon become realities, as the many establishments are a perfect blaze of glory with the myriads of charming autumn novelties.

Browns and reds will prevail as leading colors, followed by touches of yellow for millinery purposes. As far as regards outdoor wear, jackets are to be longer, and cloaks looser than ever. Sleeves will retain their present size and shape, and feather trimming will hold a prominent place as adornment for either dresses or wraps.

How one is prone to fall into a reverie over a discarded opera cloak—what memories are awakened, calling the old sensations into new life. But the seasons come and go, and with them new fashions and new feelings. One may long to wear the old cloak of last season in order to revive old sentiments, but the probability is that it is too short for the present demand of fashion and a short opera cloak seemingly fails in its purpose. Undoubtedly the most desirable cloaks are the long ones. Among the many newly imported examples, perhaps the simplest, and yet the handsomest, is one which entirely envelopes the figure and is made in loose coat shape.

The material is resida green faced cloth, lined throughout with white corded silk and has wide bell sleeves. The front closes upon the right side, and is edged, like the sleeves, with a broad white silk braid, upon which is woven a Greek key pattern in silver. Silver drops edge the sleeves and the rolling collar. This style of cloak, which is so comfortable and easily adjusted, could be adopted in any combination of materials, but would be especially successful in brocaded silk, lined with a suitable shade of plain satin, and with heavy revers on the sleeves and down the front, of the same. Another similarly shaped cloak is made of tan-colored bengaline, having a pointed plastron, high collar and long, square open sleeves covered with ficelle colored passementerie, heavily streaked with gold. It is lined with yellow satin, and the contrast of tan, yellow and gold is harmonious and charming.

A half long cloak is an exact copy of a man's inverness cape, and has the great advantage of being very easily slipped on, the body having large, loose arm-holes, and thus avoiding any annoying struggle with the dress sleeves. It is suitable to be made in cloth of any color with a brilliant lining.

A Louis XV. cape, intended for an opera mantle, is of Parma violet plush, lined with silk of the same color. The fronts are handsomely embroidered in colored silks, the effect being heightened by gold and silver threads, and the neck is tied together with silken cord, finished with tassels. A second opera mantle is of dove-colored corduretta, trimmed with gold and white galoon and edged with a mixture of peacock and heliotrope ostrich feathers. The lining is of heliotrope surah, brocaded in a small floral design. A lovely carriage cloak represents a deep coachman's cape, modified, however, by being shaped to the waist and hanging in three folds from each shoulder. The material is ivory cloth, adorned with gold passementerie enriched with jewels, bordered with peacock feather ruching, and lined with pink in the make of silk known as chine.

On many of the new little coats which our English cousins term "smart" looking, braiding almost entirely covers the cloth. One of gray tweed is beautifully braided all over in vermicelli pattern with black silk, sleeves and all being done alike. The coat is cut straight and rather loose, something in the shape of an old-fashioned sacque. Another of pilot cloth, in a warm ruby tone, is cut to simulate a pea-jacket, with braiding of the darkest shade of myrtle green woven with dead gold threads. This garniture covers the sleeves and collar, and is carried as a band all round the bottom of the coat.

A stylish Louis XV. coat of faced cloth, in a rich mulberry tint, recently made for a trousseau, is cut with open throat and broad revers, and slopes away below the waist line. The center closes with large enameled buttons, and various waistcoats to accompany it are made for occasions. One of putty colored cloth is designed for street wear, while an elaborate one of rich brocade combining all the violet tints is elegant for evening. The waistcoats are deep and straight across the lower edge, in sort of continental style, and fasten up with small buttons matching those upon the coat.

Among new materials exhibited in the shops, the prevalence of corn-flower blue is noticeable. It is to be questioned whether this shade will obtain for long, as it is, as a rule, too trying for daylight, but passable at night. This dense blue asserts itself quite forcibly in millinery, however, and was exhibited recently in an imported dancing gown of bluish-gray embroidered net, upon which sprays of the deep blue corn-flowers were carelessly thrown. Maize-colored ribbon velvet was festooned upon the skirt, and heightened the effect very considerably.

Another pretty dancing dress for a young lady is of shell pink pompadour silk, brocaded with tiny moss-buds, and the lower skirt is festooned with shrimp pink velvet ribbons caught up with the same shade of "Prince of Wales" ostrich tips.

Dress fans are all light and filmy and delicate. Some of the prettiest and most artistic of those lately imported are made of white crepe de chine, decorated with dainty crayon drawings. This is a refreshing change from the brilliant, hand-painted, flaunting variety. Another gauze fan has garlands of artificial flowers, which can be arranged upon the edge, and transposed to harmonize with the change of gowns. Feather fans still hold their own, and are made in every costume tint and shade of tint.

There are innumerable new fancies in dress shoes which reach us now and then from abroad. One of the latest is the "Orleans," a beaded shoe in any color, with an ankle strap which closes with a single button.

The "Cinderella" in any combination of colors is very dainty, having an upper of kid and a goloshe with a fancy edging of patent leather. For evening slippers the "Kenilworth" in varied shades is very pretty, and "La Tosca," which has white kid backs and black glace kid fronts and heels, will in all probability prove very attractive. Equally worthy of admiration are the "Charles IX.," embroidered with jet or bronze beads, according to the kid, and the "Zebra" in black and white colored stripes.

It is rumored that gloves will again be worn outside the sleeves, and both the gauntlet and mousquetaire will be shaped with that idea in view. Russia leather gloves are in great demand, and as they are so thoroughly durable, they can not be considered dear at a higher price than the ordinary kid.

Taste in hosiery is rather running riot among bright colors just now. If they are black, they are patterned with gay colors. Stripes are popular for evening wear, and in these are combined chocolate and pale blue, pink and cinnamon, gold and brown and gold and black. For day wear vertical hair stripes, blue and gold on a black ground, are preferred before other patterns. Cashmere stockings with open-work fronts are sought after.

There are no indications that the plain, straight skirts are going out of vogue, in spite of paniers and flounces. Fashion is creditably rational at present, and may she long remain so.

FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

DOLLY'S WEDDING.

My dolly was going to be married.
'Twas such an exciting day!
And all the dolls were invited,
From near and far away.

She had as fine an outfit
As ever a doll could show;
We played that it came from Paris,—
Like Sister Nell's, you know.

The groom was a gallant sailor
In a suit of white and blue,
His name was Ralph Augustus,
And the doll-bride's name was Sue.

The bride was dressed in satin,
All trimmed with flowers and lace;
And every one said she was charming,
And had such a lovely face!

Pray, how do you think they were married?
'Twas simple as simple could be!
They both jumped over a broomstick,
And then they were married, you see.

WHERE WAS CLIFFORD?

A Little Boy's Adventure in a Big Field of Wheat.

It was a day in July; the thermometer ran high in the nineties, and the air was so oppressive that even the birds and insects seemed to have entirely disappeared.

It had been an unusually busy morning for Mrs. Holt; she had been up since three o'clock, for to-morrow the harvesting would begin, and there were great preparations going on, as in this prairie home it was the gala time of all the year, when the nearest neighbors came to help gather the beautiful grain that waved in the sunlight and covered a thousand acres or more of the surrounding country. Nothing but a sea of yellow in every direction.

Little six-year-old Clifford thought there never had been such a day since he could remember. Mamma was so busy she did not want him in the kitchen, and it was so hot out of doors that he could not play at all.

At last he ran to his mother just as she was making her last tins of biscuit, and said: "Mamma, please put me to bed; I am so sleepy and tired. Rover is asleep and Kittie and I will go too."

"Run away, Clifford I am too busy. If you are so sleepy go up-stairs and lie down in your cot; but you had better play until after dinner, then take a nap with me."

Clifford did not like the idea of going up-stairs alone, so he ran out-doors to play as his mother told him. But the shade was only in such a little place by the house, and he would just go over there by the wheat; it looked cooler there as the grain waved in the breeze. So he trotted over the road to the edge of the grain, and sure enough it really was cooler; so he sat down in the shadow of the tops that stood four feet high. As he sat there his attention was attracted by some little red birds that were flying back and forth into the wheat. Suddenly he remembered what his papa had told him the night before about these birds, who had built their nests all through the grain. And Clifford had felt so sorry for the baby birds that would be so cruelly killed by the big machine. All at once he thought, "I will go a little way in and find some nests, and I will put them in my hat and carry them out in the orchard; how glad the poor mamma birds will be when I save the little birdies' lives."

Now, Clifford's mamma had often told him never to go away from the house alone, but he had forgotten all else now, in his wish to save the lives of the young birds that were in such peril. So into the forest of yellow glory he made his way. On and on he went, hunting for the nests. Finally, the poor little man was so tired of making his way and of searching in vain for the birds that, after an hour's tramp, he decided to go home "to his mamma." So he turned around, and started back; but which way was back? He was so small that, in coming through, he had not broken a single stalk, but had slipped between them, and so had not left a trace behind.

He turned back, expecting, of course, to come right out in sight of mamma's kitchen-door, and he wondered if dinner would be ready, and if mamma would be glad to see him now. So he made his way a little farther, and then he thought he would sit down and rest just a little while, and perhaps he would hear the dinner-horn blow; then he would run on home.

When Mrs. Holt finished the biscuit, it was time to prepare the dinner. Once or twice the thought of Clifford's flushed face came to her, and she thought he must have gone up-stairs after all, because it had been such a long time since she had seen any thing of him. When noon came a shrill blast of the long tin horn brought Mr. Holt and his two men home to their dinner. To Mr. Holt's inquiry: "Where is Clifford?" Mrs. Holt replied: "Asleep, up-stairs." His dinner was carefully put away for him, and the men returned to their work.

Late in the afternoon Mrs. Holt awoke with a start from the long nap she had taken on the dining-room sofa, where she had thrown herself for a little rest before going up-stairs. Her first thought was of Clifford, and up-stairs she flew, into the little room where his cot stood. He had not been there at all, nor in her room. Thoroughly alarmed she went up into the garret, where he sometimes played; but all was silent and empty. The next instant the horn sent its call, echoing over the prairie in blast after blast, recalling Mr. Holt in great haste. All was confusion now! What had become of Clifford?

The first thought was of the small creek that ran half a mile beyond the house, and its banks were searched in vain for a trace. They went along the road for miles in each direction, but nothing was to be seen except the golden-headed grain on either side, nodding their good night to the setting sun. At length, as the great full moon was rising they returned home. The father, in hopeless despair, not knowing what was to be done next to find his child, whether alive or dead. Mrs. Holt was living over the morning in a perfect agony of remorse for the hasty words, and the thought that, perhaps now there would be no Clifford ever to trouble her again.

Some of the nearest neighbors had come by this time to join in the search. Just then a thought came to Mr. Holt of Rover, and calling him, he said, "Where is Clifford? Go find Clifford!" This he repeated several times until the dog began smelling on the ground.

It was some time before the track across the road was found, but when it was the dog went straight into the wheat and disappeared, Mr. Holt followed, the moon making it almost as light as day.

After going a little way he stopped and called to Rover, thinking what nonsense to be wasting the time in this way. No doubt Rover thought he was after birds, and, besides, he was breaking the wheat all down, and he had told Clifford never to go into the grain for that very reason. But Rover would not come back, but ran on as if he understood just what he was about. So he followed as rapidly as he could. All at once Rover came to a stand still, wagging his tail gleefully over a blue sailor hat, in which was a nest of little birds, with their mother. Mr. Holt was sure now that Rover knew best, and urged him on. And in a few minutes they came to a little curly-headed boy lying fast asleep, and his face all swollen with crying.

The next instant he was awake and telling his papa he was so hungry, and he had found one nest of birds, and when he tried to find the way home he could not. As his father held him in his arms and started for the long tramp back, two big tears fell on the curly head as he thought of what would have happened if it had not been for Rover.

All summer long, way out in the prairie was a large square of wheat that the machine never reaped, and in the midst was the happiest family of little red birds whose home was in the blue sailor hat.—Francis M. Conkling, in N. Y. Examiner.

A FUNNY PLAYMATE.

How It Went Fishin' with Molly and Peggy.

Peggy and Molly lived on a farm in Pike County, Pa. Their house was a long way from the nearest neighbor, and it was seldom any children came to see them, so they made playmates of all the animals on the farm.

"Yes," said their mother, "them children petted all the critters so and made 'em so tame I couldn't seem to keep 'em out the house. Chickens and turkeys, and even calves and pigs, would come poking their heads in the doors at all hours of the day."

You see Peggy and Molly commenced to pet the calves when they were baby calves, and the pigs when they were wee, cunning little things, and did not stop petting and playing with them even when they were full grown. That is how they came to have a big pig for a playmate.

"Molly," said Peggy one bright morning, "let's go fishin'."

"All right," said Molly.

So with fishing poles over their shoulders the children started off.

Now which of their playmates do you suppose went with them? Not Nero, the dog, nor Tabby, the cat, not even Ted, their pet rooster, who usually followed them everywhere, but it was Master Pig himself who escorted them.

The pond was about a quarter of a mile away, and to reach it, it was necessary to cross a brook. There was no bridge over the brook, but they crossed on a fallen log.

"Master Pig will have to go home now," said Molly as she reached the opposite bank, "he can't come over here."

But Master Pig had no such idea, he would never desert his little friends in that way. So placing his two forefeet on the log, he turned up his funny nose, sniffed, grunted, and then started on his perilous journey.

Slowly, carefully, step by step he walked along the slippery log until he finally reached the other bank in safety.

Then with a grunt of relief he followed the little girls to the fishing ground and, lying down, made himself comfortable while the children devoted themselves to the serious business of trying to catch minnows with bent pins for fishing hooks.

Not once did Master Pig wander away from his little charges, and you may be sure when they all came safely home at noon, Master Pig was given an extra good dinner for having taken such good care of the little girls.—Adelia B Beard, in Youth's Companion.

LIKE LOUIS QUATORZE.

One of the Peculiar Vagaries of an Erratic Parisian Gentleman.

A curious scene was witnessed in a well-known restaurant near the Halles at an early hour on Thursday morning. A gentleman, who said his name was Adalbert, and is reported to belong to a good family, invited two men whom he met on the street to supper. They supped in a most luxurious manner, consuming several bottles of champagne. At last Adalbert knocked on the table with his stick and shouted: "Bring the bill! Quick! I am Louis XIV., I don't like to be kept waiting." The proprietor brought the reckoning, which amounted to £8, and the representative of Louis XIV. tossed it to his companions, remarking: "Pay that if you like! As for me, I have only got 1s 8d in my pocket, and I intend to keep it there!" "But," expostulated his companions, "it was you who invited us to supper!" "Very likely," was the reply; "I invited you to supper, and you have supped; now I invite you to pay, therefore pay! That's my character." The result of the altercation was that all three were taken before M. Lejeune, inspector of police, who soon found out that the gentleman calling himself Adalbert was in reality a lunatic, and had already been in St. Anne's asylum for mental vagaries of a similar kind. He was sent to the infirmary of the central police station for further inquiry into the state of his mind. The other men were liberated on promising to pay the landlord when they had money enough. — Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

AT THE WINDOW.

The Clerk in the Village Post-Office Has a Life Full of Experience.

The life of a post-office clerk in a town of 2,000 or 3,000 inhabitants is full of pleasantness and all his paths are peace. He has nothing under the sun to ruffle the placid serenity of his amiable temper, and consequently his disposition soon becomes as sweet and mild as the perfume of a magnolia grove wafted on the gentle breath of summer. All he has to do is to engage in exhilarating conversation like this:

"Is there any thing here for Sarah Bilkins?"

"Nothing, madam."

"Are you sure?"

"Quite sure, madam."

"But you didn't look. How do you know without looking?"

"I have looked over the letters in the 'B' box 700 times to-day, and I remember that there were no letters in it addressed to you."

"Well, now, that's strange. I should have had a letter yesterday, and I thought it would come to-day sure. Do you suppose it could have been lost?"

"It's possible."

"Do many letters get lost?"

"About 16,000,000 annually."

"Oh, my! What is the reason?"

"By reason of incorrect or illegible address, insufficient postage and other causes."

"Goodness! And I suppose lots of them had money in?"

"Yes. Twenty-eight thousand of the letters sent to the dead-letter office last year contained money, amounting in all to $48,642; 4,000 had inclosures of postal notes aggregating $5,300, and 27,000 were found to contain drafts, checks, notes, commercial paper, etc., in the sum of $1,471,871."

"My land! And who gets this money!"

"If the letter contains the address of the sender it is sent back to him; but in over 3,000,000 cases out of 6,000,000 no address whatever is given by the writer."

"Then perhaps my letter has gone to the dead-letter office, or is held for postage or something like that?"

"Perhaps."

"Well, don't you think—"

"Madam, will you please stand aside a moment until I wait on the people who are crowding around the window?"

And as madam departs she mutters spitefully that she "never saw such an insolent, overbearing, unaccommodating fellow as that post-office clerk. He can't even answer a civil question, and I am going to have him reported to the department this very day."—Punxsatawney Spirit.

ONE MORE MYSTERY

Horrible Discovery in a Cemetery Near Camden, N. J.

MAY BE AN ATROCIOUS MURDER.

The Nude Body of a Man Found in a Shallow Grave.

Believed to Have Been Strangled to Death and Buried—The Authorities Investigating—No Further Light on the Lawyer Townsend Mystery—The Coroner's Inquest is Being Continued.

CAMDEN, N. J., Dec. 6.—Considerable excitement was caused here by the discovery of what may prove to be an atrocious murder.

Information was received at the coroner's office that the nude body of a man who had been strangled to death by hanging had been buried in Johnson cemetery.

The coroner at once drove to the cemetery and had the body exhumed. The grave was a shallow one, being little more than a foot and a half deep.

A few minutes' work brought to light a rough wooden box. When it was opened the partly decomposed body of a man was discovered.

The body was perfectly nude, and around the neck was a stout hempen rope about two feet long, which had cut deeply into the flesh of the throat.

The body is supposed to be that of John Moore, colored, a rough character well known around Merchantville and vicinity. The authorities are investigating the case.

THE TOWNSEND MYSTERY.

Many of the Witnesses Tell Contradictory Stories.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 6.—The mystery which surrounds the tragic death of Lawyer John Townsend remains as apparently unsolvable as ever, although many witnesses were examined and all the light possible was shed upon every circumstance connected with the matter.

Coronor Hill has been all day engaged in trying to get at the bottom facts, but very little came out that has not already been published.

The most prominent details of the inquest were, firstly, the absence of the two nephews who lived in the same house with Mr. Townsend, who were cognizant of the circumstances of his departure from the house on the morning of his death, who could, presumably, testify as to his clothing, his appearance and his proposed destination. Their attendance and examination might explain the theory of the presence of a man resembling Mr. Townsend in the vicinity of the scene of the tragedy at about the same time it occurred. Secondly, the omission of the officials to extract from the witnesses such exact details as to time and as to the appearance of the man who might have been either Mr. Townsend or his double; thirdly, the contradictory evidence of the physician who made the autopsy on the body and of the undertaker who had charge of it, and, fourthly, the boy's (Louis Norman's) departure from the statement he had hitherto adhered to concerning his observation of Mr. Townsend's mad leap.

It is believed that all the important witnesses, so far as they are known, have been examined, and unless something unlooked for turns up this afternoon, or unless some important discoveries are made outside of it, the case is likely to remain a mystery for all time.

Will Mr. Astor Succeed Mr. Lincoln?

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—A cable from Paris says that William Waldorf Astor would would succeed Robert T. Lincoln as Minister to the Court of St. James. Mr. Lincoln in an interview treats the matter rather disdainfully. He says: "Newspaper rumors come thick and fast, and I don t think it is necessary even to deny many of them. In regard to this last rumor I have not as yet been advised of any change, and rather think that if any comes I shall not hear of it first from newspaper reporters."

American Residents Threatened.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Later advices from Tien Tsin, while not giving details of the situation, confirm the statement that the natives are in a very angry and threatening mood toward the European and American residents, and that the foreigners fear outbreaks of violence. The government has as yet taken no adequate steps for the relief of the people, who are in a most deplorable condition of destitution on account of the ruining of their crops and lands by river floods.

Riggs Elected Captain of Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 6.—Jesse Riggs, the well known football player, has been elected captain of next year's eleven in place of Edgar A. Poe, who graduates in June. Riggs has been a member of Princeton football teams for the past three seasons, and this fall he was by far the best man on the rush line. His election has given general satisfaction to the students.

One of the Crew Lost.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., Dec. 6.—Schooner Spartan, from Baltimore for Providence, has arrived here and reports that yesterday, when off Block Island her spanker boom sheet parted and carried overboard one of the crew who was drowned. Albert Paterson, a sailor, was struck on the head by a sheet block and seriously hurt.

Nearly 102 Years Old.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 6.—Mrs. Marcia Beers died in Cheshire, Conn., last evening at the advanced age of 101 years, 10 months and 14 days. She was a relative of General W. T. Sherman. Mrs. Beers' centenary birthday was celebrated on January 21, 1889, with a jubilee, a large number of descendants attending from all parts of the country.

TO BE CUT APART.

Result of the Bone Grafting Experiment May be Determined To-Day.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Johnny Gethins and the dog Charity, whose bones are growing together in the Charity Hospital, Blackwell's Island, were in fine condition this morning. Their temperature was normal and both had good appetites.

A great deal of curiosity has been expressed as to whether the dog's bone that is being grafted into Johnny's leg is as large as the boy's. A reporter asked a gentleman who was present at the operation about this. He said that the bone of the dog's foreleg was almost exactly the same size as that of the larger bone of the boy's leg just above the ankle, which is the point of operation. He further said he knew positively that there was no truth in the story put in circulation yesterday that the boy and dog have been separated.

Dr. Phelps had given no intimation of his intention to complete the operation, but he thought it most probable the separation of the boy and dog would take place this afternoon.

POWDERLY AT OCALA.

He is Addressing the Farmers' Alliance Convention This Afternoon.

OCALA, Fla., Dec. 6.—The Alliance convention spent some time during the forenoon discussing a resolution offered by Livingston of Georgia to indorse the St. Louis platform. The resolution was finally adopted unanimously.

Mr. McCune, chairman of the executive committee, submitted his report. In it he advocated economy, the reduction of the President's salary and the removal of his headquarters from Washington.

General Master Workman Powderly of the Knights of Labor is addressing the convention this afternoon.

A call signed by General Rice and John Davis of Kansas and about seventy-five other members of the Alliance has been issued for a national conference to meet at Cincinnati on the 23d of February, preparatory to a united struggle in the political conflict "now pending to decide who in this country is the sovereign, the citizen or the dollar."

Pity for Forger Smith.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—At the regular monthly meeting of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, last night, a letter was read from Albert H. Smith, just convicted of forgery and sentenced to seventeen years' imprisonment, expressing contrition for his sin and resigning his membership in the church. Dr. Abbott offered a resolution to retain Smith's name on the rolls "on the faith that no man more needs the watch and care of a Christian church than one who has fallen into sin, but has sincerely repented and desires to return to the way of righteousness." The resolution was passed unanimously.

They Disappeared Together.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Dec. 6.—The town of Hebronville is greatly excited over the nearly simultaneous disappearance of Superintendent Joseph H. Aull of Knight's big cotton mills, and pretty seventeen-year-old Nellie Hagan, a mill girl. Aull has a wife and children. The company has discharged him. Miss Hagan returned to her boarding place, secured her clothing and disappeared again.

Eva Hamilton Free.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Judge Martine dismissed the indictment against Eva Hamilton, Joshua Mann and Mrs. Annie Swinton, charging them with conspiring to defraud the late Robert Ray Hamilton by passing off a waif as his child and also with grand larceny. The ground on which Judge Martine acted was that Mr. Hamilton was dead and that no conviction on the charge could be secured without his testimony.

Gored by a Mad Bull.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Dec. 6.—Edward C. Wixom, of Lower White Hills, was horribly gored by an infuriated bull on his farm while leading the bull into a stall last night. The animal walked along quietly until Wixom was in the stall and had no way of getting out, and then it rushed upon him. A gash six inches long was cut on the right side of the abdomen, and the flesh for six or eight inches on each side of the wound was torn away from the muscles.

It Cost the Railroad $28,000.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, Dec. 6.—All traffic has ceased on the Upper Mississippi, the present cold snap having filled the river with floating ice. The thermometer is falling and if the present weather continues a solid bridge will be formed by to-morrow.

NO TARIFF REVISION

Only the Tobacco Rebate Section to be Corrected.

THERE MAY BE A WARM DEBATE

The Republicans Ask the Democrats to Come to an Agreement.

The Matter Now Under Consideration—The Pension Appropriation Bill Passed—All Papers Relating to the Barrundi Affair Sent to the House—Mr. Blaine's Letter to Minister Mizner.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—An informal session of the Ways and Means Committee was held during the day, at which the Democratic members were informed that it was the desire of the Republicans to pass a bill correcting the omission of the tobacco rebate section of the Tariff act, but that the majority did not propose to allow this bill to be made the basis for an attempt at general tariff revision.

It was stated by the Republicans that they wished the Democrats to come to an agreement on the matter. The Democratic members asked time to consult.

In Democratic circles outside of the House it is said that the Democrats purpose to reserve every projected amendment to the McKinley bill for the occasion mentioned above, and to pile one and all upon the House as germane to the measure.

THE BARUNDIA AFFAIR.

Secretary Blaine's Letter to Minister Mizner Sent to the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—In accordance with the resolution passed by the last session of Congress, the President has sent to the House the report of the Secretary of State on the killing of General Barundia, of Guatemala, with the correspondence had between the State Department and Minister Mizner.

In his final letter to Minister Mizner on the affair, after commenting on the course pursued by the Minister, Secretary Blaine says, in conclusion: "For your course, therefore, in intervening to permit the authorities of Guatemala to accomplish their desire to capture General Barundia, I can discover no justification. You were promptly informed that your act was regretted. I am now directed by the President to inform you that it is disavowed. The President is, moreover, of opinion that your usefulness in Central America is at an end. You will, therefore, leave your post with all convenient dispatch, turning over our legation to Mr. Kimberly, as charge d'affairs ad interim, through whom your letter of recall will subsequently be presented to the Guatemalan government."

NEWS OF CONGRESS.

The Election Bill in the Senate and the Pension Bill in the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—In the Senate unimportant bridge bills were passed and the Federal Election bill was discussed further.

The House, after debate, passed the Senate joint resolution to issue arms to North and South Dakota, Wyoming and Nebraska, with an amendment including Montana.

The Pension Appropriation bill was debated further and passed.

High Praise for a Journalist.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—A remarkable document has been laid before the President. It was a recommendation for appointment to office signed by thirty members of the United States Senate (headed by Senators Cameron and Quay) and by all the members of the Pennsylvania delegation in the House of Representatives. The paper was an endorsement of the well-known journalist, Major Moses P. Handy, for the position of consul general at Cairo, Egypt, the place held by Eugene Schuyler at the time of his death. Two other members of the Senate sent in individual endorsements of Mr. Handy. It is understood that this appointment has been recommended to the President by the Secretary of State and urged by Postmaster General Wanamaker.

The Indian Situation Improving.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The Indian situation, as indicated by the lack of dispatches received at the War Department, is improving. No news from any of the agencies on the Sioux reservation were received. No news from this region is interpreted as good news. A dispatch was received stating that the Osage Indians, in Indian Territory, who have been indulging in ghost dances, have stopped dancing and that quiet reigns among them.

Looks Like a Case of Murder.

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 6.—The peculiar features attached to the alleged suicide of Emma Pfitzenmeyer, the pretty young girl found dead in her bedroom with her throat cut, after returning from a dance, have led the coroner to investigate. The post-mortem shows that the wounds were not self-inflicted, and it is believed she was murdered.

RAILROAD MEN STRIKE.

Baltimore & Ohio Employes Demand the Reinstatement of Two Companions.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 6.—The yard conductors and brakemen of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in this city, 35 in number, quit work and were paid off and discharged.

The trouble was caused by the company having three yardmen arrested for breaking into a yard clerk's office Wednesday night to get warm, the office only having been recently painted. The prisoners appeared before a magistrate, two of them being dismissed and the other one being fined a small amount. The arrest of an employee of the Baltimore & Ohio is equivalent to discharge, and the other yardmen struck to have their companions reinstated.

A freight blockade has resulted, and the railroad tracks for four miles are filled with freight. The men are quiet and orderly. They will make an effort to extend the strike.

YOUNG LOVERS ELOPE.

A Boy and Girl Run Away From Home and Are Married.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Dec. 6.—The announcement is made that Ella D. Haines, a handsome young girl, cashier and bookkeeper of Wilson's real estate agency, had eloped with Charles G. Rolfe, a young pattern maker employed at Naylor Brothers' foundry and machine shop. The girl is 20 and the boy 18 years old.

Mrs. Rolfe is prominent in society circles in Peekskill and is much distressed over her son's escapade.

Miss Haines is the daughter of Edmund Haines, formerly junior member of the firm of Haight, Haines & Co. Rolfe's only sister, Grace, was married a few months since to Mr. Fred Hyatt, a prominent shoe manufacturer of Chappaqua.

Miss Haines was very attentive to her duties and was highly regarded by Mr. Wilson, who keeps a hardware store in addition to his real estate business.

English Tramps Rushing to London.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The English country roads are swarming with tramps, all with their faces turned toward London, the magnet of attraction being the news of General Booth's great scheme for providing a living for everybody who cannot earn one for himself, for this is the way the "plan of redemption" has been explained to the tramp population. The disbelievers in the General's panacea for poverty declare their belief that after the paupers have been removed from the city to the country refuges or farms established by Booth he will have to lock them up or put an armed guard over them to prevent them from indulging their wandering and idle propensities and drifting back to the cities to be again "redeemed."

Idaho's Senatorship.

BOISE CITY, Idaho, Dec. 6.—Members of the Legislature are arriving daily. The leading topic of discussion in the hotels and on the streets is the Senatorial question. The Republican State Convention passed a resolution stating that it was the sense of the convention that one Senator should be elected from Northern Idaho. This section has two candidates, W. J. McConnell and W. H. Claggett. The two principal delegates in Southern Idaho are ex-Delegate Fred T. Dubois and Gov. G. L. Shoup.

Ballot Box Stuffers Sentenced.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Dec. 6.—Francis Whelan, John J. Miller, John Green and Patrick J. Kennedy, the ballot box stuffers, were sentenced by Judge Lippincott to eighteen months in State's prison. Judge Lippincott told the prisoners he favored two years and $500 fine, but the associate judges believed the lighter punishment sufficient. They said that the prisoners only executed the scheme which was concocted by others. They were all committed in $3,500 bail.

The Comet Refound.

BOSTON, Dec. 6.—A cable message announces that the comet discovered by Spitaler of November 16, and which has not since been seen, has been refound. Its position December 4, 2:5:10 Greenwich mean time, was: right ascension, 5 hours, 15 minutes; declination, north 37 degrees, 22 minutes, with a daily motion preceding of 56 seconds and north 12 minutes. It is circular, less than a minute in diameter, 11th magnitude or fainter, with well defined nucleus and a tail.

Destitution in a Section in Kansas.

ATCHISON, Kans., Dec. 6.—John Cox of Rawlins County, Kansas, is in the city soliciting contributions of food, money and clothing for the distressed inhabitants of that section. Hundreds have left the county, others are unable to get away. He says that unless the people get help soon many of them will starve to death.

Arrests for Illegal Voting.

BOSTON, Dec. 6.—Nine arrests have been made so far in the illegal voting cases, and the prisoners were held for the United States grand jury now in session. The offence consists of having voted in Boston after having moved to another city or town.

THE IRISH CONFLICT

Gladstone Makes No Promises to the Nationalists.

THE EX-PREMIER INDIFFERENT.

Appeals to the People Sure to Follow the Proceedings.

Irish Votes Will Probably Decide Whether Parnell Will be Leader—Club Rumors that Parliament Will be Dissolved in February—Tories More than Satisfied With the Political Situation.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Notwithstanding the attempts at compromise the Irish conflict has assumed an internecine character that will not soon be changed. The appeals to the people that are sure to follow yesterday and to-day's proceedings will, it is expected, show whether Parnell is to remain dictator of the Irish Home Rule party, and all indications point to his popular endorsement in Ireland.

The proposed surrender of the Irish constabulary to home control would not for a moment be accepted by a large section of the English Liberals who have hitherto supported Mr. Gladstone, and this Mr. Gladstone is well aware of.

The Tories are more than satisfied with the situation, which means an almost certain victory upon the dissolution of Parliament. The Liberals are disgusted with the Irish majority for allowing Parnell to dictate the terms of his surrender, when they had a clear majority against him.

The Irish members who visited Mr. Gladstone last night are extremely reluctant to give the particulars of the interview, saying they desired to wait until after to-day's conference.

It is understood, however, that Mr. Gladstone in no way pledged himself as to the course the Liberal party would follow, imputing that he was himself unable to define the policy which the Liberal party of England would pursue in dealing with the position where it now finds itself placed.

Mr. Gladstone listened to the deputation with marked coolness, and evidently wished it understood that he was utterly indifferent as to the outcome of the conference. Club rumors have it that Parliament will be dissolved in February, the government feeling confident that in the demoralized condition of the opposition the Conservatives will sweep the country at the general elections. The home secretary, Henry Matthews, is to become a lord justice of the court of appeal.

Another Sensational Railway Robbery.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—Another sensational railroad robbery has been perpetrated in Southern France, but fortunately the robber was placed under arrest before it was possible for him to escape with his plunder. The thief attacked a passenger who occupied one of the compartments of a coach, and, after relieving him of his money and other valuables, sprang from the train. An alarm was raised by the victim, the train was stopped and the crew and a number of the passengers pursued and captured the robber, who was turned over to the authorities. The affair happened on the Lyons railroad.

Presidential Appointments.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The President has sent to the Senate among other recess nominations the following: Romualdo Pacheco, of California, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to the Central American States.

Wm. Monaghan, of Ohio, to be Consul of the United States at Milton, Canada.

Alex. R. Fithian, of New Jersey, for Collector of Customs at Bridgeton, N. J.

An Assistant Postmaster Sentenced.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—John D. Nichols, formerly assistant postmaster at Berrien Springs, Mich., has been sentenced to imprisonment for two years and fined $482.73 in the United States Court for embezzling postal money orders while he was in office. He is a young man of one of the best families in Berrien Springs and stole to pay a gambling debt.

Minister Phelps Returns.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The Hon. William Walter Phelps, United States Minister to Germany, returned to his post of duty to-day at noon on the North German Lloyd steamship Werra, which will take him to Bremen.

DELAMATER'S FAILURE.

The Liabilities Estimated at from $400,000 to $1,000,000.

MEADVILLE, Pa., Dec. 6.—A great sensation was created here by the announcement of the failure of Delamater & Co., private bankers. The firm consisted of George B. Delamater and his two sons, George Wallace and Thomas A. Delamater. George Wallace Delamater, late Republican candidate for governor of this State, was president of the bank, and another brother, V. M. Delamater, was cashier.

George Wallace Delamater is also a director in the Merchants' National Bank of this city, president of the Meadville Gas Company, and the principal stockholder in the Meadville & Linesville Railroad, of which T. A. Delamater is president.

The failure was a great surprise to the public generally, as the Delamaters were reputed to be very wealthy and perfectly solid. A statement of the liabilities and assets has not yet been made, but it is expected that the liabilities will be very large. The bank was the depository of the county funds. The bank also had $100,000 of State funds on deposit.

The county funds are irreclaimably lost, for the Delamaters were the bondsmen of the county treasurer.

An assignment has been made to John W. Hoskins and George W. McClintock, attorneys, who will begin work immediately to straighten out the accounts preparatory to a statement. The liabilities are variously estimated at from $400,000 to $1,000,000, and it is probable that the exact figures will come between the extremes mentioned.

The State Secured.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 6.—State Treasurer Boyer, who was in this city, said that the State had $100,000 deposited in the banking house of Delamater & Co., at Meadville, which suspended. He said the State could lose nothing, as the deposit was covered by a bond.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The German Government has recognized the Republic of Brazil.

Mrs. Peel, the wife of Hon. Robert Peel, Speaker of the House of Commons, died yesterday in London.

The experimental station belonging to Thomas A. Edson, at Humboldt, Mich., was burned yesterday. The loss is very heavy.

The New Hampshire Legislature has adjourned without enacting any legislation. The extra session cost the people about $1,000,000.

Lake Champlain is frozen over to Chimney Point, and Bulwagger Bay, at Port Henry is also closed. Ten inches of snow fell in that section.

A pipe conveying petroleum from a tank car to the city gas works at Augusta, Me., burst and 4,000 gallons of oil ran into the Kennebec river.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—A rumor was current in Wall street that Thurber, Whyland & Co., wholesale grocers, had failed. F. B. Thurber said: "We are not in trouble in any way. We have met all our obligations promptly, and have a larger cash balance in bank at the present time than usual."

POSTMASTER POPE THEIR PRESIDENT.

A Monopoly of Public and Private Lighting Secured by a New Plainfield Incorporation.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company filed articles of incorporation at Elizabeth yesterday with the County Clerk of Union County. The company begins business with a capital of $175,000. Its President is Elias R. Pope of Plainfield, while the incorperators and stockholders include Mr. Pope, William Runkle of Orange, and Henry G. Runkle of Plainfield. The new concern has purchased the Plainfield Electric Light Works, and will lease the plant of the Plainfield Gas Light Company, which, however, continues to exist as hertofore. The new company will operate both of the plants jointly.

Concerning this matter, THE PRESS of Nov. 18 published the following:

THE SAME OLD STORY.

GAS COMPANY AND ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY COMBINE, AND MONOPOLY IS ESTABLISHED.

One of the members of the Council said to a PRESS reporter, last evening, that if he had known that the Electric Light Co. had been purchased by the Gas Light Co. he would not have voted to pass the ordinance giving the former the right for ten years to string wires through all the streets, alleys and lanes of the city, until he was assured by the new owners of the Electric Light Co. that there would be no increase in the rates to private consumers.

"I have a good notion," he continued, "to present another ordinance at the next meeting, repealing the privilege, Magager Moore, of the Electric Light Co. is certainly guilty of deceit, if not outright dishonesty, in his dealings with the Council. Now that all competition in street and domestic lighting is wiped out, the people can be charged outrageous rates with no redress."

But the story of the sale is not yet true. As one of the principal stockholders and directors of the Gas Light Co. said this afternoon: "If you don't see it in THE PRESS it isn't so. If any documents of sale and transfer had been consummated I would know it, and I assure you nothing of the kind has taken place. However, I do not deny or affirm that it might happen. The Plainfield Electric Light Co.'s plant has been in the market two or three years. Should the Gas Light Co. buy it, it will not be to raise the rates." The same reporter was told by Manager Moore, "I have just returned from Boston and have no knowledge of any sale occurring in my absence."

A Young Man's Lesson for Paying His Court Abroad.

A Plainfield young man who has promising business connections in New York, and who, oblivious of the charm and beauty all around him, courts an Orange maiden, tells a quaint story of himself, concerning a recent call on the young woman whom he especially delights to honor. He is quite a young man, and his experience with florists had been neither deep nor varied. It occurred to him, however, on this particular evening to stop at a flower merchant's on leaving the metropolis for a pleasant evening at the fair one's home, and to choose some blossoms for the pretty girl towards whose home he was wending his way.

"Give me a bunch of roses"—he said carelessly to the man of nosegays.

"Yessir; how many, please?"

"Oh, a couple of dozen or so."

In a short time they were ready, and the purchaser was feeling in his vest pocket for a two-dollar bill to pay for them. "How much?"—he asked, before the bill made its appearance.

"Eighteen dollars, sir"—replied the florist's assistant, with what, his hearer said afterward, seemed diabolical glibness.

The young man felt giddy for a moment. He had unwittingly selected roses that were 75 cents apiece. But, as has been said, he was very young, and it seemed to him a very serious thing to go down before that flower clerk. So he paid his money and took his bouquet. "And"—he says—"I spent the evening watching a pretty girl nibble and chew up $18 worth of roses."

A Stanch Promoter of Sport.

[From The Bound Brook Chronicle].

The Middlesex Gun Club, whose grounds at Dunellen have been for many years the centre of New Jersey sporting interest, has decided to disband. The news will be received with surprise throughout the country, inasmuch as the Middlesex Gun Club has been recognized for years as one of the stanchest promoters of sport in the United States. Its tournaments every Fall have been attended by the most noted sportsmen of the country.

Easter Lodge Election.

The following new officers of Easter Lodge, Knights of Honor, have been elected:

Dictator—Thomas R. Cone; Vice Dictator—Chas. W. Kellogg; Reporter—H. A. Thorne; Financial Reporter—George A. Hallock; Treasurer—Wm. H. Lyon; Guide—John Messersmith.

Best Grape Wine for Communion.

The superior quality and entire purity of Speer's Port Grape Wine of New Jersey, and the success that physicians have had by its use, has induced them to write about it, and caused hundreds of others to prescribe it in their practice as the best and most reliable wine to be had. It is held in great favor for evening parties, and for communion purposes.

BOROUGH LEGISLATORS PUZZLED.

One Councilman Presents a Proposed New Ordinance, and No One Knows What to Do With It.

The Borough Council of North Plainfield last night proved its decided right to be known as a deliberative body. Nearly two hours were spent in transacting a minor amount of routine business. Considerable of this time was spent in informal committee consultations, and in the Councilmen running about to talk with the Tax Collector and the Borough Clerk. During these various interims the crowd in the lobby had a nice time cracking questionable and vulgar jokes, and giggling themselves into a state of semi-maudlin ecstasy over the frequent crowing of a frog-voiced rooster in the yard back of the engine house. All the evening the gas lights flared up and sank down in bewildering alternations of illumination and darkness, and this furnished further amusement for the funny men outside the railing within which sat the august Borough Fathers. The janitor was told to "git thet water out'n them gas pipes before the next meeting", and the Councilmen said how happy they were that they were going to have electric lights next year.

Those present at the meeting were Mayor Place and Councilmen Buckle, Needham, Sebring and Smalley. Councilmen Emmons and Hegeman were absent.

H. H. Brokaw and Dr. J. H. Cooley were made firemen and members of Warren Engine Company, No. 1. Bills amounting to $392.17, of which $260.67 was for public lights, were ordered paid. The extension of Westervelt avenue at the new bridge was accepted as a public roadway. Borough Magistrate Hardy reported three months' profits of $25.10 in the police department of the borough. Treasurer Spencer reported $1,401.15 as the amount of taxes collected thus far for 1890. The Mayor and Clerk were instructed to "raise" $300 for street purposes. To pay for the new lock-up now nearly finished $400 was appropriated from the $600 already paid in for license fees. Arrangements were made to pay two notes, for $1,200, falling due Dec. 20, on the light account, and one for $1,100 on the road account. Councilman Buckle presented an ordinance to prohibit the posting of hand bills, posters, placards and notices on telephone, telegraph, electric light, or electric railway poles, but none of the legislators present knew how to proceed to make the ordinance a law. It was read once, then a motion "to read it a second time" was carried, and it was read again; then a discussion ensued as to the proper method of procedure, and as a bright way out of the quandary a motion, presented by Mr. Needham, was adopted, that the ordinance be brought up at the next meeting for final adoption. The Clerk was instructed, in an aside from Mayor Place, to consult with Borough Counsel Reed asto what ought to be done with the ordinance in the meanwhile. But it has n't yet been adopted on either the first or second reading.

The Plainfield Post-Office Robber.

The man arrested in Colorado, who is believed to be the notorious James McDonald, alias Milky McDonald, was caught after an attempt to crack the safe of the Denver Brewing Company. He tried to escape arrest in Denver the same as he did in Englewood, and was captured after being shot in the leg by Detective McAndrews. His picture was taken in the hospital. He refused to open his eyes in front of the camera. The picture of McDonald, in the Rogues' Gallery in New York, shows him with his eyes closed. He now calls himself John J. McDevitt, and claims his home is Cincinnati. If the Denver authorities agree to the immediate surrender of their prisoner, Sheriff Harding, of Bergen county, will take him to Hackensack for trial on the charge of burglary. This is the same man who was identified as one of the burglars who forced open the safe in the Plainfield post-office some two years ago.

But Think of that Half-Hour They'd Have to Wait at Bound Brook!

The Bound Brook Chronicle arises to remark that those who complain that there is no train leaving New York for Plainfield between 11 A. M. and 1 P. M. overlook the fact that passengers can take the 11:30 A. M. train from New York and go to Bound Brook, where they can board the 12:45 P. M. train towards New York again, and reach Plainfield at 1 o'clock.

Jovial in the Face of Danger.

A tin-roffer at work on the top of John Blackford's new house on Grove street, near Rockview avenue, slipped and fell from the eaves to the ground this morning. As he fell he shouted to his fellow-workman, "Here I go, Pete!" He landed safely on his feet, with his roofing-furnace still clutched in his hand. He was severely shaken up, and just escaped being mangled on a pile of jagged timbers.

Did n't See the Notable.

The train to which was attached the Jersey Central Railroad Directors' private car containing Vice President Morton's party, was thirteen minutes' late, and when it whizzed through Plainfield this afternoon it was making up for lost time. As it did not stop, those who had assembled at the station could distinguish nothing but the name "Monmouth" on the car.

—VanEmburgh & White have a change of advertisement in THE PRESS to-day.

The Dog a Pet, the Tax a Monster.

One of the county assessors has complained to the State Tax Commission that nobody ever pays either poll tax or dog tax in his bailiwick. It is notorious that the dog tax especially is dodged very generally throughout the State. And the men who have most to say about the way in which the public money shall be spent are often those who will not even pay a poll tax. But in some localities there is a general disposition on the part of the assessors to charge every taxpayer with a dog. If he owns one, he pays without demur; if not, he "kicks," and the dog is taken off, so to speak. One man, not far from Plainfield, who never owned a dog, was regularly and annually charged with one until, after three years of that experience, he made a long and vigorous protest. Perhaps New Jersey does not collect as much money by a dog tax as it should, but that is not the fault of some of the assessors.

An Echo of the Mills Meetings.

(From The Sabbath Recorder)

We learn from exchanges that a remarkable revival of religion is in progress in Plainfield, N. J., but have not yet had very full particulars concerning it A correspondent of one of our exchanges says that the saloons of the city were closed one night in order that their employes and patrons might have an opportunity to attend. That looks like business. We wish the revival might go on until all the saloons should close their doors never to open them again, then their employes and patrons could find time to live sober, virtuous lives, and do something to make the world a little better for their having lived in it.

In croup and whooping-cough it is important to have a remedy at once at hand that is reliable and safe. Hires' Cough Cure fills the bill better than any medicine that has ever been discovered. Its effects are positive, quick, and sure. It acts like magic. Remember it.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

(In Charge of Superintendent of Press Work.)

The monthly business meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, held Thursday, was very largely attended. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson presided, officers were in their seats, and as usual the Treasurer's report was listened to with great interest. Questions were asked pertaining to the methods of carrying on the different branches of work. Reports from Superintendents were submitted as follows: Juvenile:—Loyal Temperance Legion increasing rapidly in numbers; sessions every Wednesday at 3:45, for one hour only, during the afternoons. The children as well as the older people, who occasionally drop in, are particularly interested in the blackboard lessons. The entertainment given this last week, in which the members took part, was much enjoyed. The pledge is thoroughly understood before offered. Parents and friends of the children are always welcome. The Kitchen Garden has still a few vacancies. Meets Mondays and Tuesdays, at 4 p. m. sharp. Promptness is one of the foundation stones to good home-keeping, and these little housekeepers are not behindhand in their studies here. Ask any of the children who have been through the Kitchen Garden how to wash flannels without shrinking them into nothing. The Cooking Class are quite ready for their exhibition of Art in the Labor Booth at the Bazar. The Superintendent of Temperance Literature in Sunday schools reported that the Young Crusader was taken in the Methodist Sunday school. Miss Lucia Kimball, of the National Union, in her report states that 2,870 temperance books were introduced this last year into Sunday school libraries. The Superintendent of Evangelistic Work reported the four weekly meetings growing in numbers. Many have come in to "lend a hand", in the work for "God and Home and Native Land." The Sunday afternoon four o'clock meeting for the present will be in charge of Frederick Moon. Last week many coming in late had difficulty in finding seats. Many took part. One testimony was given from the vestibule. Judge Fernald, of Washington, was upon the platform. Those who once come to these Gospel Temperance services, Sunday morning to the prayer and consecration meeting, in the afternoon to the general praise service, or Saturday evening to the temperance meeting, count it a loss to be absent. The Superintendent of Literature reported that nearly 4,000 pages of temperance literature had been distributed within the past month. The rooms, at 73 West Front street, will be open New Year's Day from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. An invitation is extended to everyone. Books and papers will be loaned for the day. Light refreshments and music will be furnished throughout the day. At 3:30, the usual hour for Thursday's meeting, there will be a special programme arranged and carried out. The coffee cart will be on exhibition at the Bazar. Oh, for a W. C. T. U. Building!

Some People are Wondering

—When a permanent pavement will again cover the sidewalk in front of the new Coward building.

—Who will be the first victim of the vicious habit the gallery gods have of throwing lighted matches on the ground, where the ladies' skirts brush the flames and invite an awful death, at the entrance to Stillman Music Hall, at the close of the performance.

—How long it will be before Music Hall audiences possess the good breeding to keep their seats till the curtain falls.

—When the cigarette and bad-tobacco fiends who rush out in a hurry to block the exit and otherwise discommode everybody will cease the practice of choking the long passageway from Music Hall to Front street so that the more deliberate people are nearly asphyxiated with the horrid fumes.

—What "oldest inhabitant" will be alive when a crosswalk adorns Park avenue midway between Front and Second streets, and makes glad the hearts of the people.

—What Plainfield woman it was who asked in a drug store yesterday: "Do you keep postage stamps? Are they fresh? If they are, send me up a dozen."

—Why certain wealthy property-owners and big corporations don't keep their pavements free from slippery ice.

—When street loafing, and its disgusting accompaniments, will be abolished.

—How some drivers can be so cruel as to leave their horses standing unblanketed, shivering in the icy wind, and with their feet suffering from the cold of the pools of water accumulated in clogged-up gutters.

Their Twenty-fifth Wedding Day.

The silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kriney, of 321 West Front street, was celebrated last night, when a host of friends made them a happy visit. Everyone brought handsome gifts, and overwhelmed the host and hostess with compliments and good wishes. A fine supper was served, and dancing to excellent music was kept up till four o'clock in the morning. The people were having such a good time that they didn't want to stop even then, but the musicians were tired. Mr. and Mrs. Kriney were married at Scotch Plains twenty-five years ago yesterday.

$500 Reward offered by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy for an incurable case. 50 cents.

Republicans Gleeful Because the Dutch Took Holland.

[From The New Brunswick Freeholder.]

There are no free-trade cobwebs on Plainfield. At the municipal election, Tuesday, the Republicans elected their candidate for Mayor and a majority of the Alderman.

[From The Railway Advocate.]

All hail Plainfield! Now is the political "Winter of our discontent made glorious Summer", by this queen city of the east. At the charter election, Tuesday, the Republicans swept the city, electing Mayor, all the Councilmen but one, and every candidate for the other city offices. The only official the Democrats elected was a justice-of-the-peace.

Plainfield Again to Hear the Hampton Singers.

A public meeting in the interest of the Christian education of the negro and Indian will be held in the Crescent Avenue church, Monday evening, December 8, at 8 o'clock. Brief original addresses will be made by negro and Indian young men from the Hampton Institute. There will be singing by a Hampton quartette, and addresses by General Armstrong and the Chaplain, Mr. Frissell. The Rev. E. M. Rodman will preside. All are invited.

AN INJURED WIFE.

Mrs. Amanda Schultz Delivers a Curtain Lecture.

[Translated from the German for this paper.]

PATIENCE? I hear his step. He is coming up the stoop. Now he is fumbling around with the key hunting for the keyhole. A nice state of intoxication he is in most probably. I wish I had never been born; but I will not open my mouth. Not one syllable shall he hear. I will treat him with silent contempt.

"Yes, just as I expected. He has laid himself down on the bed without even saying good evening. Well, I have never been insulted as badly as that in my life. And what a smell of tobacco, miserable woman that I am. What's that? You ask what I am going on so about? And I was once fool enough to believe that you loved me. You fooled me, poor, innocent, deluded creature that I was, but you never deceived my dear, good mother. She always warned me against you."

"She sized you up at the start. She always said you were no good. What? You say you are sorry that my mother did not have more influence over me. That is a nice thing to say to your wife, and the mother of your children, but what do you care about my feelings as long as you can go to your club-room and beer saloons with your chum and boon companion, Piependeckel? He is a nice man for a respectable married man to associate with, squandering money on him as if you owned a bank and had no responsibilities whatever.

"You say you only loaned him two dollars. That makes it all the worse. He who is not saving in small things will be wasteful in larger affairs; but I don't believe a word you say. If you say two dollars it must have been twenty at least. If it hadn't been for the little bit of money I got from my mother when I married you we would all be in the poor-house now. How I feel for the poor children. The money that you squander on Piependeckel would have bought them decent clothes, but now they will be hounded out of school, and have the finger of scorn pointed at them by children whose fathers do not lavish their money on Piependeckel. Poor children, I feel so sorry for them, but it is not my fault that their father wastes his substance on vagabonds like Piependeckel. Yes, I say it again, Piependeckel is a vagabond, and those who associate with him are no better. O, yes, Piependeckel can get all the money he wants, but your poor, devoted wife can go around with holes in her worn-out shoes, while Piependeckel lines his stomach with tempting viands at my expense. I will go to my mother.

"I WILL GO TO MY MOTHER."

"What! You advise me not to go until it stops raining as I might get my feet wet in my old shoes. Well, I like that. That corresponds with what my mother told me I had to expect from you when I married you. You don't want me to get sick because then you would have to pay the doctor the money that goes to Piependeckel.

"Just keep on flinging yourself around. Just swear and go on. You will not hear a word of reproach from me; but you must not suppose I don't know why you go to the beer saloon. I've heard about the bar-maid. I know every thing.

"You say I must know a lot. O, yes, you want to change the conversation. You don't care to talk about the bar-maid. You prefer to talk to her. What's that? You say you can't fire her out into the street when you go to the saloon. That's some more impudence; but I'll have you know, Charles Augustus, that you can't bulldoze me, bar-maid or no bar-maid. As the poet Schiller wrote, I am no slave even if I do wear chains. What? You say that Schiller also wrote that some women were hyenas. So you compare me with a snake. What's that? I'm all mixed. You say that I'm thinking of a hydra. Worse and worse. I suppose that young lady who brings you your beer at the saloon is no hydra? She does not try to reform you by kindness and gentle words, as I do. She does not darn your stockings, but then she is no hyena; but don't you flatter yourself I care, for I don't.

"Well, I declare. Just as I was going to get in a word edgeways he begins to snore. Well, I'll wait until to-morrow, then he will have to hear what I've got to say. Now I am a hyena—awhile ago I was his turtle dove. Just wait until to-morrow."

Business Failures for the Week.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Bradstreet's reports 321 failures in the United States during the week, against 233 in the preceding week.

Terrible Neglect.

A little stream of water was seen one day trickling through one of the great Holland dikes which in that country keep the sea, with its level many feet above the ground, from inundating the cities. The small leak remained unheeded, as something too small for notice. The stream gradually enlarged, and finally became a torrent, the dike was undermined, until in a fatal moment the vast embankment gave way and the great flood of waters overwhelmed the city. Careless neglect thus sacrificed thousands of lives.

By a similar heedless neglect myriads of lives are sacrificed every year. Nervous Prostration, Insanity, Paralysis, Heart Failure, Consumption, Fatal Kidney Disease and Premature Death in all cases follow neglect of the first symptoms. The sufferer becomes weak, tired, languid, run down, and work becomes an effort. There is a nervous, restless, depressed feeling, with more or less sleeplessness nights, and a tired waking mornings, with a bad taste in the mouth, dull head and general lack of vim and vigor. The appetite becomes capricious, there may be headaches or pain in side or back, possibly attended by palpitation, numbness, trembling, with strange sensations and weariness of the limbs. Altogether there is a feeling of both nervous and physical exhaustion, with loss of energy, life and ambition.

These symptoms and feelings show that the health is undermined, and that just so surely as they are neglected, the strength and vitality of nerve and body will give way and fatal disease result.

There is but one plain course for the sufferer to pursue, and that is to use immediately that greatest of all health restorers, Dr. Greene's Nervura. This wonderful discovery, which is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, is the most marvelous remedy in the world to restore vigor to the tired brain, strength to the weak and shattered nerves, vitality and health to the run down and exhausted body. For sale by druggists at $1.00 per bottle.

COMPLETELY CURED IN A FEW WEEKS.

I suffered much pain, could not eat or sleep well, and felt miserable. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura, and took it but a few weeks before I was completely cured. I advise all who are complaining to use Dr. Greene's Nervura.

GEORGE W. LUMB,

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Herrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. WORDS OF GRACE AND LIFE.

How full of cheer
Those words of grace and life,
Which lift my soul above the strife
Of inward fear,
With all the outward woes,
Which brings the care my spirit knows:

They call my soul,
When sorrow-worn and press'd:
"Come unto me, I'll give you rest;"
While on the whole
Of life's sad load I see:
"And as thy days thy strength shall be.',

My heart is quick
To take the loving word:
"Thy burden cast upon the Lord;"
And hears, sin-sick,
His gracious voice to me:
"I am the Lord that healeth thee."

I trust the Lord,
With spirit glad and free,
"Who lov'd and gave Himself for me;"
And, from His Word
Unchanging comfort take:
"I'll never leave thee, nor forsake."

And though I grope
In paths I can not see,
The promise stands: "He leadeth me;"
So full of hope,
Whate'er of ill betide,
I sing: "Jehovah will provide."

THE GAMBLER'S LOT.

A Vice That is So Degrading as to Make Savages of Men.

There is a strange infatuation in the vice of gambling. It destroys the judgment and reasoning faculties in a manner and to a degree which, considering the source of infatuation, is remarkably similar to the craze of alcoholic intoxication. Men will return to it again and again with all the certainty that much experience can give that they will lose what they stake. They will steal, lie, pawn their own and their families' clothes for money with which to go into the gambling den. Give the lottery free access to all the people and they would pile up cash receipts larger than those of the general government—and this is the least attractive of all the modes of gambling. It bears no comparison with the excitements of the pool room, race course, and those bets which arise out of conflict and passion. This shows that there is something in this vice which appeals to a deeply ingrained and potent tendency in human nature—that it satisfies some craving which must have had its origin in ages of hereditary growth. The possibility is that it grew out of the experiences of man when he lived by the chase. There he had hazard, chance, conflict and sudden and large gains, alternating with periods of starvation. He was filled with passion, courage, threatened with danger, and, upon success, with the wild joy of triumph. All savages are inveterate gamblers—and all gamblers are savages. The savage traits are all shown in his character—recklessness, greed, cruelty, dishonesty, profligacy. The savage wasted his slain buffalo, and then starved. The gambler immediately wastes his gains to the last penny. Gambling is a relapse into savagery. The race is not so far removed from the period of its savage life that it does not readily return, like one of Darwin's differentiated pigeons to the norm of the species. The path of the gambler is one of the easiest and most accessible avenues of return to a lower stage of moral development. This return is not that of a part of the man. The whole man goes. When it is said of a man that he is a gambler, the idea conveyed is not simply that the man is addicted to gambling. The whole character presents itself to the mind in response to the word. He is thought of as one who has the crude ideas of dress, and of language, and of manners, and of morals, and of personal habits, of the savage. There is a general idea among parents that boys should be guarded gainst the first taste of the pleasure of ambling, but few have made a study of ie source and cause of the danger, and herefore do not know how great it is. But the training necessary to avoid it is not special but general. The mistake is too generally made in supposing that vice is to be guarded against by special education against each form of vice. Vices are legion in forms and numbers. They are like the crawling and floating forms of life in a miasmatic lagoon. The child is to be lifted above the poisonous morass with all that is in it. When he is, by the tone of his moral constitution, above one, he is at an elevation from all. If he be imbued with the principles of honor and morality, and have acquired the habits and tastes of moral tidiness and cleanliness, he will not gamble, nor lie, nor be drunken, nor find associates with bad men and bad women. The nature and tendencies of the various vices are to be shown to him in object lessons. The spectacle of a man dying of the miasma of the lagoon will cover for him all the contents of the lagoon—the mud, slime, odors, poisonous fungi, venomous life—the filth of the air and soil and water. He will not go down into it for one, knowing that he can not take one without taking all. When Christ said that the breaking of one precept of the law was the breaking of all, He expressed a truth which was startling and incredible to those who only knew the ritual of the law. But it is a truth which is literal and which lies at the foundation of morals. Gambling means immorality and criminality of every form.—Interior.

GRANDFATHER'S LOCKS.

His White Hairs Are a Thing of Beauty for All.

Gray hair is a crown of glory. It is beautiful in the church, it is beautiful in the home, it is beautiful at the wedding, it is beautiful at the burial. Waiting for the door of one of my parishioners to open, I stand at the front steps, and, looking through the window, see grandfather with a child on either knee—his face beaming with benedictions. He is almost through with his journey, but he has an interest in those who are starting. The racket is almost too much for the old man's head, but he says nothing. The granddaughter, half-grown, stands behind the chair and runs her hand through his locks. As grandfather stoops down to kiss the children good-night, it is sunset embracing sunrise; it is the spring crocuses around about the edge of the snow-bank; it is the white locks, beautiful in the domestic circle. Grandfather is in church. His comrades are gone. His sons and daughters, though grown to be men and women, will never be any thing but boys and girls to him. He looks around the audience and sees so many strange faces, and he wonders why people don't talk as loud as they used to. As some old hymn comes through his soul, his memory brings back the revival scenes of a half-century. He wonders where all the old people are. His second sight has come, and he rarely uses spectacles. With a cane in both hands, he sits at the end of the pew. Don't crowd him, he will soon pass over the river and see the King in His beauty. Two hearts have been affianced. Against the marriage altar there dashes a wave of orange blossoms. The two families, in a semi-circle, stand about the altar. Father and mother come, of course, and give the first congratulations; but let them not tarry too long, for grandfather is coming up, with trembling step. "God be good to you both, my children!" he says, as he takes their hands. The bridal vail was graceful, but I know something more graceful than that. The vase of flowers on the altar was beautiful, but I know something more beautiful than that. The light that danced in the socket was bright, but I know something brighter than that. It is the long white locks of grandfather at the wedding. Pull the door bell very gently; it is wrapped with the black and the white—the signals of mourning. The throngs have come in. There is weeping in the hall, weeping in the parlor, and weeping in the nursery. The grandchild was a great pet with grandpa; but he says: "I must control myelf for the sake of others;" so he goes all through the house a comforter. He says: "The Lord has taken the child—it is well with it; it is well with it." Grandfather may sometimes have been a little querulous, but it is a great favor to have him now. The song, the prayer, the sermon, may have been comforting, but more comforting than any thing that could be said are the white locks of grandfather.—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

A Plea for Aid.

O Thou whose love is not confined to temples made with hands, enlarge my heart to worship Thee. Help me to see Thee where men see only the world, to hear Thee where men only hear the voices of the crowd. Enlarge the range of my reverence. Teach me to realize the awful solemnity of the things which I call common. Impress me with the truth that the meanest household duty is a service to Thee; that the smallest act of kindness is a praise of Thee; that the tiniest cup of water, though it were given only in a disciple's name, is a worship and a love of Thee. Help me to feel the sense of Thy presence everywhere, that even in the prosaic haunts of men and in the commonplace battles of life I may be able to lift up mine eyes and say: "This is none other than the House of God, this is the gate of Heaven."—Matheson.

OUR DEPENDENCE.

A Fitting Illustration of Duty in a Child's Trustfulness.

A sense of fear is a necessary element in the character of a dependent being. The man who never knows what fear is knows not what dependence is; and the man who knows not what dependence is has no appreciation of the right relations between himself and God. When in the middle of a summer night a child is suddenly awakened by a crash of thunder overhead, and clings with spasmodic grasp to its father, and hides its head close under his shoulder, the child shows its sense of absolute dependence. It is really no more dependent upon its father then than at other times, so far as outward protection from danger is concerned. But its fear and terror have given it a new and quickened sense of its dependent relations to its father. And it is the expression of that dependence that comes with grateful sense to the father, even while he suffers in sympathy with the mental agony of his child. Is it not so in our relations to God? The "Fear not" and the "Be not afraid,"—are they not invitations to show our dependence upon God? It may be right to fear, in order that we may not do wrong in forgetting our dependent relations as earthly children of a Heavenly Father.—S. S Times.

—Christians often afflict their minds with thoughts and anxieties as to how they will meet death when it finally comes. The proper disposal of this question is to trust God for dying grace. The grace will come when we actually need it.—N. Y. Independent.

"GOOD morning," said the affable stranger, entering the office. "I represent the Squeehawken Mutual Life Insurance Company—capital, $6,000,000. I've called to see if you would not take out a policy, and—"

"Sit right down," said the busy merchant, "and we'll talk it over. Excuse me; but will you hand me that bottle labelled 'Cure for Consumption?' It's my time to take it. Thanks! Go on."

"The rates are exceedingly low," continued the agent, "and—for Heaven's sake, sir! Shall I call a doctor?"

"Oh, no, thanks!" feebly moaned the merchant, picking himself up from the floor; for he had fallen out of his chair as if in a faint. "It's only a slight attack of heart disease or paralysis—I don't know just which. I'm quite frequently affected. Now, please go on."

The agent was not quite so enthusiastic, but he went on.

"As I said, the rates are scarcely any thing; and, in your case, we would be pleased to make a discount, so you see—"

"Yes," interrupted the merchant. "Please excuse me again; but won't you hand me that box marked 'Yellow Fever Preventer?' I've just come from where it was prevalent. Thanks! Please resume."

The agent was moving uneasily in his chair, and appeared to hesitate about pressing the matter further. But he made a last rally and said: "I have here, sir, a few statistics, which show the financial standing of our company. It is the firmest and most reli—"

He paused; and a frightened look was on his face, for the merchant was on the floor, writhing and twisting as though in an awful fit. "D-don't stop, sir," he managed to gasp to the terrified agent, who was collecting his papers and making for the door. "I'm just having a little epileptic fit. Qu-quite subject to—to them, you—you know, I'll be all r-right in a min-minute!"

But the agent had fled, leaving a long, blue vacuum in the atmosphere, so fast had he gone.

"Well," chuckled the busy merchant arising and brushing the dirt off his clothes, "it is hard work, and it soils one's clothes; but, by Jove, I knew the scheme would do the business. I shan't be bothered with any more of those agents for some time now. I'll be as cool as a cucumber in a minute, after I've had a drink of that good old—'Consumption Cure.' Ha, ha! HE TOOK IT HARD.

The Straw That Broke the Poor Fellow's Confidence in Himself.

My room in a Virginia hotel was a large one, and the bed stood in the middle of it. As I lay on my right side I faced two windows opening out on a veranda. At one o'clock in the morning a sudden drought of air awoke me up from a sound sleep. It was bright moonlight, and a man had just entered one of the windows. I carefully lifted my hand and clutched the revolver under my pillow, and then I waited to see what the intruder would do. He kept perfectly quiet for five minutes, and then tiptoed over and took up my trousers. There wasn't over thirty cents in change in the pockets. He then tried to open my trunk, but it was locked. He picked up my coat and vest, but I had removed every thing. He stood for awhile as if in doubt, and then started to come to the bed.

"Want any thing?" I asked, as I covered him with the pistol and sat up in bed.

"Oh, shucks!" he exclaimed, as he sat down on a chair.

"Who are you?"

"Nobody nor nothin'! I hain't fitten fur hogs. If I knowed any thing, I'd hev pizened myself last year."

"You seem to take it hard, old fellow."

"Can't help it. Every thing I go into busts up on me. I've busted a sawmill, a sand bank, a yoke of oxen, a tobacco crap, and a saloon, and I was in hopes to get cl'ar of the county when this had to happen. Git up 'n tote me off to jail, and finish me up, fur I hain't fitten to be around alone."

I talked with him awhile, and, finding him down on his luck, I let him out by the window and closed it after him, giving him two dollars to start the world anew on.

"I'll try it, stranger," he said as he climbed out, "but I shall look fur a bust up. When a feller hain't fitten with fittenness, then he hain't, and all the fitten he kin do won't gin him proper fittenness. Good-night."—N. Y Sun.

A Pig Sticker Stuck.

Here's a true story of the Princess Engelichieff, who has been in Chicago, says the Brooklyn Standard. Not long ago that beautiful Russian lady attended a reception given at the Calumet Club. She was regal in old satin and gold jewels and was escorted by one of the handsomest officers of the club.

In the old settlers' room the portrait of Long John Wentworth was pointed out to her. Now, the late Mr. Wentworth was far from spiritueile, and at the first glance the Princess, with a little start, exclaimed, looking at a circle of friends:

"Do show me a pig-sticker! I have heard so much about the Chicago pig-sticker."

The gentleman flushed a little, there was an "audible silence" and her hostess replied:

"Princess, you are on the arm of one."

"Ah, thanks, thanks. Quite complimentary. But why didn't you look at the rest?"

LACK OF CONFIDENCE

Treasury Officials Discuss the Financial Situation.

REALLY NO SCARCITY OF MONEY

Over $100,000,000 Has Been Put Out in Nineteen Months.

Secretary Windom Says It Has Become Absorbed Without Leaving Any Trace of Its Existence—A Belief that It is Being Hoarded in the Vaults of Safe Deposit Companies.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury A. B. Nettleton, when asked what action, if any, would be taken by the Treasury Department in regard to the stringency in the money market, said:

"There is really no scarcity of money, there is only a lack of confidence. No action will be taken by the Department beyond that expressed in the circular issued by the Treasury Department. This provided for a disbursement of $6,000,000, which, together with $20,000,000 to be paid out for pensions this week, is thought to be sufficient to meet the situation and to restore confidence in the different money centers of the country."

Secretary Windom's Views.

WASHINGTON, Dec 8.—Secretary Windom says the Treasury Department is doing all it can to relieve the present unfortunate condition, and it will continue to do so on the same line of policy as that which has been followed up to the present time. He says:

"The money stringency is not the result of a contraction of the currency. There never has been in the history of the government in an era of peace when so much money has been flowing out of the Treasury into the country. During the 19 months that I have been at the head of the Department the amount of money in circulation has been increased over $100,000,000 and during the five months of this fiscal year the increase has been between $75,000,000 and $80,000,000.

"That is an enormous amount of money to put out, but its effect has been scarcely appreciable. It has become absorbed without apparently leaving any trace of its existence. Of course, when business is lively and brisk, as it has been recently in nearly all branches of business, it produced a scarcity of money, but the present condition of affairs cannot be accounted for on that ground. I think that far the greater part of the hundred millions which have been expended by the Treasury in the purchase of bonds you must look in the private tills and in the vaults of the safe deposit companies, and until confidence is restored and those who are now hoarding money can be induced to let go of it, an enormous amount of money would be required to give adequate relief."

BIG LABOR CONVENTION.

The Federation of Labor Holding Their Annual Meeting in Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 8.—There is a large number of delegates here to-day at the convention of the American Federation of Labor.

All the great trade unions are well represented, among which are the following: Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, United Brotherhood of Carpenters, United Mine Workers, International Typographical Union, Cigarmakers' International Union, Boot and Shoe Workers, Painters and Decorators, Iron Molders, Boiler Makers, Lasters and German-American Typographia, besides numerous local and central labor unions.

The convention, which will begin business in earnest to-morrow, although aiming to better the condition of the workingmen, will confine itself to a narrower sphere (dealing merely with hours of labor and wages) than that of the Farmers' Alliance. That is, if the views of the Socialists, who believe that political questions should be as freely discussed in trades unions as questions affecting conditions in shops, are not adopted, which is not very likely. The trade unionists of this country have always opposed the discussion of politics in their meetings as strenuously as they have religious controversy, believing that they would injure their organizations.

The Socialistic organizations claim that such arguments are invented simply to prevent the workers taking united action at the polls. They claim, too—and in this they agree with the Knights of Labor—that very little can be accomplished by wage earners outside the ballot box. These will be their arguments when the Federation discusses this week the question of the admission of Lucien Sanial as a delegate from the Central Federation of New York.

The Socialist delegates are determined to prevent the re-election of Samuel Gompers as president, but Mr. Gompers' friends say he will be re-elected almost unanimously, and that the Socialists will receive a setback that they will long remember.

A Citizens' Alliance.

OCALA, Fla., Dec. 8.—A citizens' alliance was formed here, looking to the establishment of local citizens' alliances in the various cities and large towns of the country. J. D. Holden, of Kansas, was elected president; Ralph Beaumont, of New York, secretary, and S. P. Wild, of Washington, D. C., treasurer, and these three also constitute an executive committee. The headquarters of the alliance will be at Washington and later the executive committee will be increased to include a member from each State.

Juarez's Fighting Holiday.

EL PASO, Tex., Dec. 8.—The bull fights at Juarez, Mexico, were viewed by an immense crowd. While the soldiers were absent from the post attending the fight, the convict soldiers revolted and killed three of the guard. The murderers escaped.

THE ENVOYS SILENT.

They Return to New York, but Will Not Discuss the Irish Situation.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Irish envoys, Messrs. William O'Brien, John Dillon, T. D. Sullivan and T. P. O'Connor, arrived from Chicago last night and drove immediately to the Hoffman House. Mr. Timothy Harrington was not with them and is evidently not of them. He remains in Chicago as the representative of the Parnellite party.

After the envoys had conferred together for some time, Mr. T. P. Gill sent for the reporters. Mr. O'Brien informed them that they would not utter a word touching Irish affairs, further than that contained in the following statement, which they had prepared:

We regret to be obliged to continue to maintain silence on the circumstances of the present moment. We have cabled our approval of the choice of Mr. Justin McCarthy as chairman of the Irish party, and our earnest hope that all our colleagues and our people may see their way to acquiesce in that choice and thus restore the priceless blessing of unity in our party. Whatever additional communication we may find ourselves at liberty to make to the public will be made collectively, and will not be made so long as we can see any possibility of saving the country from a ruinous conflict. We prefer that our views should suffer by our holding our tongues rather than that the possibility of unity should be prejudiced by a single injudicious word at this painful moment.

BOTH LEADERS INVITED.

Mr. Cleveland and Gov. Hill Wanted in Philadelphia on the Same Night.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 8.—There is a likelihood that the rivalry between ex-President Cleveland and Gov. Hill for the Presidential nomination will be signalized in a conspicuous way on "Jackson Day," the 8th of January. The Young Men's Democratic Association, has, as everybody knows, received a letter from Mr. Cleveland accepting their invitation to be present at their annual banquet on the evening of the day mentioned.

The Iroquois Club, the Democratic organization which has its headquarters at 18th street and Fairmount avenue, and of which Hon. George McGowan is president, has sent an invitation to Gov. Hill to be present at their banquet on the same date.

There is every confidence on the part of the members that the Governor will accept. He has all along been a favorite of the Iroquois Club, and his acceptance is sure to give occasion for a big demonstration in his honor. Already it is understood that some of the members re quietly laying plans to organize and turn out in great force to escort him from his hotel to the club rooms.

DELAMATER'S DEBTS.

A Large Amount of Money Secured on the Eve of the Failure.

MEADVILLE, Pa., Dec. 8.—No statement of the Delamater failure will be issued for several days, but it is certain that about one-half the inhabitants of this city are depositors. As far as can be learned the liabilities of the firm will aggregate at least half a million dollars, and it may run up to three-quarters of a million.

It is thought the deposits will not amount to one-half this sum, but Mr. Delamater has a good deal of paper floating about, and in the last week he had succeeded in putting out $50,000, if not more. Two days before the failure about $30,000 were borrowed by the firm in Philadelphia, and it is stated that a round sum was obtained in Pittsburg on the same day. It certainly looks blue for all interested.

Two Ocean Steamers Collide.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The French steamer La Champagne, from this port for Havre, and the British steamer Lisboneuse, from Para to this port, collided two miles east of Sandy Hook at 5:30 a. m. No lives were lost and so far as known no person was injured. Good seamanship and prompt action, combined with what is generally termed "good luck," prevented what would in all probability have been a terrible disaster. As it is, both vessels lie at their docks, one with a big hole in her bow and the other with a bigger hole in her port quarter. Three thousand dollars will repair the damages of both vessels.

Reopening Pittsburg's Cathedral.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 8.—St. Paul's Roman Catholic Cathedral, after being entirely renovated throughout, was formally reopened yesterday with pontifical high mass, Cardinal Gibbons preaching the sermon. Many distinguished clergymen were present, among whom were Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia; Bishop O'Hara, of Scranton; Bishop Mullen, of Erie; Bishop McGovern, of Harrisburg; Bishop Kean, of Wheeling, and Bishop Watterson, of Columbus, Ohio. In the evening Archbishop Ryan delivered a lecture on "Christian Civilization and the Dangers that Threaten It."

Baptist Church Burned.

PASSAIC, N. J., Dec. 8.—Fire in the First Baptist Church last evening entirely destroyed the edifice. The loss is $15,000, partially covered by insurance.

WORK OF CONGRESS

Debate on the Elections Bill to be Pushed Forward.

CHANGING THE SENATE RULES.

A Proposition May be Made to Establish the Previous Question.

Thirty-Three Public Building Bills Awaiting Action in the House—The Fortifications and the Deficiency Appropriations Bill to be Reported—Republican Leaders in Conference.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The Republican Caucus Committee has not determined on an order of business as yet, so nothing definite can be known of the prospects of business in that body, except that the debate on the Federal Elections bill will be pushed forward during the week.

The Elections bill is the unfinished business in the Senate, and as such it comes up each day at 2 o'clock. If the Democratic Senators continue to speak at length in opposition to the bill during this week the Republican Senators will doubtless insist that it be taken up immediately after the morning's business, to the exclusion of calendar business, in order that it may be brought to a vote at as early a day as possible. Senator Blair may make another effort during the week to get the Labor bills before the Senate, but this is extremely doubtful. So much opposition has developed that he does not care to make the issue on the question of consideration.

Should the caucus committee deem it necessary to bring in the proposition to change the rules so as to establish the previous question, the debate on the Elections bill may be diverted into a discussion of this question; but it is altogether unlikely that the committee will act at this time. A great many of the Republican Senators believe that, rather than see the rules changed and so much power put in the hands of the majority, the Democrats will virtually consent to the passage of the Elections bill.

The Committee on Appropriations will get to work on the Pension bill this week, and will doubtless be ready to report it before the week is out.

WORK IN THE HOUSE.

Over Thirty Public Building Bills on the Calendar Awaiting Action.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—There are 33 public building bills on the calendar of the House awaiting final action, and the Commitee on Rules will give the Public Building Committee a day, and possibly two days, this week for the disposition of their measures.

Speaker Reed shut down on public building appropriations last session, but he has agreed to the request for a special day in which to dispose of the bills referred to. It is probable, however, that there will be no more public building legislation this session, excepting perhaps on the last six days of Congress, which are usually given up to the passage of bills under suspension of the rules.

The Commerce Committee has a number of bridge bills to dispose of and a day will probably be granted for their final consideration and passage. During the week it is likely that the Appropriations Committee will report the Fortification and the Deficiency Appropriation bills, and an effort will be made to have these considered if the reports are made early in the week.

Consul Beaioe Convalescent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Dr. Edward Beloe of Philadelphia, United States Consul to Amoy, China, who has been very ill for several weeks in London, is now convalescent and his speedy recovery seems certain. The surgeons have come to the conclusion that the amputation of his foot, which at one time had been decided upon, will not be necessary.

Members of the Next House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Clerk McPherson of the House of Representatives has just had printed the unofficial list of Members-elect of the next House, showing 88 Republicans, 234 Democrats and eight Farmers' Alliance. One district (28th New York) is set down as uncertain, and one (Second Rhode Island) is marked vacant.

Indicted for Murder.

BOSTON, Dec. 8.—The Grand Jury for Suffolk county returned indictment against Daniel Wilson for the murder of his wife at their home on Leverett street on November 18 last, and against Benj F. Tayler for the murder of Wilder Hutchins, the manager of a stable on Fleet street, November 15.

The Newark's Trial Trip.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Chief Constructor Wilson has been informed unofficially that the cruiser Newark will start on her official trip from Philadelphia to-morrow

CONVENTION OF MINERS.

It is Feared that a Gigantic Strike May be Ordered.

ALTOONA, Pa., Dec. 8.—There is no disguising the fact that there is great excitement over the call for a miners' convention in this city on Wednesday, issued by James White, President of the Second District of the United Mine Workers of America. This district comprises the counties of Centre, Clearfield, Cambria, Blair, Huntington, Bedford and Jefferson, and it is feared that the result of the convention will be one of the largest strikes ever known among the miners.

In his call, President White says it will be one of the most important labor conventions ever held in Central Pennsylvania. One of the matters to be considered is the proposed establishment of a fund out of which a check weighman for every mine may be paid. At present there are many mines employing so few men that they are unable to support a check weighman, and the object is to secure uniform regulations for all. This proposition is expected to meet with opposition from the operators.

The call asks that every delegate come fully instructed. It orders special sessions of local assemblies and the compelling of every member to attend and vote, with the resolve that if a strike is ordered they will remain out for months, if necessary. The best men must be sent, and they must bring all their grievances with them.

Twenty thousand men will be affected by this convention, and if a strike is ordered it will seriously interfere with ocean steamships, as most of the seaboard coal is mined in this district.

DROPPED DEAD IN CHURCH.

A Clergyman and a Blacksmith Expire Suddenly During Services.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Rev. Lester N. Donnan dropped dead in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, while attending the services last evening. Rev. Chas. H. Hall, the pastor, who was officiating, saw Mr. Donnan fall and hastened to his aid, but found him dead. Mr. Hall then re-entered the pulpit and asked the congregation to kneel while he read the Episcopal prayer for those stricken with sudden death. Mr. Donnan was born in Hamlin, Conn., in 1829, and was graduated from Yale College in 1854.

William Barry, a blacksmith, residing at 367 Hoyt street, Brooklyn, attended the Warren Street M. E. Church last evening and related his "experience." He had just finished and joined in singing a hymn, when he dropped dead upon the floor.

HE MARRIED ANOTHER.

A Prominent Farmer Arrested for Breach of Promise.

EGG HARBOR, N. J., Dec. 8.—Quite a sensation was caused here yesterday when it became known that Frank Schwickerath, a prominent farmer of Pomona, had been sued by Miss Jennie McCullen for breach of promise of marriage. The warrant was issued on Saturday by Justice Breeder, and City Marshal George Senft visited the residence of Mr. Schierlinger, where the accused was about to preside at a grand reception in honor of his wedding to Miss Pauline Schierlinger last Saturday.

He was handed the warrant and at once accompanied the officer to the 'Squire's office, where he was placed under $500 bail for his appearance to-day. Schwickerath denies the charge made by the lady, whom he had courted for 12 years.

Fought 91 Rounds.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 8.—Before the South Omaha Club, Tommy White, of Chicago, and Dan Daly, of Bangor, Me., fought five hours and 55 minutes without reaching a decision. White had the best of Daly in height and weight, but Daly was the cleverer of the pair. In the first few rounds White tried for a knock-out and landed several times heavily. In the 20th round Daly closed White's left eye and in the 34th the Chicago man's mouth was smashed so hard that it bled to the end. In rounds 37 to 42 White again tried hard for a knock-out, but Daly avoided him. Until the 71st round it was a walk-around, when Daly did a little more fighting. White was badly winded, but still fought well. In the 91st round both men were too tired to proceed and the fight was declared a draw.

Terrible Death for Two Men.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Two employes of the Ontario Paper Mill, two miles from this city, met a terrible death. They were lowering the floor gates at the flume, when a long lever, with which they were working, slipped from their grip, swung around with great force, striking the men and inflicting injuries from which they died soon after. Their names are Toper and McLaughlin. The former was married and leaves a wife and five children.

Tragedy in a Mission Church.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Edwin Hallback, a lithographer, while drunk last evening, went into the Florence Mission Church in Bleeker street. He became noisy and George Cowles endeavored to put him out, whereupon Hallback drew a knife and stabbed Cowles in the abdomen, inflicting a severe though not fatal wound.

Life Imprisonment for Mamie Starr.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—The jury in the case of Mamie Starr, charged with murdering Mr. and Mrs. Newland by placing poison in their food, returned a verdict of guilty of murder and fixed her punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for the period of her natural life.

Suffocated by Gas.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Aaron Oakley, a veteran of the late war, aged 60, was found dead in bed during the morning and his wife was lying beside him dying. Coal gas which had escaped all night from a stove in an adjoining room was the cause.

BURNED IN EFFIGY

Ireland in a Blaze of Excitement Over the Bolt.

HEALY AND OTHERS DENOUNCED

Many Impromptu Meetings Held in Favor of Parnell.

The Home Rule Leader Refuses to Recognize the Authority of Seceders to Depose Him—Clerical Interference Resented by Irishmen—London Intensely Excited—A Tory-Irish Alliance.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The Parnellites and their opponents are resting on their arms after the exciting events of Saturday. Mr. Parnell is secluding himself from all but intimate friends.

The Parnellites, it is understood, are anxious to force an appeal to the country as soon as possible, and claim that their antagonists are afraid to submit the issue of their conduct to the people.

It is stated on the alleged authority of Timothy Healy, that the party headed by Justin McCarthy will continue to keep their seats, without any resignations, upholding the cause of home rule and waiting for time to bring about a sober and deliberate judgment in the now excited Irish constituencies.

Mr. Barry said that Mr. Parnell's cause would lose, instead of gaining, with the progress of time, and that the next general election would see him deader than Isaac Butt.

Parnell, on the other hand, is said to feel entirely confident, and to be already selecting successors for those who have deserted him. He is in ample funds, as since the division in the party several American organizations have forwarded money directly to him, instead of to the treasurers formerly appointed. A large proportion of the Irish members have been in receipt of stipends for their services in Parliament, and it is difficult to see how those disconnected from Parnell are to receive their salaries hereafter, as the common fund is locked up by the embroglio. One of the first tasks of the McCarthyites will necessarily be to devise some scheme af raising a fund independent of that heretofore relied upon for parliamentary expenses, and it is not likely that either faction will obtain much money from the Irish people until the question of supremacy is settled.

MEETINGS FOR PARNELL.

Ireland Ablaze With Excitement and Healy and Others Burned in Effigy.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Ireland was ablaze with excitement yesterday. Many public meetings were held and the split in the party was the universal topic of conversation and discussion everywhere.

The mass meeting in Phœnix Park, Dublin, was quite turbulent. It was distinctly a Parnell meeting, and Healy and other opponents of that leader were burned in effigy. Judging from the bitterness of the denunciations against them, they would have been burned in person had they been present.

As far as returns have been received most of the impromptu meetings hastily convened were in Parnell's favor, and in more places than Dublin the chief enemies of Parnell were figuratively destroyed by fire.

The Bishops' manifesto condemning Parnell was read in all the churches at mass, and the priests added exhortations to the people to obey the spirit of that document in their political actions. The people did not seem to take kindly to this clerical interference in some cases, and at Mitchelstown and Kilkenny the Nationalists met after service and adopted resolutions in support of Parnell. In Armagh the priests propose to stump the country against Parnell. It is believed, however, that on the whole the church will confine itself to moral suasion.

The excitement in London political circles is intense, and to-day's action of the Irish factions in Parliament is awaited with the greatest interest, particularly as there are rumors of startling developments in the way of a Tory-Irish alliance.

Parnell Still Claims Leadership.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Mr. Parnell refuses to recognize the vote whereby he has been deposed from the leadership of the Irish party. He holds that those who passed the vote had ceased to belong to the Irish Parliamentary party, and now intends to wage a strenuous war, with the object of demonstrating that the authority to speak in the name of the Irish people no longer rests with them. He will proceed to Ireland during the Christmas recess and elicit public opinion.

Queen Emma at Work.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Queen Emma is taking hold with energy of her duties as regent of Holland. She called for a full history of the Atcheen war, its causes and progress, and it is understood that she contemplates bringing to a close that fruitless struggle, which has lasted since 1873 and cost Holland over 60,000 lives and nearly £30,000,000. The question of the exaction of import duties by the Congo Free State is also likely to be brought to a prompt conclusion.

Anti-Parnellites Short of Funds.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Many of the McCarthy party are much embarrassed for funds, as they have relied on the quarterly cheques for £50 which are just coming due. As these cheques will probably be withheld by Mr. Parnell, it is likely that the needy members will be paid temporarily from the fund raised Saturday night for the establishment of a paper.

O'Brien and Dillon's Advice.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The anti-Parnellites are discussing the advisability of having Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon return via France, in which country a convention could be held for the purpose of obtaining their advice before they submitted to re-arrest and imprisonment.

BRITISH POACHERS.

Their Work in Behring Sea Strongly Condemned by a Government Employe.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Mr. Sheldon Jackson, who was last spring appointed United States General Agent of Education for Alaska, having completed his labors, has returned to Washington and reported to Secretary Noble for assignment in the Bureau of Education.

Mr. Jackson was on the revenue cutter, Bear, four months, which enabled him to study the fur seal fisheries. He is very emphatic in his denunciation of the illegal actions of the British poachers and the "bulldozing" tactics of the British government against the United States.

"If the government of the United States," he says, "does not immediately take aggressive measures to prevent the wanton destruction of fur seals, this industry will in a year or so be totally exterminated. Last year the North American Fish Company executed a contract with the United States, agreeing to pay equivalently $1,000,000 annually for the privilege of taking 60,000 skins, but were unable to take more than 21,000; while the British poachers, swarming the waters in open defiance of our revenue cutters and the laws of the United States, illegally and indiscriminately captured more than 50,000 seals. This number, however, represents only about one-fifth of their actual plunder, for while in an endeavor to capture them under water the poachers killed more than 200,000 seals which they could not bring to the surface.

"The officers of the Bear, very often without orders or authority, were powerless to do anything to prevent the destruction of the seals, and the poachers, in sheer defiance of their presence, continued the destructive work as long as there was anything in sight, until there are very few live seals remaining. They indiscriminately killed in or out of the catching season, and female seals were treated with no more consideration than the males. Young seals, scarcely able to take care of themselves in the water, were maliciously killed. They were not taken from the rookeries by the poachers, as demanded by the contract of a legitimate company paying enormously for the privilege, but were killed by carbines directed by Indians in canoes, under the protection of English cruisers.

"It is absolutely necessary that the United States should send her navy into those waters to seize every English poaching vessel found within the three-mile limit illegally killing off the remaining seals.

"I noticed that Secretary Blaine, in the recent correspondence with Lord Salisbury on the fur seal dispute, called his attention to the fact that the English government exercised an exclusive monopoly of the pearl industry on the Pearl Islands, off the coast of India. How long do you suppose they would allow the United States, or any other intruder, to reap the benefits of that industry? Only long enough," he concluded, "for them to dispatch their big cruisers to those waters and seize and hold for damages every poaching vessel found reaping the benefits of their monopoly."

THE GIRL WAS MURDERED.

Important Developments in the Case of Emma Pfitzenmeyer.

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 8.—Important developments in the case of Emma Pfitzenmeyer, who was found in her sister's house with her throat cut, have come to light. The body of the unfortunate girl was not buried as supposed, but instead was merely lowered into the grave in the presence of the assembled mourners.

After they had left the coffin was lifted out of the open grave and taken to the chapel, where Dr. Formad, the well known Philadelphia expert, made a second post mortem examination. He discovered a wound on the head that had been overlooked and demonstrated to those assembled that any one of the wounds in the girl's throat would have caused her death, thus clearly establishing the fact that she was murdered. The body was then consigned to the grave.

Several persons have made affidavits that they heard struggles and cries within the Schmidt household on the fatal night. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt have all along maintained that they heard no sounds.

The theory of those working on the case is that Emma was murdered by Mrs. Schmidt after a jealous quarrel. It is thought that the Schmidts will be taken into custody to-day. The inquest will be held in a day or two.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Dr. J. L. Stewart, of Erie, Pa., is dead, aged 66 years. He had a national reputation as a surgeon.

Mrs. E. Coyle and Mrs. J. McCloskey, of Ashland, Pa., tried to light a fire with kerosene. The usual result followed. Both are fatally injured.

Nine persons have disappeared from the neighborhood of Reading, Pa., during the past five weeks, and is thought they have been foully dealt with.

—The handsome new wagon that attracted so much attention on the streets to-day, and which one can distinguish at a long distance as the delivery wagon of H. W. Marshall, of the American Steam Laundry, East Front street, was strongly built by Jas. P. Homan, artistically painted by Hewitt, and tastefully lettered by Vroom.

—At an interesting service held at Temperance Hall Sabbath afternoon, under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union, a very able address was delivered by Mrs. Cox of Plainfield, who is a great temperance worker. Mrs. Cox spoke enthusiastically of the work and the promising outlook. The audience was more than pleased with her remarks.—New Brunswick Times.

—The book-keeping and penmanship class will meet as usual at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night. The Association has been fortunate in securing the services of Messrs. Ezra Loomis and G. Q. —Attorney General Stockton, in an application to restrain the New Jersey Terminal Railway Company from taking possession of Oyster Island, lying eastward of the Jersey shore in New York Bay, says that the Government of New Jersey is just two days older than the Federal Government. On July 2, 1776, he says, the people of the Province of New Jersey met in convention at Burlington and declared themselves free and independent.

—Going to bed is getting to be more and more of a luxury for the rich. What with patent head rests, book loops, electric-light holders and many other comfortable complications, the would-be sleeper must go through a regular drill previous to enjoying them all. But after all the sweetest rest comes to a poor man with a good digestion and after a hard day's work. His bed may be a blanket over a board, but his sleep is sound, and he arises refreshed for the duties of the new day.

—The services held Sundays under the direction of the W. C. T. U. are wide awake with music. Singers are invited to come and help. The Bible says much about singing. "Soul music will attract sinners like clover heads draw bees," says Mr. Yatman. "Temple Themes" are used at the morning meeting. Frederick Moon led yesterday's 4 o'clock service, and among other helpful words of encouragement told of the gospel temperance work in Flemington, which, now that it had Christ as a corner-stone, was a power for good in that community.

—Gunners who love to track rabbits in the snow thought they were going to have some great fun when they woke up last Wednesday morning and saw the earth shrouded in white. The change into rain, however, blasted their hopes. In New Jersey it seldom happens during the short time that the law allows rabbit shooting that sufficient snow falls to give the hunters a chance to track them. When such a time does come the farmers' boys shoulder their guns and start for the woods. The deeper the snow the better the chance of getting a number of rabbits, for when the snow is only light the multitude of tracks makes trail-following very hard. A rabbit will not wander far in deep snow, and when once his footprints are found he will soon be traced to his cosy little home in a warm clump of grass or under the more protected covering of a brush heap.

THE FEDERATION OF PROTESTANTISM.

Interesting Argument Awakened by a Plainfield Pastor's Sermon.

The New York Sun, in an editorial in Sunday's issue, has the following to say of the "Protestant Effort to Get Together," as suggested by the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of this city, in a recent sermon:

Last Monday a large number of clergymen, Presbyterians mostly, lunched at an up-town restaurant and discussed the subject of "The Church of the Future." That, at least, was the theme as laid down in the programme of debate, though the real subject was the best means for the extension of Protestantism.

The necessity for some sort of a union among the different Protestant denominations was insisted upon by Archdeacon Smith, an Episcopal clergyman who took part in the debate. He did not argue for organic union, but for a system of practical co-operation, more especially in districts of this town where there is a deficiency of Protestant churches. At a dinner of Presbyterians held the same evening at the Metropolitan Opera House, William E. Dodge spoke of the 600,000 or 700,000 people in New York who are practically outside of the reach of the churches, whose increasing numbers, in his opinion, constitute a serious danger to the town which united Protestant effort must seek to avert. If his estimate is correct, two-fifths of the population are given over to infidelity and religious indifference.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis, a Seventh-Day Baptist preacher at Plainfield, New Jersey, discussed the same general subject in his Thanksgiving Day sermon. He showed by religious statistics, compiled by one of the editors of the Independent, that there are more than one hundred different varieties of Protestants in this country. He argued that such division interferes seriously with the progress of Protestantism as opposed to Roman Catholicism, a solid force "moving unitedly, concertedly onward with a power against which human forces are well-nigh irrestible." The great need, he contended, is a confederation of all the different Protestant families.

It will be seen, therefore, that all these preachers were in substantial agreement. Their common appeal to Protestants was to get together as different corps of a consolidated army.

Yet the very partisanship and competition which division engenders tend to increase the agressive energy of Protestantism. Each organization strains itself to do its utmost, for each believes that it possesses the fullest measure of spiritual truth. The multitude of divisions, also, provide a home for every phase of belief under the Protestant theory of the freedom of conscience and the right of private interpretation of Scripture. "I will wear no harness which men would thrust on me under threat of ostracism," exclaimed the Rev. Dr. Behrends at the Presbyterian luncheon. That is the distinctively Protestant sentiment, and it makes impossible anything resembling the unity of Catholicism. If a Protestant cannot find anybody to agree with him in his interpretation of Scripture, he makes a church of his own. The basis of Protestantism is its denial of any other authority over the conscience than the Word of God itself, as read by each individual. "Whatsoever is not read therein," the Thirty-nine Articles of the Episcopal church lay down, "nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man, that it should be believed as an article of the Faith, or be thought requisite or necessary to salvation."

Accordingly, the divisions of Protestantism must always be many. It cannot have a common belief, so various is the constitution of men's minds. The stronger the faith of the period the more rigid must be the lines of separation. Only when Protestants lose the fervor of conviction and fall into doctrinal indifference, substituting ethics and the spirit of humanity for religion, can they be brought into any union which disregards the differences that originally separated them. The disposition to compromise for the sake of consolidation is a sign of decline in the vital faith which gives religion its true impulse.

We do not see how even the confederation advised is possible, if sincerity of belief remains in each of the divisions. They might combine for certain charitable and philanthropic purposes, but how can they get together for the propagation of religion when they differ so essentially as to what true religion is? The divisions would not exist if each and every party did not believe that obedience to the law of God makes its independence necessary. When such belief dies out it is usually because the spark of all vital faith is quenched. Are Baptists going to enter into a confederation to assist in the propagation of pedobaptism, Arminians to foster the growth of Calvinism? Will Episcopalians assist in the building up of churches which reject the apostolic succession? Yet if confederation means anything, it means that they must all turn in to help one another while preserving their own individuality. They must not enter into each other's fields, but rejoice at the success of each as a gain to the common cause.

That is not possible under the theory of Protestantism and consistent with sincerity of conviction in its various divisions. They can only exercise charity toward each other, recognizing that the Protestant demand for freedom of conscience makes essential the existence of many religious parties in order that no individual may be restrained in his opinions. Protestantism implies division by rejecting church authority and substituting individual judgment. The principle upon which it rests produces diversity as surely as the opposing theory of church authority compels the unity of Roman Catholicism. If men form their own opinions as to what religion requires, they are bound to differ. They can only agree when they agree to let the church make their faith for them as the divinely inspired authority over their conscience.

Good Speeches from Plainfield Men.

The speakers in Reform Hall last evening were Messrs. Sampson and Kissam, both of whom based remarks on Bible texts and in a very instructive and interesting manner followed out their selected themes. They showed the awful ravages of strong drink, and detailed several instances, coming within their own personal knowledge, of men totally ruined and families made unhappy because of the curse of liquor. The dangers of temptation were vividly portrayed, and the necessity of avoiding them justly urged. Both gentlemen were listened to with profound attention.

President Harper presided, Mr. Sampson read the Scripture lesson, and Mr. Kissam offered prayer. The music was under charge of Mr. Vanderbeek as leader, with Miss Doremus as accompanist.

CHILLS LURKING IN OVERCOATS.

ome Reasons Why a Light Coat is Better Than a Heavy One.

At a recent professional meeting of physicians in this section several of the medical men became involved in a discussion of overcoats. The substance of their verdict, in which all agreed, was that the use of thick and heavy overcoats is indirectly accountable for the very chills that they are intended to prevent.

This fact should be borne constantly in mind by the man of sedentary habits. He emerges from a warm breakfast room clad in his ordinary Winter garments, with perhaps thick woolen underwear, and a heavy ulster on top. After walking a few blocks he finds that the sense of comfortable warmth with which he started is more than maintained. He gets warmer. Arrived at his office, he throws off his overcoat, though the air of the room may be nearly as cold as that outside, not to mention the innumerable draughts. During the day he runs out to luncheon or to a neighboring office without his overcoat. The result is that somehow, between morning and night, he becomes chilled.

No doubt he would run as great a risk if, lightly clad, he were to face the rigor of a Wintry day, but in this case exercise and habit might do much to develop the power of endurance, and there would at all events be less danger of sudden cold acting upon a freely-perspiring surface. Woolen underclothing, it was argued, represents a state of healthy comfort intermediate between these extremes, and more resistant to chill than either.

In the case of newspaper men the physicians made an exception. Theirs is a life associated with night air and unusual severity of weather, and in such cases they are compelled to add some form of overcoat to the ordinary amount of clothing. "But"—said one of the party—"I'd rather see the ordinary business man, especially if young, clad warmly next the skin, and in fairly robust condition wear either a very light topcoat or none at all."

The Divorce Proceedings are Off.

The telegraph played a merry game with a Plainfield commuter, the other day. He has been in the habit of using the wire to convey all sorts of messages relating to family matters, and has labored under the delusion that everybody in the telegraph company's employ could read his handwriting with ease and accuracy. When he reached his New York office on the day in question he got a piece of news that sent him to the nearest telegraph office in a hurry. He wanted his wife to know the glad tidings at once. There had been a certain joyful event in the household of a cousin who dwells up the Hudson, and so the good man wrote out his message with a light heart: "Am going to K's. Pretty girl. Won't be home till late to-night." He made his trip up the river, saw the new arrival, had a pleasant, leisurely day, and did n't reach his Plainfield domicile until midnight. Much to his surprise, his wife was sitting up for him. So was her mother, who was paying them a visit. Both ladies were icy cold in their demeanor. They spoke rather viciously of double-faced, false-hearted husbands, and of what happened to such evil persons. The man was thunderstruck. It was all a mystery to him. "Convicted by his own telegram"—said his judges. The man was still more perplexed. He wanted wanted to see the dispatch. It was laid before him, and he read: "Am going to kiss pretty girl. Won't be home till late to-night." The man has since then succeeded in convincing his womankind that it was all a telegraph's blunder, but when he sends a message home now he prints it out in capital letters.

Can't Fool Uncle Hiram More Than Once.

Aaron H. Woodhull's charming New England comedy, "Uncle Hiram," which is to be presented at Stillman Music Hall Thursday evening, Dec. 11, is spoken of as a genuine play with a plot of considerable strength and interest, and not simply a specialty performance like many others in which a simple countryman plays the leading part. "Uncle Hiram" is an incident in the play—an important incident, it is true, but still an incident—while in most plays of this character the star is the all-important thing and the piece itself is the incident. Aaron Woodhull's "Hiram Homespun" is a most amusing creation, but differs widely in appearance, dress and action from "Uncle Josh Whitcomb," "Alvin Joslin," "Jed Prouty," and others of the same general class. "Uncle Hiram" is green in city ways, but learns rapidly, and is really sharp and shrewd naturally. He can be fooled once, but not twice. Mr. Woodhull's work is surrounded by a competent company in the main. Praiseworthy work is done by Davenport Bebus, W. C. Talbott, J. J. Sheridan, Frank Small, J. J. Swartwood, James Huston and Miss Griswold. Several fine specialities are introduced, the "lightning drill" being the most notable. The remarkably fine orchestra in evening dress is a strong feature of the company.

—Santa Claus will have his headquarters this year at the store of Joseph M. Harper, 75 Park avenue, third do or south of Fourth street. He will have presents suitable for all ages, and at prices that will compare favorably with New York. Mr. Harper is prepared to supply Sunday schools with candy boxes and Christmas tree decorations. See his advertisement in another column.

Modern Dresses Bother Photographers.

The present mode of dressmaking is causing a great deal of bother to photographers. One of the most skillful members of that craft in this city said a day or two ago: "It is almost impossible to take a good picture of a lady who wears a dress with sleeves puffed and elevated at the shoulders. Some of those 'shoulder humps' are so high that they cause a shadow to be cast over the wearer's neck and the lower part of the face. I have had several instances of spoiled pictures on this account. At first the failure of the photograph to bring out the sitter's chin and neck in strong relief puzzled me. I studied the matter for several days, and tried experiments with my patrons until I became satisfied that the trouble was caused by the high-topped sleeves. I demonstrated that such was the fact to one lady by drawing a scarf closely about her shoulders. Without the scarf all attempts to get a good picture of her failed. With the scarf I succeeded the first time in getting a picture that revealed clearly the outlines of her face and neck."

A State Board of Tax Equalization Needed.

At a recent meeting of the State Tax Commission one assessor complained that no one paid either poll or dog tax. Another said his experience leads him to think that honest people and the poorer classes pay their taxes, while the richer and those who are dishonest invent all sorts of schemes to evade them. He favors deduction for debts of record only, and the establishment of a State Board to equalize assessments of the cities and townships.

During the taking of testimony, Attorney General Stockton observed that a State Board of Assessors would have trouble in securing a standard that would operate in all the counties alike. Counselor Abbett stated that the assessment on real estate in Ocean county he found to be 50 per cent.; in Monmouth, 95 per cent.; in Mercer, 60 per cent., and it could never be equalized except by a State Board.

Important to Fishermen.

The case of Schanck vs. Ely, decided in the Court of Errors and Appeals on Tuesday, Nov. 18, is important to all lovers of sport with the rod and line. Ely went to Schanck's millpond, at Hightstown, and placed his nets for fish. Schanck brought proceedings against him for trespass, before a Justice of the Peace, and he was fined $50. He went to the pond a second time, and this time he was fined $100. The third time he repeated the act he had to pay $150. The judgment of the Justice was appealed to the Mercer Court and was there affirmed. The Supreme Court did the same and the Court of Errors follows suit. The effect is that any one who pleases cannot go into a private millpond and fish with a net, thus clearing the waters of all fish.

"Garry" Still, Swindler, Caught at Last.

A dispatch from Baltimore states that Garrison W. Still, alias William F. Richards, who represented himself as the traveling salesman of B. Solomon & Sons, of New York, upholsterers and dealers in lace curtains, has been committed for trial on the charge of attempting to swindle Crichton Malcolm. This is the same fellow who visited Plainfield some months ago, sported about town in good clothes, flourished an abundance of money which subsequently turned out to have been borrowed, swindled several local merchants, tried to make a bigger haul through a number of forged checks, was detected, and disappeared. Local merchants will be glad to know that he is caught at last.

Jack Jenks was a victim of liver complaint, His strength was exhausted, his pulse had grown faint,
He had ulcers and tumors and all sorts of humors,
And the ills that he suffered would weary a saint.
Folks said that Jack Jenks would never be cured,
But Jack said he would—that they might be assured.
Pierce's G. M. Discovery wrought his recovery,
After all the poor fellow so long had endured.

Such a multitude of serious, distressing and often fatal maladies spring from a disordered liver, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery creates a healthy action of this important organ, and the ills that have their origin there can be cured by its prompt and faithful use. All druggists.

FIRESIDE FRAGMENTS.

—Apple Jelly: Use fair, sour apples. Slice them, skins, seeds and all, and simmer with one-half a cup of water till well cooked and soft. Then strain through a cloth, add a pound of sugar to a pint of juice, boil a few moments, skimming till clear; then pour into glasses, and cover when cold.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

—Half-pint jelly-glasses are the best. They should be rinsed in scalding water and dried, then stood up side by side in some large pan, and filled with the jelly to the brim. Allow them to stand a day or two in some sunny window, cover them, if possible, with bits of glass, and as the moisture gathers on the underside wipe it carefully away.

—White Cake: One pint of butter, well creamed, to this add two pints of sugar, one pint of corn starch dissolved in one pint of sweet milk (can use flour instead of starch); three pints of flour, measured after being sifted three times; two heaping teaspoons of baking powder, well mashed, mixed in the flour; whites of twelve eggs, well beaten.—Detroit Free Press.

—Chicken Patties: Chop the chicken meat, free from gristle, season with salt, pepper and a little celery or sage, place a little of the meat on pieces of puff paste, press the edges together, making small turnovers, place them in a shallow pan, and bake a nice brown, serve with drawn butter or a gravy made from the liquor in which the chicken was cooked.—Boston Herald.

—Lamp-burners, to give good light, should be cleaned at least once a month. To clean them, take a piece of soda the size of a walnut, put it into a quart of soft water, place the lamp-burner in it—an old tomato-can is good enough—and set it on the stove; after boiling for five minutes, remove the burner, and, when put back on the lamp, it will be as good as new.

—Fish for an Invalid: One small fish, a small sprig of parsely, one tablespoon of milk. Get a nice fresh, white fish; clean it well, put it into a small jelly jar with the milk and parsely well washed, cover very closely with paper, and set it in a saucepan of boiling water at the side of the fire for half an hour. This is a very light way of cooking fish for an invalid. It can be skinned and boned, if preferred.—N. Y. Observer.

—Chocolate-Cocoanut Cake: For the cake, one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half a cup of milk, two eggs, one and one-half cups of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in jelly-tins. This will make two thick layers. For the filling, melt one-third of a cake of chocolate, add half a cup of sugar, three tablespoonsful of milk and a half-teaspoonful of vanilla. Mix these ingredients until smooth, then add one-half a grated cocoanut to the chocolate, and spread between the layers and on top.—Boston Budget.

—Pressed Chicken: Use plump, young chickens; allow one and a half pints of cold, salted water for each chicken, let come to a boil gradually, then boil fast until the meat will fall from the bones, and the liquor is reduced to less than half; while boiling the liquor should be skimmed several times. Chop the meat fine, first removing the bones and skin; strain the liquor through a cloth; season the meat liquor well with salt and pepper (chopped celery or celery salt may be used if the flavor is liked) and press firmly into an earthen mold; set away to cool with a heavy plate over it. —Housekeeper.

BEES AND ANTS.

Their Traveling Instinct One of the Marvels of Natural History.

How insects, especially bees and ants, find their way back home is one of the marvels of natural history. "My wife keeps bees," says a Missouri farmer, "and my little boy has a taste for entomology, and is always making experiments of one kind or another with them and other insects. He has been trying to find out how far away a bee can be taken and not get lost, but has not yet succeeded. I live in the country, fourteen miles from the court house, and during the summer that boy has been in town with me a dozen times, and on each occasion he brought some bees along in a little tin box. He colored their wings with violet ink, so that he would know the insects again, and let them go in the heart of the city. The first time he did it he released six bees at the Biddle Street Market, and I believe they got home before we did, because they were all on hand attending to business the next morning, just as though they took a fourteen-mile journey every day. Occasionally a bee fails to come back, but in nearly every instance they return in a few hours. Once he let five, whose wings had been colored red, out of their box at six o'clock in the morning, on the corner of Fourth and Biddle, while his little sister watched the hive at home. One arrived, tired almost to death, and dropped at the door of the hive a little before two, and three came before five in the evening, all apparently much fatigued. His experiments with a nest of large black ants have been equally satisfactory, for some marked ants have found their way home after being released more than a mile distant from the hollow tree in which they lived. How they do it is a question, but they generally do, and so it is likely the travels of both ants and bees are much wider than is generally supposed."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Suits for Little Boys.

The first colored dress which is put on little boys after they are a year old is of gingham, and is made with a pleated waist with rows of insertion between the pleats and a skirt laid in side pleats. When the boy is about three or four years old, according to his size, he is considered large enough to put in a suit with the kilt separated from the waist. These suits are made of Scotch plaid and plain wools of light weight, white pique and white flannel. The skirt is laid in flat, broad kilts, and if of wool is ornamented with a decoration of squares of braid. The jacket is square and short, to show the blouse vest of white linen or white or yellow china silk entirely around. Short white socks, which display the bare legs, are worn with dark tan-colored boots.—Good Housekeeping.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

A SELFISH MAN.

A Pleasant Little Comedy That Ended Happily.

Scene—A pleasant drawing-room. Gertie, seated in a cosy arm-chair. Cecil, in devoted attitude, on ottoman near her.

Gertie—But do you love me unselfishly, just for myself alone—my soul, my spirit?

Cecil (to the ceiling)—Oh, she asks me this after my long worship—my utter—

Gertie—Ah, man's love is nearly always selfish. It's so different from a woman's sacrificing, enduring affection.

Cecil—Only let me prove to you in some way how dearly, how sincerely I love—

Gertie (suddenly decisive)—I will. Cecil, I consent to marry you—

Cecil (breathlessly)—Oh, Ger—

Gertie—Yes, gladly, delightedly—for I am very fond of you—on one condition. You know how I love music.

Cecil (faintly)—Ye-es.

Gertie—That you will send me abroad for three years to study—to perfect my voice?

Cecil (bewildered)—Send you?

Gertie—It has been my dream—my ambition. I know I have a voice, and, Cecil, you know that I have.

Cecil (with deep feeling)—Indeed, I do.

Gertie—I have no right to ignore this gift. It is my duty to cultivate it, and if I should become a famous prima donna, Cecil, think how you would feel.

Cecil (forlornly)—I can just imagine it, dear.

Gertie—But I should need three years of earnest study. This is the middle of September. I could be ready to start by the first of October.

Cecil (grasping the situation)—Then you mean that I shall marry you and send you abroad for three years alone?

Gertie—Or come with me, if you like. (Magnanimously.) I am perfectly willing you should come with me.

Cecil—My dear girl! Leave my business for three years? I could not leave it for three months, much less—

Gertie (with gracious concession)—Well, I would come over every year or so to see you.

Cecil—Every year or so? But, Gertie, darling, I should like to have my wife beside me in my house—not at the other side of the world.

Gertie (sadly)—How selfish, how very, very like a man!

Cecil (calmly)—It is—rather.

Gertie—And knowing my aspirations, would you let me sacrifice this dear dream of my heart, just to be with you, to make you happy? And you call that love? That poor and grasping selfishness, love?

Cecil (reasoningly)—Wouldn't it strike you, Gertie, that you—er—ah—might seem—a little bit—selfish—too?

Gertie (in amazement)—I, selfish? I?

Cecil (humbly)—Well, you certainly—appear to have your own way. But, now, dear, (as if a sudden thought had flashed on him), let us look at this matter rationally—let us examine it just as it is. Ahem! You have made me an offer of marriage—

Gertie (gasping) — Oh, what a tri-i-i-ghtful thing to say!

Cecil—I mean you have proposed to me—

Gertie—Proposed to you?

Cecil—But, you have surrounded your proposal with conditions that make it simply impossible for me to accept. I realize of course, that you have bestowed on me the highest honor a woman can bestow on a man—

Gertie—Cecil! Mr. Clingon!

Cecil (entreatingly)—I beg you will not urge me. The circumstances that compel me to refuse to be your husband need not wholly estrange us. Think of me as a broth—

Gertie (rising indignantly)—Sir, this is an insult! How dare you?

(Exit, Cecil, hurriedly.)

Gertie (flinging herself on couch and sobbing wildly)—Oh! how horrible of him to say that I made him an of-of-offer! But I did, and he—can tell people! Oh! he wouldn't do that! But he can! And to believe that I'd go abroad—and leave—him! I wouldn't go if I was beaten there. But they'll believe any thing! And he'll never come again, and I can't—can't tell him. Oh! he has no sense—they never have. But he does know that I love him. He does—the outrageous thing! The miserable, hateful— Oh! you poor, splendid! ellow! I never did deserve you!

Clipping from the New York Daily Register, October 2, 1890:

HOLDOFF-CLINGON.—Married at the parsonage, by the Rev. De Rivett Strong, Miss Gertrude Holdoff to Mr. Cecil Clingon, all of this city.

Clippings from the Glebelands (N. J.) Grassmower, October 10:

 We are pleased to learn that Messrs. Bloomplaice and Yarnlowd have sold one of their new cottages on the Upper Depot Road, this side of Rikers' woods. The purchaser is Mr. Cecil Clingon, a rising young business man of New York, who, with his charming bride, intends to make a home in Glebelands. We congratulate Messrs. B. and Y., and trust they may be as fortunate in disposing of the other houses they have erected in the same neighborhood.

A Woman's Idea.

Mrs. Snodgrass—I should think the cinnamon bear would be the easiest to hunt.

Snodgrass—Why?

Mrs. Snodgrass—It would be so easy to follow the scent.—Munsey's Weekly.

MISUNDERSTOOD.

Charlie—Somehow I don't think Miss Beal is simple and ingenious. Do you know, she never looks me squarely in the face?

Fanny—There, see what injustice you can do a girl! Katie merely thinks you admire her profile.—Life.

Street-Car Courtesy.

A sallow-faced woman, with a wealth of freckles on her long nose, entered an Austin street-car. There were eight or ten well-dressed gentlemen in the car, but none of them showed any inclination to give her a seat. After she waited a reasonable time, she remarked with asperity:

"Ef any of you galoots air waiten for me to squat in your laps, you are a sucked-in crowd, for I want you to understand I am a lady from the ground up."

A dread that she was not in earnest about not sitting in their laps caused six of the gentlemen to leave the car.—Texas Siftings.

Peculiar Collaterals.

Sam Johnsing—Say, niggah, can't you lend me two dollahs for a few days?

Uncle Mose—I mout do hit, but what s'curity am yer gwinter gimme dat yer don't skedaddle jess as soon as yer has got de money?

Sam Johnsing—What s'curity! I'le gib you as s'curity my sacred word of honor as a gennerman and a pa'r of ledder britches almos' as good as new.—Texas Siftings.

A Matter of Dust.

Roundsman McKnabb (pulling delinquent officer out of side-door).—Phwat do yez mean by going into a saloon?

Policeman O'Toddy—Sure, Oi jist wint in to tie me shoes.

Roundsman McKnabb — Tie yure shoes, is it? Why, there's dust on the knots!

Policeman O'Toddy—Er—er—(scratching his head)—they do be sweeping in there!—Puck.

AN OVERTAXED AMERICAN.

Mrs. Callaround—I suppose you are delighted to get back to the United States.

Mrs. Shoddy—Oh, yes; it's a great relief to talk to nobodies after conversing with the crowned heads of Europe so long.—Munsey's Weekly.

First Over All Competitors.

First Merchant—I suppose you know my inks received the first prize at the exposition?

Second Merchant—I haven't been reading the papers lately. Who were your competitors?

First Merchant—Well, I was the only one who exhibited, but many intended to do so.—American Stationer.

Willing to Il lp.

Mrs. Liszt (soliciting subscriptions)—Can't I rely on getting your name for five dollars to send a missionary to the heathen?

Mr. Scadds—Nope; but if your parson will admit 'em to his church, I'll go down-town to the slums and spend five dollars' car-fare in sending a hundred heathen to the missionary!—Puck.

Broke!

First Actress—I don't think I'll have my diamonds stolen this year.

Second Actress—How will you advertise, then?

First Actress—I think I'll have them seized by the custom house people.—Light.

There Are Bars and Bars.

"Yes, Jimmie must belong to a gymnasium now," remarked old Mrs. Jones to her husband, who inquired what the boy did in the evening. "I heard him tell a friend the other night that he could find him down at the corner hanging on to a bar most any evening in the week."—Texas Siftings.

Not What Was Expected.

"Well, Kenniboy, whom do you love?" asked Kenniboy's father.

After a moment of deep thought the answer came.

"Kenniboy," he said.—Harper's Young People.

Agricultural Reports.

First Farmer—I raised a fine crop of wheat this year, and lots of potatoes and cabbage.

Second Farmer—Well, I did better than that. I raised a four thousand-dollar mortgage.—West Shore.

VISITING MANNERS.

Little Points of Etiquette That Should Be Carefully Observed.

Many of us who pride ourselves on our good-breeding are singularly blind as to what is due to friends who are visiting people unknown to us, or who are entertaining guests whom we have never met. Nor are we more assured as to some of the points of etiquette toward our own guests and to our own hosts when we make an occasional flitting from home.

It is useless to decry etiquette by saying that the best manners in all cases are those which hurt no one. This is true as a general law, but there always are some points which leave no room for experiments as to what will hurt another, and which yet may be settled once for all by a few rules.

If you have an acquaintance who is entertaining friends whom she wishes you to meet, it is your duty to call promptly, and if possible offer some hospitality to both guests and hosts.

If the position is reversed, and your friend is visiting people unknown to you, never go to see your friend without leaving a card for the hostess. If you give any entertainment for the friend, be very sure to invite her hosts also. It does not follow that your invitation will be accepted, but if it is, the hostess must be treated as the guest of honor and shown every deference. If, for instance, the entertainment is a luncheon for young ladies, she may be asked to take the seat at the end of the table opposite to your own.

If the mutual friend is your guest, you may be sure that, if she is a woman of good-breeding, she, in turn, will accept no invitation which does not include you, although you may think best to decline it and insist upon her going alone. Nor will she receive visitors without asking you to join them in the parlor, should her friends be rude enough to have sent you no cards. Here, too, you may excuse yourself, or at most, join them with such delay as to give them a short interview alone.

These same rules hold good for you when you are the guest. Before you go to make the visit, send word to your friends where and with whom you are to stay, so that there may be no idea that you are in a boarding-house, and therefore mistress of your time and surroundings. This constant deference to your hostess should lead you to order all letters and packages to be addressed to her care.

As to the disposal of your time, when you are visiting, no etiquette requires you to accept all the plans of your hostess, if you feel unable to do so; but care is needed to show that refusal means lack of strength, not lack of interest and inclination. With a little tact on both sides, you will have many hours for your own.

Indeed, a skilful hostess will manage to secure you this privilege, and not make the mistake of working too hard to amuse you, and so absorb every moment of your visit into her idea of what is pleasure for you.

No greater compliment is possible than the quiet acceptance of your presence in the intimacy of family life.—A. R. Ramsey, in Youth's Companion.

WITH TAIL IN AIR.

The Main Part of a Tree Is That Which Is Underground.

Yes, a tree is an underground creature, with its tail in the air. All its intelligence is in its roots. Think what sagacity it shows in its search after food and drink! Somehow or other, the rootlets, which are its tentacles, find out that there is a brook at a moderate distance from the trunk of the tree, and they make for it with all their might. They find every crack in the rocks where there are a few grains of the nourishing substance they care for, and insinuate themselves into its deepest recesses. When spring and summer come, they let their tails grow, and delight in whisking them about in the wind, or letting them be whisked about by it; for these tails are poor passive things, with very little will of their own, and bend in whatever direction the wind chooses to make them.

The leaves make a deal of noise whispering. I have sometimes thought I could understand them as they talked with each other, and that they seemed to think they made the wind as they wagged forward and back. Remember what I say. The next time you see a tree waving in the wind, recollect that it is the tail of a great underground many-armed, polypus-like creature which is as proud of its caudal appendage, especially in summer time, as a peacock of his gorgeous expanse of plumage.

Do you think there is any thing so very odd about this idea? Once get it into your heads and you will find it renders the landscape wonderfully interesting. There are as many kinds of tree tails as there are of tails to dogs and other quadrupeds. Study them as Daddy Gilpin studied them in his "Forest Scenery," but don't forget that they are only the appendage of the underground vegetable polypus, the true organism to which they belong.—Oliver Wendell Holmes, in Atlantic.

Prof. Newcomb's Bad Break.

Prof. Simon Newcomb, of Washington, is known as a man whose scientific studies have tended to exaggerate a natural disposition to mental abstraction. The professor's friends, who are also his strong admirers, understand his peculiarity, and overlook in him what might not be excused in an ordinary person. A Washington lady is very fond of telling this incident: She was at a reception given at Prof. Newcomb's house. The occasion had been made delightful by the professor's wife and daughters, and every thing was very enjoyable. Toward the close of the evening, the lady, who had enjoyed the affair greatly, approached the host and asked him with much enthusiasm: "How often do you have these delightful reuniots, professor?" "But once a year, madam—thank goodness!—but once a year." There was no polite prevarication in that reply.—Golden Days.

—Discolored rattan chairs are made pretty by a coating of black or golden brown paint, finished with handsome cushions.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—The national life boat institution has rescued 627 lives from shipwreck.

—There are over 40,000 children attending the schools in London who are insufficiently fed.

—Probably with the intention of starting a menagerie of his own, an audacious thief in St. Joseph, Mo., stole an elephant, two camels and five horses.

—When a steamer passes over the Port Huron tunnel the noise of the wheel can readily be heard in the hole, which is at least forty feet under the water.

—A tramp in Birmingham, Ala., while suffering with delirium tremens, saw his big toe protruding from his well-worn boot. Imagining it to be a snake about to bite him, he smashed it with a hammer.

—Michael Fitzgerald, Jr., while berrying up Bates Run, near Tunesta, killed a black snake that measured ten feet and seven inches. This is, no doubt, the largest blacksnake that has been killed in the country this year.

—While fishing off Fortune's Rocks at Biddeford a young lady lost a valuable ring. Having occasion a few days later to visit the place she was more than surprised to find the identical ring lying in the sand near the water.

—A Tuscarora (Nev.) newspaper prepares the young mind for the coming of a new school principal by the remark that "the official's teaching weight is about two hundred and twenty-five pounds avoirdupois, which under certain conditions might be made to approximate a ton."

—Hearing a tremendous noise in the engine-room an Auburn, Me., engineer rushed below to find the governor belt off, the engine running wild and the room filled with steam. He immediately appreciated the situation and did what few men would—groped about till he found the stop-valve and slowed the engine.

—A remarkable incident occurred in Hartford recently. A mink trotted right into the heart of the city, among throngs of people on the streets, and passed all kinds of dogs with impunity, and finally made his way into the back yard of a big store on Asylum street. In the yard men cornered him and tried to capture him alive, but he fought so desperately that they had to kill him.

—Says a business man, writing from the City of Mexico: "Why do you Americans put five cents on a letter to Mexico when two are enough? Is cash so abundant in Northern houses that you can so waste it? Pray tell your people that only a 'phule' will put any more postage on a Mexican letter or paper than on one destined for the United States—else why the postal treaty? One-half my correspondents thus foolishly contribute to Uncle Sam's exchequer."

—Some jokers at Schenley Park, Pittsburgh, had a little fun with a Hungarian, who asked for work. They gravely gave him a position as hostler to a bear, and supplied him with a curry-comb and brush. The bear enjoyed being scratched with the curry-comb, and showed it by rolling on the ground as fast as he was cleaned. He also evinced his appreciation by playfully clawing his valet, and by the time the latter had completed his job he had no clothes on worth mentioning.

—George W. Keene, of South Boston, deserves to live until he is ninety-nine years old in order to complete his regard of nines. His father died in 1859 at the age of sixty-nine, and was buried on January 29. Mr. Keene himself was married May 29, enlisted in the civil war July 19, 1863; was mustered out June 29, 1865, and was discharged July 9. His son was married October 29. On the 9th of August he received an injury which necessitated his removal to the city hospital, but he was discharged on the 19th. He is fifty-nine years old.

—The English Industries states that a novel industry, resting strictly on chemical principles and needing nothing but a little capital and a dash of dishonesty to develop it, is said to be practiced in Florida. It consists in avoiding dependence upon the slow and imperfect ripening of lemons by the sun's rays, by picking the fruit while green and exposing it to the fumes of burning sulphur, whereby its color is changed to a rich golden yellow, infinitely more attractive than the natural hue. "It is true that the interior of the lemon is practically free from juice, a fact which the hypercritical might reckon a slight drawback; but this is, after all, a trivial matter, affecting only the consumer," is the salve applied to the conscience.

AN OPTIMIST'S BLOW.

The Fearful Extent to Which His Heart Was Bowed Down.

This is about a young man who lives in the Pine Tree State. This is a young man of very deep feelings. When he gets his mind set on a thing it takes a strong hold on him. His is one of those intense natures that can brook no opposition. Yet up to the time of which I write he had always been noted for looking upon the bright side of things—one of your real bright optimists, who consider that every cloud has at least a German-silver lining. Well, this young man had centered his affections upon a young lady in the village, and on numerous occasions offered his escort on rides and to parties. These were so uniformly and firmly refused that he at length brought matters to a head by asking the young lady, point blank, why she refused his attentions.

"Because," said she, "I am engaged to another man, and do not think it would be right to go about with you."

The young man sat stupefied for a moment, too absolutely stunned for words. Then his former bright nature forsook him, as he looked, shuddering, down the long black vista of the years that confronted him. Not one ray of light gleamed athwart the sad vista. Not a glim. The clouds all seemed to be lined with black alapaca. Turning his mournful gaze upon the object of his soul's worship, this one-time light-hearted but now desolate man brought a groan from his inmost being, and said in a voice that tremblingly told of his deep feeling in the matter:

"Abigail, I would rather have given five dollars than have had this thus."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

MILLER FOR JUSTICE

The Attorney-General Slated for the Supreme Bench.

RUMORS ABOUT HIS SUCCESSOR.

Senator Gorman Objects to Taking a Vote on the Elections Bill.

The Davenport Resolution Passed—A Motion to Discipline Mr. Minot Tabled by the House—The Census Committee Favorably Report the Frank Apportionment—The Pacific Slope After an Office.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The President is expected to send to the Senate within a very few days the nomination of Attorney-General Miller to succeed the late Justice Miller upon the Supreme Bench.

This information revives the report that General Clarkson will be made Secretary of the Interior and Secretary Noble Attorney-General. General Clarkson says, however, that he is off for Europe within a few weeks.

When Mr. Clarkson went to the White House last evening, along with Gen. Alger and Senator Fassett, to dine with the President, the report gained a good deal of credence.

Mr. Clarkson, however, denies it. He said, after returning from the White House, that there was nothing in it; that he had nat been invited to be a member of the Cabinet and did not expect to be.

Gen. Alger and Senator Fassett also said that they did not believe there was anything in it. Gen. Alger volunteered the additional information that he was not going into the Cabinet.

Friends of Senator Spooner now think that he will be made Attorney-General.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Senator Gray Talks on the Elections Bill. Tobacco Rebate Bill in the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—In the Senate the Indian question was discussed again at some length.

The resolution calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for a statement of the money paid to John I. Davenport was passed.

The Elections bill was taken up and Mr. Hoar asked unanimous consent that a vote be taken Friday. Mr. Gorman objected and Mr. Gray resumed his speech against the bill.

In the House the resolution to discipline Doorkeeper Minot was tabled.

The Atkinson bill relating to railroad rights in the District of Columbia was passed; also several other bills relating to the District.

The bill to give a rebate on manufactured tobacco in store January 1 was passed.

Death of Washington McLean.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Washington McLean, for many years well known in journalism as the proprietor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, died at his residence here last night in his 74th year. Mr. McLean had been in ill health for several years, suffering from kidney complaints, but not until last summer, when he went to Deer Park in hopes of benefitting his health, was his condition regarded as serious.

The Pacific Slope Wants the Office.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The Pacific Slope Republicans are hustling to secure the place on the Interstate Commerce Commission soon to be made vacant by the expiration of Commissioner Schoonmaker's commission. The Pacific slope demands the appointment, and the President says it has his serious consideration. So far no names have been pushed vigorously.

The Frank Apportionment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The Census Committee will report favorably on the Frank Apportionment bill, which fixes the number at 356.

Strike in the Clark Thread Mills.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 9.—The long-anticipated strike in the spinning department of the Clark Thread Works in this city and Kearny is now on. The immediate cause was the discharge of another spinner by Superintendent Wamsley, whom the men have detested since he was imported and placed in charge nearly two years ago. The Clark mills give employment to more than 3,000 persons, and just how many of them the strike will affect it is impossible to say now. The National Spinners' Association was at once notified.

Demands of the Farmers.

OCALA, Fla., Dec. 9.—Having reiterated the St. Louis platform, the Farmer's Alliance Convention formulated the demands through which they expect to see those principles brought into practice. Among the most important features of the demands are the abolition of national banks, the adoption of the sub-treasury scheme, the prevention of dealing in futures on agricultural and mechanical productions and tariff reform.

Charges Dismissed by Gov. Hill.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 9.—Gov. Hill has dismissed the charges heretofore presented against Charles W. Stapleton, the County Clerk of Madison County, and denied the application for his removal from office. The Governor in a lengthy decision holds that the charges are not sufficiently sustained to warrant executive interference.

Ready to Invite All Nations.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—President Palmer, of the National Commission of the World's Fair, has arrived here from Detroit. He will send a letter by Director Peck to President Harrison, asking him to issue a proclamation calling all nations to take part in the World's Columbian Exposition.

SEPARATED BY SPIRITS.

A Young Woman Leaves Her Husband to Live With a Spiritualist.

PITTSBURG, Pa. Dec. 9.—Mrs. John Morris, the wife of a mill man living on Beaver avenue, Allegheny, has deserted her husband and is now living with a young man named Frank King. Mrs. Morris did not go through the formality of getting a divorce.

"The spirits have separated us," she said, "and through their chosen medium have told me that my true husband is Frank King. I fully believe in spiritualism. It is the only true religion and governs my every act."

King is the son of a middle-aged widow, who poses as a medium between the dead and the living. She lives in a small house alone on the Ohio River, and supports herself and a 2-year-old son with money secured from the practice of the mystic art. Her patrons are generally women, many unmarried, but more are wives and mothers. Her circle of friends is wide. Among them was Mrs. Morris. The latter is about 25. She has been married two years. Her husband is an industrious man. He frequently remonstrated with his wife for belonging to Mrs. King's class, but to no effect. Their quarrels were frequent.

LOST IN THE WOODS.

A Child Frozen Stiff in Death by Its Mother's Side.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 9.—Thomas De Freeze, living on the Budensick farm, one mile south of Rahway, reported two days ago that his wife, Leona, and their 5-year-old daughter had been missing since Saturday afternoon.

The police, after a diligent search, located Mrs. De Freeze near Forsdyke woods. The child was found frozen stiff in death five feet from the mother's side.

The mother was partially covered with a shawl. Her hands and feet were frozen so badly as to make amputation necessary. She is still unable to give any account of herself. Mr. Freeze is at a loss to account for his wife's disappearance.

Investigating the Chester Mystery.

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 9.—The coroner's jury will meet to-day in the case of Emma Fitzenmeyer, who was found dead at the house of H. F. Schmidt last Thursday. So far not the slightest thread of evidence has been presented as to how the woman met her death. The officials are still working on the case, but so far without result. A crowd of morbid people gathered in front of Mr. Schmidt's grocery store early in the morning, and he was compelled to close his shop in order to avoid them.

Brutal Assault on an Old Woman.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 9.—At about 2 a. m. William Ryan broke into the house of Mrs. Catherine Jordan, aged 62, living alone, and attacked her, threatening to cut her throat, and made an outrageous assault upon her. She succeeded in escaping in her night clothes and alarmed a neighbor, who, on reaching Mrs. Jordan's house, found Ryan asleep. The police were summoned and Ryan was arrested. Mrs. Jordan was not seriously injured.

Al. Daggett Declared Bankrupt.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Dec. 9.—Postal Card Contractor Al. Daggett was declared bankrupt in the Huntington Probate Court, on petition of the Manhattan Bank of New York and others. W. H. Williams and W. S. Downs, of Birmingham, were appointed trustees. The amount of the claim is unknown and but $6,000 or $7,000 were represented at this hearing. Mr. Daggett's debts in this State will probably exceed $50,000.

Cigar Manufacturers Confer.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9,—Fifteen of the leading manufacturers of cigars of this city met to discuss the advisability of taking part in the national conference of cigar manufacturers, which is to be held in New York to consider the question of advancing prices. A committee was selected to confer with the New York manufacturers.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 9.—The Bethlehem Iron Company's Steel Mills, which were shut down a week ago for an indefinite period, have started up and the 1,000 men are again at work. RELIEF FROM THE TREASURY.

A Cabinet Meeting Considering the Financial Trouble To-Day.

Mr. Windom Surprised at the Large Amount of Bonds Offered—Assistant-Secretary Nettleton Says There is No Cause for Alarm—Two Big Failures in New York and Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Holders of stocks are frightened. Money on call yesterday loaned as high as one-fourth of 1 per cent. and interest, which is equal to 97 per cent. a year. It was impossible to obtain time loans. How to relieve the depressing situation was the all-absorbing question.

The Clearing House issued $1,050,000 of loan certificates, making the total issue to date $13,055,000. It was stated that $6,700,000 of the certificates issued to banks had not been used, and they could, therefore, be considered in the nature of a reserve fund.

Relief from Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Secretary Windom says that he has been giving close and unremitting attention to the subject of the stringency in the money market for several days past. The Secretary has been in constant consultation with bankers and other business men who have come to Washington to urge upon the Department and Congress some measure of relief. At to-day's Cabinet meeting the subject will be thoroughly discussed, and the Secretary may afterward take some further step toward increasing the volume of circulation. The Secretary thinks that if the bill introduced by Senator Sherman or a similar one could be passed the situation would be materially improved.

Secretary Windom said he was really surprised in glancing over the large amount of bond offerings made during the day in response to the circular last week. They came tumbling in almost from the beginning of business hours yesterday, the proposals to sell aggregated nearly $14,000,000 of 4 per cents at prices ranging from $1.22 to $1.25. It was not anticipated that the call would meet with so quick a response.

"The purchases hereafter to be made," said Assistant-Secretary Nettleton, "will aggregate between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000. Our reports from New York have all day been more encouraging, and it seems to me that there is no longer occasion for alarm. I think the situation will continue to improve, and that the bond call may be depended upon to relieve anxiety. We shall continue, if it becomes necessary, to carry out the bond purchase policy so long as the surplus will permit. Saturday night the net surplus was $19,000,000. After all purchases have been made under this call, it will be reduced perhaps considerably, but the revenues are being collected very rapidly and the Treasury is in first rate shape."

MILLION DOLLAR FAILURE.

An Old New York Firm of Hatters Forced Under.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The old established firm of Roberts, Cushman & Co., hatters, of No. 177 Greene street, have made an assignment. The concern has always borne an excellent reputation, and the wealth of the individual members of the firm caused its credit to be practically unlimited.

The firm was established nearly 40 years ago. The company did a business of many millions of dollars a year, and it had the highest rating at the mercantile agencies, having been given credit for over $1,000,000.

An approximate amount of the firm's liabilities could not be obtained, but it was confidently asserted that the total indebtedness would not reach $1,000,000. It is said that the firm expected to pay dollar for dollar and that the business would not be discontinued.

If necessary the individual members will surrender their personal property and real estate, which will be ample to cover everything unless a general and widespread panic ensues.

The assignment was made to Mr. Charles Stone, of Washington County, N. Y. A member of the firm said that the amount owing to the city would not reach a very high figure.

Failures in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—Price, Sherman & Co., hat manufacturers, have assigned. They are rated from $200,000 to $300,000, and their general credit is high. Judgments were entered against the firm for $78,000 by Roberts, Cushman & Co. F. S. Sherman, retail hatter, 1017 Chestnut street, has also assigned.

One Million Pounds Coming.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—It is stated that £1,000,000 gold will be shipped from London to New York this week for the assistance of the banks there. It is doubtful if any assistance will be sent by the Bank of France.

TRADES UNIONS IN COUNCIL.

President Gompers Reviews the Work of the Federation of Labor.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 9.—The work of the Federation of Labor is progressing rapidly.

In his annual address President Gompers advised the convention to avoid controversial questions and to concentrate effort upon such issues as the members are most agreed. That such a course is best is evidenced by the success of the eight-hour movement since the last convention. The agitation for that reform has been successful in 137 cities, and has benefited 46,197 workmen in the carpenters' trade, besides countless others in other branches of the building trade. The demand for an eight-hour day will be made by the other trades in series and its final success cannot be questioned. The next industry to make the demand will be the coal miners. They will move May 1, 1891.

During the year the Federation has established 274 local branches and the National Trades Unions report 913 local branches established. Existing branches have added from 5 to 35 per cent. in membership.

During the year 1,163 authorized strikes have taken place. Of these 989 succeeded, 86 failed and 98 were compromised. Besides, many concessions were gained without resort to strikes. The people who propose a strike are warned that bluster will not win, and that they must be prepared for whatever battle they propose. The Federation is not always able to assist strikes financially.

The address declares in favor of the system of National unions of individual trades.

President Gompers refers in commendation to the project of an International Labor Congress in 1893, to be coincident with the World's Fair; demands the enforcement of the eight-hour law in government work; asks for a suitable federal alien contract labor law; suggests the extended observances of labor day; warns against child labor and declares for international copyright and ballot reform.

President Gompers met the charge of excluding socialists by denying that he has ever tried to exclude any one for his economic opinions, and insisting that the only requisite to the trade union movement is good standing in a local union.

The Committee on Credentials then presented their report. They decided not to receive the credentials of the delegates from the Central Federation of New York, but permitted them to present their case to the convention and let that body decide it.

THE ENVOYS CHEERED.

They Receive an Encouraging Cable from the High Sheriff of Cork.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The Irish Parliamentary delegation was cheered by a cablegram from High Sheriff Fitzgerald, of Cork, Ireland, hitherto the head of Mr. Parnell's own constituency. The cablegram is interpreted by Mr. O'Brien to signify that Mr. Parnell's constituency is going against him and in favor of McCarthy. The "party" referred to means, therefore, according to Mr. O'Brien, the opposition to Mr. Parnell. Following is the cablegram:

Influential city and county committee forming to sustain party. Fever rapidly passing off. Common sense asserting itself. City and county will do its duty. (Signed)
FITZGERALD, High Sheriff, Chairman.

Stricken With Apoplexy While Preaching

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 9.—While preachiug to a large congregation at the East Millstone Reformed Church at the evening services, the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. P. Strong, said: "A man might fall as easy as a star from heaven." The next instant his face turned ashy pale, he clutched wildly at the pulpit for support and then fell to the floor in a fit of apoplexy. The horrified congregation was spellbound for a moment. Then the cooler ones rushed to the prostrate pastor and raised him from the floor. He was taken home and died during the morning. He was about 60 years old and leaves a wife and four grown daughters.

Three Hundred Lives Lost.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 9.—The steamship China, just arrived from China and Japan, brings Chinese advices to November 18th and Japanese advices to November 21st. At the blowing up of the government powder mills in November at Tai Ping Foo, 300 lives were lost and all the houses in the neighborhood were wrecked. There were 50 persons at work in the mill at the time of the explosion, and of their remains only two limbs have been found.

A New Noah's Ark.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 9.—Gen. Watson S. Webb will leave here this week to take charge of the Florida exposition car, which is now ready to go to the World's Fair. The car contains every tree, vine and flower product of Florida, as well as innumerable live birds, fishes and quadruped life. Two immense alligators are special features.

Immigrant Miners Held.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Seven Hungarian immigrants, who say they are miners, arrived at the Barge Office from the steamship Saale. They said they were en route to the mines at Bradford, Pa. Believing the men had come under contract, the immigration authorities decided to hold them. They are now prisoners at the Barge Office.

Slavin Will Not Fight Here.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—A special cable dispatch says that there is no probability of a fistic encounter between Frank Slavin and Jim Corbett at New Orleans. Slavin will not leave England, but will fight any man in the world either in Spain or France.

Tionesta, Pa., Visited by Fire.

TIONESTA, Pa., Dec. 9.—Fire destroyed David Barrett's general store, the Dracomb building, Bales' watchmaking establishment and G. W. Bovard's dry goods and grocery store. Loss, $22,750; insurance, $11,100.

IRELAND TO DECIDE

The Nationalists Preparing for a Rousing Campaign.

PARNELL TO ISSUE A MANIFESTO

Rumors of a Plot to Use Personal Violence Against the Irish Leader.

Tipperary Commissioners Repudiate Parnell—The Financial Situation of the Anti-Parnellites Continues Critical—American Support to be Solicited by Parnell—Davitt to Go to Ireland.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The Irish members are now divided in two parties in the House of Commons. Mr. Parnell appeared and took his seat at the usual hour, and listened with interest to the debate. He never looked better. His leading opponents, however, Healy and McCarthy, appeared nervous and uncomfortable, especially the former, who seemed anxious to avoid the gaze of his colleagues.

Healy seemed to feel it incumbent upon him to do something to show that Parnell was no longer the sole spokesman for the Irish party, and at the first opportunity he interjected a motion of protest against the way the government was rushing legislation through without the usual degree of explanation and debate. In view of the fact that this expedition of business was due to the internecine strife among the Irish members themselves, the motion gave rise to some laughter, and Mr. Parnell smiled grimly at the poor reception accorded to the first official act of his rival in the leadership.

Mr. McCarthy, the chairman of the anti-Parnell faction, is quite popular in the House among members of all parties, being respected for his literary fame and his personal character. In the parliamentary discussions, however, he has not made much impression, and Timothy Healy's claim to lead the secessionists is not disputed.

The financial situation of the anti-Parnellites continues critical, but it is hoped that the action of the Tipperary Town Commissioners in repudiating Parnell will have an important influence elsewhere in Ireland. Though Mr. Parnell controls nearly every Irish fund, the Tipperary fund is an exception, being under the disposition of Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon.

Both sides are preparing for a rousing campaign. It is stated that Dr. Tanner's following in Cork are organizing a plot to use personal violence against Parnell by hustling him in the crowd during his coming visit to that city.

WORK IN PARLIAMENT.

Bills to be Pushed Forward and Dissolution About Easter.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—There is but little doubt that Parliament will be dissolved about Easter. The Government intends before that time to have passed the Land Purchase bill, a bill for Irish county government and the Tithes bill. These three measures, it is hoped, will go far toward allaying existing discontent on both sides of St. George's Channel.

The Land Purchase bill is making rapid progress and the County Government bill will be pushed forward with equal celerity.

There is practically no opposition to the Tithes bill, except in the Tory ranks, and that does not make itself heard, except in grumbling. The collection of tithes under the present system is very unpopular, and is the cause of many collisions between the authorities and the people, especially in Wales, where many of the farmers are dissenters and object to being taxed directly for the benefit of the established clergy.

Davitt to Go to Ireland.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Michael Davitt, speaking at Stratford last night, said that recent events had seriously endangered Ireland's cause, but little had been said on either side of which Ireland need be ashamed. Both sides would be true to the principle of National self-government. He did not believe that Mr. Gladstone or the British democracy would go back on Ireland after espousing her cause thus far. Mr. Davitt will soon go to Ireland to assist in the Healyite campaign.

Parnell's Campaign in Ireland.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—On his coming tour through Ireland Mr. Parnell will be accompanied by the most active of his followers. During the coming week he will deliver addresses in Dublin, Cork, Limerick and Waterford. Before his departure from England for Ireland Parnell will issue a manifesto to the people of the latter country. It will be signed by all his supporters, including Mr. Carew, who has heretofore been regarded as doubtful in his allegiance.

Bidding for Parnell.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 9.—The following cablegram was sent to Mr. Parnell:

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 9.

PARNELL, London: Will give you $75,000 for 100 lectures in America, $50,000 deposited in bank as guarantee. Answer our expense. (Signed) THOMPSON, DUPREE & GAYLOR.

Thompson is the well known theatrical manager, and the other two gentlemen are connected with the "The Irish Arab" Company now playing in this city. Parnell refused the offer.

Parnell to Solicit American Aid.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Mr. Parnell intends to send one or more of his followers to America to present his side of the Nationalist dispute and solicit a continuance of their financial support.

Tipperary Against Parnell.

TIPPERARY, Dec. 9.—The Commissioners have adopted a vote of non-confidence in Mr. Parnell.

THE INDIAN TROUBLE.

Slight Skirmish Between Redskins and Ranchmen at Buffalo Gap.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—General Miles to-day received a letter from Buffalo Gap, S. D., under date of Dec. 6, which says:

"Yesterday afternoon a party of 15 Sioux, at the entrance to the Bad Lands, endeavored to cut off and capture three cowboys. Ranchmen in the vicinity of the Bad Lands are sending the women and children into this town."

Shortly after this letter was received a telegram came from the same place, saying: "Ranchmen and Indians had a slight skirmish. The situation is becoming serious, for the settlers are unarmed. Can you supply 50 good rifles and ammunition, so that settlers can defend themselves?"

General Miles will leave for the scene of the Indian trouble this evening.

Murdered at Sea.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The four-masted British ship, Buckingham, has just arrived here from Dundee, Scotland, in charge of First Mate Christie, her captain, Peter Lyall, having been murdered by the ship's cook. On October 12, two days out, the captain reprimanded the cook, a Lascar, for negligence. Later in the day a storm arose and the crew were sent aloft, when the cook went into the officers' cabin, where the captain was alone, and stabbed him four times with a sheath knife. The cook was put in irons and turned over to the Brooklyn police. The British Consul was informed of the murder.

—Almost as soon as the sun is up, these crisp, invigorating mornings, the unfortunate householder may be seen rushing wildly down the street, and some time later the merry plumber's boy, whistling a cherry tune, leisurely approaches the house from which the frantic man has come, and spends half a day running up a bill for "time of boy" and finding out what is the matter with the pipes so he can go and tell some one else what work has to be done.

Abundance of Need for Charity Here at Home.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Within the last few days I have heard, from independent sources, of urgent, perhaps unusual cases of need among the poor of Plainfield, and on the other hand of unsuccessful efforts made to collect partly worn clothing, with which to relieve this need. The fact seems to be that the ordinary supply of second-hand clothing was drawn upon pretty heavily, if not well nigh exhausted, by the recent call from the Florence Mission of New York. Everyone must certainly be glad that that call met with such a generous response; but there seems to be some danger that the final cost will fall upon the needy ones of our own city—a possible result which ought not to be. I would like to suggest to those who still have clothing which can be spared, be it suitable for either sex or any age, that they can hardly do a better thing than to use it at once to relieve some of the pressing need among our own poor. I am sure that either of the four mission schools or the Relief Association will gladly receive and distribute any such donations.

WHERE IS JOHN LARUE?

His Son Peter Writes from Paris, Trying to Find Him at Plainfield.

As has already been recorded in THE PRESS, the Plainfield police are eager to obtain news of John Larue, who worked on a farm near Plainfield four years ago, but who has mysteriously disappeared. In order that the search for the missing man may be facilitated, THE PRESS now gives publicity to the following letter:

[Translation.]

PARIS, Nov. 5, 1890.

To the Chief of Police:

DEAR SIR:—Allow me to write you these few lines, to express the desire I have to obtain news of my father, Jean Larue, age 43, born at Eutrange, department of Noselle, France, who left seven years ago for America. The last letter I received from him was dated July 21, 1886. He was then working for a French farmer by the name of Bertrand, at Plainfield, New Jersey; post-office box 1196. I have addressed myself to the Chief of Police of New York, and he has directed me to you. I hope, dear sir, that you will be able to give me information of my father, and calm the anxiety of a loving son, who will have for you the deepest gratitude.

Kindly address,
PIERRE LARUE,
No. 42 Rue Championet,
Paris, France.

During the evening remarks were made by Grand Regent W. A. Tompkins, Grand Orator F. S. Petter, Grand Secretary R. H. Alberts, Past Regent P. H. Charlock, grand officers R. F. Feish and Chas. Mencke, and many others. After the speechmaking supper was served.

Somerville Twice Defeated.

Plainfielders who visited the West End Athletic Club at Somerville last evening had a merry time. A large number of guests attended the opening of the West End alleys. The Crescents scored two victories, as follows:

Young Church Workers Elect Their Officers.

At a meeting of the new Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed church, held yesterday, the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months:

President—Josie R. Runyon; Vice President—Ada Miller; Secretary—Edgar Sheppard; Treasurer—Olive Wikoff; Lookout Committee—Maud VanDyck, Adelaide Baxter, Sadie Holmes, George Snedeker, John H. VanWinkle, and Elmer Wheeler. Other committees, such as Flower, Temperance and Missionary, will be appointed later.

The last Monday in every month a consecration meeting will be held. A manual of instruction entitled "First Lessons in Christian Truth," will be used as a text book on the other meeting days.

The Superintendent of the Society is Miss Alice Smith; Assistant Superintendent, Mrs. C. Schenck. The Society has sixty-three members, sixty of whom were present yesterday.

Captain Grant Finds a Missing Son.

Cornelius Dunn, a demented young man, twenty-one years of age, wandered away from his home in South Orange, Friday, boarded a railroad train, and was put off by the conductor at Elizabeth. Subsequently he boarded another train and reached Plainfield. Then he disappeared. His mother enlisted the sympathy of George W. Grant, Captain of Plainfield's Police, and that dignitary succeeded, by a prompt and thorough search, in finding the missing youth at Somerville. Peter Dunn, the young man's father, came to Plainfield last night and took the son home.

Another Result of the Mills Meetings.

The Rev. Dr. Ketcham and the officers and congregation of the First Presbyterian church were gladdened by an accession of forty-three members to church membership, Sunday morning—thirty on confession of faith and thirteen by letter.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

J. J. Henderson of Rockview avenue is in California.

The Christmas service produced by the Rev. Robert Lowry, of Madison avenue, this year, is entitled "The Child of Bethlehem," and is especially beautiful.

The reading of a paper on Holland, by George Wharton Edwards, announced to be given in the Unitarian rooms Wednesday evening, is unavoidably postponed.

Mail Carrier Peter V. Weaver is still encased in porous plasters, as the result of a fall on the ice on Madison avenue, last week. He pluckily remains on duty, although pretty badly shaken up.

John H. Tier, John Mortimer, Wm. Kline, Peter Flynn, Jr., Calvin Neighbor, and Frank M. Bacon, were the Plainfielders drawn on Sheriff Hick's first panel of petit jurors at Elizabeth, this morning.

The members of the C. R. S. held a fair this afternoon at the residence of Charles W. McCutchen, Rockview avenue. The young ladies in charge were the Misses Margaret McCutchen, Cora Haviland, Dorothea Wells and Florence Loomis.

J. M. Hager, the "Great Republic" man who, with the public school children as his helpers, has conducted successful entertainments in Stillman Music Hall, was in town to-day seeking to make arrangements for a production of his allegory under the auspices of the North Plainfield school.

A children's party was held at 34 Central avenue last evening, in celebration of the fourth birthday anniversary of little Miss Ada Westphal. More than two score of the young lady's friends gathered in her honor. The hours from four till seven were spent in pleasant games and songs. An enjoyable feast was provided. Many handsome gifts were bestowed on the young hostess.

A FAMOUS COACHING TRIP.

Plainfielders to Hear the Story, and Help Build a New Church.

In the Summer of 1888 Andrew Carnegie invited a party of friends to accompany him on one of his famous driving tours through England and Scotland. Among the party were Secretary James G. Blaine and a number of his family, Gail Hamilton, and the Rev. Dr. Eaton, of the Church of the Divine Paternity, New York. Next Thursday evening, at The Casino, Dr. Eaton will tell the story of the adventures of the party, and, with the aid of 100 fine stereopticon views, to be managed by Mr. Rockwood of New York, will take his hearers with him through the beautiful and historic places that they visited on their way from London to Cluny Castle, including several cathedrals and cathedral towns, Melrose Abbey, Abbotsford, Edinburgh, and the Scottish Lake region. Though still a comparatively young man, Dr. Eaton has the reputation of being an interesting and eloquent speaker, as indeed he must needs be to occupy the pulpit of his great predecessor, the late Dr. Chapin. Soon after the party returned to America the lecture was given by especial request before the Union League Club of New York, and was enthusiastically received. Its repetition in Plainfield will be for the benefit of the building fund of the Unitarian church. Tickets, at fifty cents each, may be obtained at Estil's book store, the drug stores of H. P. Reynolds, L. W. Randolph, J. G. Miller, and G.W.V. Moy, and at the door on the evening of the entertainment.

The Borough's Electric Light.

Work on the proposed electric light system of North Plainfield is progressing rapidly. Poles are being erected on all the main streets, and the line will soon be completed. The poles are of the plain wooden variety, and are not very handsome. Workmen are clearing away the brushwood on the Allen lot on Race street, at the rear of Smalley's butcher shop, and will break ground this week preparatory to the erection of an Edison Electric Light station at that point. The works will be operated by steam.

Indians and Negroes Tell Their Own Story of an Education's Value.

Generous contributions were made to the cause of Indian and negro education, through donations to the Hampton Institute, at the public meeting held last night in the Crescent Avenue church. The exercises of the evening were very interesting. Besides brief original addresses by negro and Indian young men from the Institute there was good singing by the Hampton quartette, besides addresses by General Armstrong and Chaplain Frissell. The Rev. E. M. Rodman presided.

Wants Others to Experience the Same Benefits.

A business man found that by leaving home ten minutes earlier than usual, for his train, he could spend that length of time with profit, and spiritual refreshing to himself, at the business men's prayer and praise service, held every morning at 59 North avenue, from 7:55 to 8:20; and he earnestly hopes that all business men will avail themselves of this unusual privilege in our city.

The Middlesex Gun Club's Sale.

At an adjourned meeting of the Middlesex Gun Club, last evening, it was decided to offer the Club's property at public auction on Thursday, Dec. 18, instead of Dec. 11 as before announced, so that the sale could be more extensively advertised. The advertisement will be found in another column of THE PRESS.

To Residents of the Borough.

Complaints have come to the Borough authorities since the recent fall of snow, that many residents neglect properly to clean the snow and ice from their sidewalks. From observation I find these complaints are justifiable. The Marshals have been requested to see that the ordinance in this regard is enforced. If each resident who owns or rents property will give this matter personal attention, it will be easy to keep the sidewalks in a good passable condition. I trust no one hereafter will fail to do this for the public good, and thus comply with the ordinance. CHARLES PLAGE,
December 9, 1890. Mayor.

A DAY OF SLIPS AND FALLS.

Merry Sport Among the Young People on Their Old-Time Slides.

As the children sat in the warm school rooms yesterday something was happening outside, as they could plainly see through the windows, that filled them with joy and made them look reproachfully at the lagging hands of the clock. On their way to school early in the day they had noticed that the ground was frozen hard, and that the sky was of a dull gray, and they had found all their favorite "slides" of old-time Winters come again, and now the sky was fulfilling its promise and the snowflakes were coming in hundreds and thousands and myriads. Sometimes they fell past the windows, slowly, lingeringly, as though they were lonely and were longing for their playmates, the children. And sometimes they came tumbling over each other, tossing and hurrying away from the windows as though they were impatient for the children to join in their sport, and again the wind would send them whirling and rioting up and down against the windows in great storms as though they were coming in to bring the children out by force if they did not hurry.

And the children watched the clocks and squirmed and said their lessons badly, all the time thinking of the snowflakes that were waiting for them outside. Finally the time did crawl around, and with mad, ringing shouts, hundreds of boys and girls were in the streets. They made long slides, over which they sailed with glowing cheeks, and arms outstretched for balance. They made snowballs, and threw each other into the snow. As long as it was light, the "slides" had the best of it. Every sidewalk became a smooth and shining path, along which one must glide with straightened legs and steadying body whether he would or not. After dark, each slide, covered thinly with white, became a hidden and treacherous peril; after supper, also, in some sections of the city, the older boys and girls came out to join the children, and the shouting and laughter increased. Some of the hills were black with young people. Wherever there was a little slope in the street or sidewalk there the sleds gathered. Some sleds were gayly painted with flowers or snow scenes on the bed, and with long upward-curving runners. Some were low and narrow, built for speed. Little brothers dragged big sisters about, and little sisters hauled their big brothers. All had on red mitts, and knit caps pulled down around their ears.

The big boys lay in wait with snowballs for the big girls, and the big girls lay in wait for the big boys. And the snow and the sharp air made all cheeks rosy and all eyes bright. In those neighborhoods where the rules of etiquette are not troublesome a girl would be surrounded by a laughing crowd of young men and, as she laughed and screamed and struggled, her face would be "washed" until her cheeks were all abaze. And the young man who fell into the hands of a crowd of girls suffered a like fate. There were merry wars wherever there was snow enough and boys and girls enough.

The hills of any size were broken up into a dozen slides, down which the sleds whizzed amid screams of delight. And every minute there were more sleds, and still they came hurrying from every direction.

Some streets, weere there was a sheet of ice under the snow, were as slippery as a waxed floor. The snowfall was light and was quickly frozen. All day long horses were falling, till some one suggested spreading out rolls of carpet for the quadrupeds to walk on. Truck and cab horses were piloted slowly over the glassy surfaces, the shafts in many cases keeping them on their feet.

At one good slide scores of boys gathered at the fall of the first snowflake, and were sliding over it with whoops of delight while two rows of men watched eagerly the antics of the boys and hopped about on their feet as if nothing but a fear that they would look ridiculous kept them from joining in the fun. The boys had n't been sliding long before they cultivated a skill that was marvelous.

After the fun had been going on ten minutes a jolly-faced old man with a tightly buttoned overcoat and a rumpled silk hat came walking sturdily along. He saw the slide and the skimming forms of the boys, and his face was lightened with a memory which overcame him. He broke into a little trot, and pattered with heavy steps until he struck the shining surface, when he threw out his right foot, and with his arms above his head and his body perfectly rigid, slid along. Pretty soon his confidence in his ability to slide properly oozed out, and his body grew limp. His arms fell, and he began pawing at the human fence with his fingers. The next moment he fell with a force that knocked his wind endwise. He wanted to sit quiet for a moment to recover himself, but there was a wild yell, and looking up he saw a line of boys whirling towards him. With one convulsive movement he flung himself from the slide, while the fence laughed until it nearly broke in pieces.

A crusty janitor finally awoke to the fact that fun was going on, and a few minutes later the slide was sprinkled with ashes. But while the fun was permitted to last the slide furnished delirious pleasure to scores of lads, and made a holiday picture to which no one could be insensible.

—"I have been here two months"—says a young man from Florida—"and I have n't succeeded in getting comfortably warm once in that time."

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS.

Bits of Gossip from the Mountains, and a Reminiscence of the War.

WASHINGTONVILLE, Dec. 9.

The Rev. J. C. Fernald, and father, Judge Fernald of Washington, D. C., addressed an appreciative audience Sunday evening in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Chapel.

Mrs. Underhill is confined to her home by a very heavy cold bordering on pneumonia.

The promptness of the general government in settling claims is most proverbial. The case of W. H. Smith illustrates this. Smith was one of the crew on board the United States corvette Shecora, which was attached to the Atlantic Squadron during the war. The Shecora, being a very fast sloop, made a great many captures of blockade runners; and as the government allowed the sale of the vessels and the contents that were intended to aid the Confederates in their rebellion, large proceeds were divided from time to time on shares among the crew. Many richly laden blockade runners whose custom it was to run in under the cover of darkness were captured while making the attempt. The proceeds of the final sales the government has just apportioned, informing Mr. Smith that his share is $300; and a check for that amount he found in the post-office yesterday. This will make things bright for the holidays, although he had given over hoping that he would ever get his share of the prize money. One large vessel that was trying to run the blockade, and that they had chased thirty hours without being able to come up to, would not heave to, although they fired several shots at her; finally the Captain ran his vessel up a creek, in the early morning, when he found he could not escape from his relentless pursuers. The water not being very deep they grounded, and then set fire to their own vessel and escaped. When a boat's crew of twenty men, all armed, went to the burning vessel, they could find no one, and the vessel was so far gone as to destroy her identity.

The ice on the ponds on the average is four inches thick, and the ice harvesters are accordingly happy in their prospect of a large crop.

The linemen setting the electric light poles in North Plainfield say that the frost is ten inches deep in the ground.

JALEB CUSHWOOD.

A Sharper Law to be Made for Truants.

Edwin O. Chapman, State Superintendent of Schools, thinks that there will be some action taken by the Legislature toward remedying the plan that exists in the Truancy Act now on the statutes. Mr. Chapman says that truancy is on the increase, and that not only is the evil no longer confined to the bad little boys who rob the robins of their nests, but that little girls have learned to remain away from school without parental sanction. One trouble is that the law provides no way for the truant officers to get their pay.

In Newark the policemen are also truant officers, and consequently are paid in that way, but in smaller places, such as Plainfield, constables are asked to run down the delinquents, and they receive no compensation for their difficult and unpleasant work. Truancy, in Superintendent Chapman's judgment, is a great evil, because it fosters many others.

In some localities it is found that very small children write forged notes to explain their absence from school. They learn to forge, deceive and lie. While playing truant they get into very vicious habits and cause trouble. One of the reasons given for the existence of truancy in the large cities, like Newark and Jersey City, is the lack of school room. Newark has accommodations for only forty per cent. of the school children, consequently the law there cannot be enforced. Plainfield has an abundance of school room, and truancy is only an occasional freak among the children. When a pupil is known to be playing "hookey" Special Officer Hope, or some similar dignitary, hunts him up and hauls him before the teacher. Just now skating is the only existing invitation to the student of truant mind.

A Few More Abner Downers Would Make Them the Champions.

At a match game of bowling at the Fanwood Club, Saturday evening, the following scores were made:

Walter Force.....	115	Clarence Smith...	126
Mrs. Robinson.....	80	Billy She.....	74
Howard Williams..	93	H. Hamlin.....	118
Miss Bertha Smith.	92	H. Robinson.....	113
Chas. Richardson..	94	Abner P. Downer..	143

As usual, Abner P. Downer leads in the bowling; and it is thought that if the Fanwood Club should substitute a bowler equal to Mr. Downer in place of Mr. Force the Fanwoods would, with the help of R. P. Moore and George Brown, be invincible.

Jack Jenks was a victim of liver complaint,
His strength was exhausted, his pulse had grown faint.
He had ulcers and tumors and all sorts of humors,
And the ills that he suffered would weary a saint.
Folks said that Jack Jenks would never be cured,
But Jack said he would—that they might be assured.
Pierce's G. M. Discovery wrought his recovery,
After all the poor fellow so long had endured.

Such a multitude of serious, distressing and often fatal maladies spring from a disordered liver. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery creates a healthy action of this important organ, and the ills that have their origin there can be cured by its prompt and faithful use. All druggists.

FACTS ABOUT TORNADOES.

The Months of the Year in Which They Most Frequently Occur.

The tornado, with hardly an exception, occurs in the afternoon, just after the hottest part of the day. The time of greatest frequency is from 3:30 to five o'clock. The tornado season includes March, April, May, June, July, August and September, but storms of this nature may occur in any part of the year. The months of greatest frequency, as determined from a record of 808 years, are April, May, June and July. The single month of greatest frequency is May, April following next in order. The State in which the greatest number of tornadoes has occurred is Missouri, followed next in order by Kansas and Georgia. A record of more than five hundred tornadoes and "windfalls" (i. e., paths of tornadoes through forests) in Wisconsin, considerably exceeds the number from any other State, but little weight can be given this comparison, owing to the want of thorough investigation of the subject of windfalls in other States. From a careful investigation of the origin of tornadoes and their geographical distribution there is every reason to believe that these storms were as frequent and violent two hundred years ago as now. Moreover, there appears to be no cause for any unusual change in the annual frequency of tornadoes for a like period to come.

When trying to escape from a tornado, never run to the northeast, east or southeast. Never take refuge in a forest or a grove of trees, or near any object that may be overturned by the wind. A frame building is safer than one built of brick or stone. The former is more elastic and holds together longer; the latter goes down in the first crash, and the debris is whirled into a heap in the center of the foundation. In a frame structure the cellar is the safest place, but in a brick or stone building it is the most perilous. In the former case the debris is carried away from the foundation, while in the latter instance the cellar is filled with it. The tornado cave offers absolute security to life and limb, and no means of protection can replace it for that purpose. As regards protection to property, no building can be made sufficiently large, strong, high or low to resist the force of the tornado's vortex. There is no changing the path of the tornado by the employment of explosives, or by any artificial barrier. To contemplate the dispersion of a cloud by the use of any electrical contrivance is also idle. All buildings should be constructed as would be done without the knowledge of the tornado, and then protected by legitimate insurance. Protection must be accomplished by organized capital, the safety of one being assured by the legitimate and successful co-operation of many. The writer strongly advocated this method of protection during his tornado investigations in the West in 1879, and now several million dollars' worth of property are thus insured every year.—Forum.

New Way of Draining Soil.

The planting of eucalyptus trees for the purpose of draining the soil in malarial districts is one which has met with some success. The Trefontane convent at Rome had become positively uninhabitable, owing to the malaria which attacked—in many instances with fatal results—its inmates. Senator Torelli presented a bill proposing that the estate annexed to the convent should be planted with eucalyptus as an experiment against malaria. The bill was passed and the Trappist monks planted thousands of eucalyptus plants of all species on the estate. But still the malaria raged, and several monks suffered severely. It was, however, remarked that it was only the monks who had their cells looking on the central cloister who fell victims to the malaria. This suggested the idea of planting four eucalyptus trees at the four corners of the cloister. The plants, sheltered from the winds, soon grew to a great height. The immediate result was the complete draining of the soil in the cloister and the disappearance of malarial fever from the convent.—Chicago Herald.

Sequoia National Park.

In regard to the bill which has passed Congress creating a National park, to be known as Sequoia Park, the San Francisco Call remarks: "The land to be inclosed in the park will cover 50,000 acres. It embraces nearly the whole of the tract which is well known to the people of Tulare as the region of the Big Trees; is situated some forty-five miles northeast of Visalia, at an elevation of from 6,000 to 7,000 feet, and spreads almost without a break from Kings river to Kahweah river. In Mariposa, Calaveras and Humboldt, the giant sequoias occur in clumps in the midst of forests of other growths. In Tulare they are almost continuous; the traveler can journey all day on horseback without ever losing sight of them. They are nearly, if not quite, the most gigantic of the sequoias; trees have been seen which measured 100 feet and over in circumference at the base and over 300 feet in height."

—Stewed Onions.—First, select young onions and put them into boiling water and stew them fifteen minutes; drain off the water and pour a cup of cold milk over the onions. Let them stew in this until tender; season to taste and thicken the milk with a tablespoonful of butter rolled in one of flour, then cook five minutes longer.—N. Y. Observer.

—British Assisted Immigrant—"Beg pardon, sir, but couldn't you 'elp a poor feller as has just come hover from Lunnon, sir." Howell Gibbon (who has spent a year's income there in two months)—"Devilish expensive place, London; I don't wonder you left it. I went broke there myself this season."—Puck.

—Bessie—"Papa, what is a shock of hay?" Papa (who has not been in the country since he was twelve years old)—"Ah, er—it's when a barn is struck by lightning, my pet."

—Mrs. Fussy (reading)—"Reasonable rates offered to permanent parties." Mr. Fussy—"Humph! Is it a graveyard they're advertising?"—Texas Siftings.

THE COMPARISON OF NOTES.

Miss Tablette—The wretch! and so he has been proposing to both of us?
Miss Brenton—It seems so.
Miss Tablette—I wish we could think of some horrible way to punish him
Miss Brenton—I have it!
Miss Tablette—What is it?
Miss Brenton—You marry him, dear.
—Judge.

DANGER AHEAD.

DANGER SIGNALS.

There are numberless people who do not call themselves sick, and yet who feel weak, nervous, languid or tired; they have lost their vim, power of endurance and ambition to work. They feel miserable, not because they are actually sick, but because they are not well.

These are NERVOUS SUFFERERS, and the feelings and sensations they experience are the Danger Signals—Nature's warning that their nerve force and vital power are at a low ebb and must be replenished and built up, or soon actual disease will ravage the system. YOU NEGLECT THESE SYMPTONS AT YOUR PERIL! Numerous sufferers complain that they are weak, tired and exhausted, ; that they have a poor or variable appetite, no strength, no nerve; they become irritable, cross, blue and discouraged. In some cases there are pains and aches in various parts of the body, and there is often indigestion, dyspepsia, belching of wind, dull, cloudy head, and general dispirited feeling. Sleepless, restless, wakeful nights follow. The brain tires easily, and there may be a tendency to drowsiness during the day. Neglect of these symptoms results in excessive nervous prostration or paralysis, with numbness, trembling, cold feet and legs, prickling sensation and weakness and weariness of the limbs.

Thousands become prostrated, paralyzed or insane by neglecting the first symptoms, not knowing that the result of such neglect will be fatal.

Look to the danger signals in time, nervous sufferers, to avert the dread results. Remember that it is not only your health, but your life and reason which are at stake. You know that you are weak, sick, exhausted and rapidly running down, and you know, just as well, or you should know, from what you hear and read, that the great nerve cure, Dr. Greene's Nervura, will certainly and positively cure you of these symptoms, and save your health, save your reason, save your life. It is the greatest and most wonderful of Nature's remedies, is purely vegetable, and the best nerve invigorator and health restorer ever discovered.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

THE AILING TRAMP.

He Had Consumption and Was in Search of a Milder Climate.

HE otherday I was at my uncle's, near Niagara Falls, in Canada, and had hardly arrived when he said:

"Now, Nevvy, you'll be wandering around more or less, and I want to caution you about an old ram I took up as an estray the other week. He's down in the lot where the gravel pit is, and just as sure as you give him a show he'll be the death of you. I saw him knock a cow off her feet at one bang, and I wouldn't go into the lot for fifty dollars."

Next day I skirted the fences and found the old chap anxious for business. I didn't give him an opening, however, but somebody else did. I was standing in the barn with uncle, when he suddenly exclaimed:

"Great Joseph! but there's a tramp in the gravel pit lot. That ram will smash him to pulp in two minutes!"

He shouted, waved his hat, and shouted again, but the tramp was a quarter of a mile away, and walking with his head down. The ram was lying down in the pit, and the yelling brought him out. We saw him scramble up the bank, and my uncle gasped out:

"Git a hoss hitched up to go for the undertaker, for that tramp won't be alive two minutes later!"

He was, though. The ram came at him on an angle, and he caught sight of the animal when about ten rods off. He wheeled to the right, stood still, and the ram got within ten feet, and then sailed through the air on a straight line to strike him. Next instant the tramp had him by the horns, and with a twist and a jerk he broke his neck with a snap. He tarried to be sure that the ram was dead, and then came on, climbed the fence, and said to us:

"Gentlemen, you see before you a man who has been unfortunate. I have consumption and am hardly able to stand. I want to get to a milder climate as soon as possible."—N. Y. Sun.

Startled Him Badly.

Down below Natchez, while the boat was running in close to the left-hand bank and had stopped her wheels to avoid a big tree floating in an eddy, we saw a native sitting on a stump fishing. He sat bent over, hat over his eyes, and there was scarcely a movement to tell that he was alive. We had a smart Aleck with us on the promenade deck, and he had no sooner caught sight of the native than he called to one of the deckhands to toss him up a potato. A peck or more of the tubers were lying loose near a pile of sacks, and one was quickly tossed up.

"Now see me startle him," said Smart Aleck, as he swung his arm for a throw.

The distance was only about a hundred feet, and his aim was so true that the potato landed on the native's head with a dull thud. His motions were so quick that we couldn't agree as to how he did it, but in about three seconds he had dropped his fish-pole, pulled a revolver as long as his arm, and fired at Smart Aleck. The bullet bored a hole in his silk hat just above his hair, and the young man sank down in a heap and fainted dead away. When we restored him to his senses he carefully felt of the top of his head; looked back at the fisherman, and absently asked:

"Did she explode both boilers or only one?"—N. Y. Sun.

Archaeology from the Ark.

There is a town on the shore of Lake Ontario where dwells a widowed clergyman, who boards at the house of a middle-aged woman who always knows every thing and never fails to show it. One day at dinner the minister began to talk about a young boy whose acquaintance he had made—one who seemed to him more than ordinarily bright.

"Why," he said, "he was greatly interested in history, and even in archaeology he had made great progress. He's got a collection of archaeological specimens."

"Archaeology?" said the landlady. "Oh yes! all about the ark."—N. Y. Tribune.

The old family physician has come to make a friendly call and is surprised to find the young wife in tears.

"Why, my dear child, what is the matter?"

"Oh," she sobs, "Algie looks so sick, and I've tried and tried to get him to talk to you about it, for I know you'd persuade him to do the right thing; but he says there's plenty of time, and he won't take any care of himself, and I'm so blue!"

"There, there!" says the old friend, much touched at this exhibition of wifely devotion; "I'll call around at his office and get him to talking, and then advise him what to take to build him up."

A REDWOOD GROVE.

Plan For a Public Park That Will Be Unlike the Others.

The newspapers have got hold of a story that our townsman, Colonel Armstrong, is to present the State with a tract of redwood land in Sonoma County for a park. We made inquiry of the donor and found the rumor correct, only that he does not intend to give it to the State or to any particular municipality or society, but to trustees, for the use of the people, for posterity and for all time. This magnificent gift of 600 acres lies in Big Bottom, near the extremity of the branch of the San Francisco & North Pacific railway, about one mile from the river at Guerneville in Sonoma County, and accessible by rail from San Francisco, which is seventy miles distant.

It is the last considerable tract of these big trees in this region or so near the city. Of course there are other scopes of scattered timber in the hills, scrubby in growth and out of the way. But this is a grand forest of monstrous trees, much on level land, bordered by the side of the Mount Jackson range, with tree trunks from five to fifteen feet in diameter and more than three hundred feet high, intermingled with various other sorts of growth, occasional firs, laurel and other woods adding to the beauty of the spot.

The donor says the gift will not be fully appreciated for the next fifty years. Then, when no other spot like it can be found in reach, his motive will be understood. The trustees will be selected about as follows: Perhaps the chairman of the Golden Gate park trustees, of San Francisco; the landscape gardener of Central park, New York City; the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California, and a local trustee in this county. These gentlemen and their successors forever will have control, under but few restrictions in the deed of trust. One will be that no timber shall ever be cut or trimmed, unless it be blown down. Another condition will be that the park shall not be a place for encampment for fear of fire, and shall only be visited in daylight.

There will be drives, paths and the like, as well as many ornamental structures, and a gateway and fountains in keeping with its purpose, for which a sufficient endowment is to be placed in the hands of the trustees. The details can not be given for publication, nor, in fact, are they completed. But it is understood that some of the work will be done in the time of the owner, and that he will retain control for the present and as long as he lives. Out of the 600 acres about 200, with valuable improvements, orchards, buildings, etc., are being put into condition for yielding a considerable income, and much of it is as fine land as lies in Russian river bottom.

After its income may no longer be required by the family it is provided that it shall become part of the park, and the trustees will be directed to use such portion as may be convenient to erect glass houses for propagating strange plants, flowers, trees and shrubs, to be used in bordering the drives and ornamenting the ground. It will be seen from the sketch that the plan is for posterity, and it will take a long while to work it out, though in the main the natural features of a wild forest are intended to predominate always.—Cloverdale Reveille.

CULTIVATING THOUGHT

How to Become Superior to Adverse Circumstances and Hardship.

It has been said that it requires more art to be a good listener than a conversationalist. What an incentive to eloquence is an attentive listener! What triumphs have come before the footlights through an enthusiastic audience! What symphonic poems have been sung upon instruments whose swaying bows were guided by sympathetic, silent listeners!

How beautiful, indeed, is thought! However hard and mean one's toil, fancies can rise, such as might have had their birth midst woods and flowers. How many brilliant writers have been utter failures as talkers; and, alas! how many talkers would have been considered wise, but for the expos their conversation makes! Men can not all be authors, but they can be thinkers. On the street, in the car, we can pursue our silent thought, till time and space become oblivion—till, as Lowell has said:

"What we long for, that we are,
For one transcendent moment;
Until the Present, poor and bare,
Can make its sneering comment."

Ever superior to adverse circumstances, oblivious to pain and hardship, can we become by cultivating thought. We all know how subtle is its influence, though a silent worker. The sudden impulse to speak of previously forgotten subjects has often been traced to the effect of some contiguous mind. The presage of some event is often felt by persons given to "presentiments."

It is only through persistent, untiring thought that grand results are born. All are prone to look upon inventions as spontaneous creations; but there is no class of men so absorbed in one idea as inventors—making every thing and every body subservient to their moods, till, at last, the result is given to the wondering world; and the inventor again plunges into seclusion, and the world and its surprise are lost to him as he thinks out another so-called "discovery." Then, in the literary world there have been many inspirations of the moment, but earnest, deep thought has preceded, and, at least, indirectly brought the great production.

The supremacy of the mind has become an absorbing movement toward treatment of disease. And every conscientious physician knows how great is the subject on of the body to the mind. Through our thoughts we make for ourselves a sphere, from which emanates unconsciously a power for good or evil.

"Life's more than breath and the quick round of blood.
We live in the nights, not breaths. He most lives who thinks most—lives in one hour more than in years do some."

Then, let us think, then speak; think, then act; and life will round itself to higher meanings—nobler ends!—N. Y. Ledger.

A GREEDY CORMORANT.

How a Big House Absorbs Income, Comfort and Happiness.

There was a story in the newspapers the other day about a Massachusetts minister who resigned his charge because some one had given his parish a fine house and his parishioners wanted him to live in it. His salary was too small, he said, to admit of his living in a big house, and he would not do it. He was even deaf to the proposal that he should share the proposed tenement with the sewing societies and clubs of his church, and when the matter came to a serious issue, he relinquished his charge and sought a new field of usefulness. The situation was an amusing instance of the embarrassment of riches. Let no one to whom restricted quarters may have grown irksome, and who covets larger dimensions of shelter, be too hasty in deciding that the minister was wrong. Did you ever see the house that Hawthorne lived in at Lenox? Did you ever see Emerson's house at Concord? They are good houses for Americans to know and remember. They permitted thought.

A big house is one of the greediest cormorants which can light upon a little income. Backs may go threadbare and stomachs may worry along on indifferent fillings, but a house will have things, though its occupants go without. It is rarely complete, and constantly tempts the imagination to flights in brick and dreams in lath and plaster. It develops annual thirsts for paint and wall-paper; the plumbing in it must be kept in order on pain of death. Whatever price is put on coal it has to be heated in winter; and if it is rural or suburban, the grass about it must be cut even though funerals in the family have to be put off for the mowing. If the tenants are not rich enough to hire people to keep their house clean they must do it themselves, for there is no excuse that will pass among housekeepers for a dirty house. The master of a house too big for him may expect to spend the leisure which might be made intellectually or spiritually profitable in acquiring and putting into practice fag ends of the arts of the plumber, the bell-hanger, the locksmith, the gasfitter, and the carpenter. Presently he will know how to do everything that can be done in the house except enjoy himself. He will learn about taxes, too, and water rates, and how such abominations as sewers or new pavements are always liable to accrue at his expense. As for the mistress, she will be a slave to carpets and curtains, wallpaper, painters, and women who come in by the day to clean. She will be lucky if she gets a chance to say her prayers, and thrice and four times happy when she can read a book or visit with her friends. To live in a big house may be a luxury, provided that one has a full set of money and an enthusiastic housekeeper in one's family, but to scrimp in a big house is a miserable business. Yet such is human folly, that for a man to refuse to live in a house because it is too big for him is such an exceptional exhibition of sense that it becomes the favorite paragraph of a day in the newspapers.—Scribner's Magazine.

PRODUCE TRADE SECRETS.

Philadelphia Dealer Throws Some Light on Inside Manipulations.

"We deal in eggs, butter and lard, and I am an expert in testing and grading all three," said a merchant to a Philadelphia Inquirer reporter. "There is much fraud in the butter business. We print a great deal of tub butter. The contents of five or ten tubs are dumped out on a big table. The outside has become strong and dirty. This we scrape off and sell to the fancy cake bakers at from five to eleven cents a pound, according to its condition. The balance is reworked, resalted, made into pound prints and sold as the best print butter.

"Quite a quantity of what is known as mill or paddle worked butter comes from the West. Small farmers there, who have no ice, get ten or fifteen pounds of butter on hand in rolls, and after awhile it becomes strong. There are firms in Chicago that have men out all the time buying up this rancid butter. It is put into a machine something like an old-fashioned paint mill and ground up, after which it is worked, colored with Danish butter coloring, made into prints and sold as 'fresh creamery butter.' There is not a dairyman in the State of Pennsylvania that does not use butter coloring of some sort. We sell thousands of pounds of the coloring every year. Some large dairies buy it by the barrel.

"A great many farmers in Bucks and Chester Counties buy ten, fifteen and some of them as high as one hundred tubs of our old strong butter, for which they pay about fifteen cents. They take it home, rework and resalt it, mix in fresh butter in the proportion of about one-third, color it, make it into prints and sell it in the markets for thirty-five cents a pound, doubling their money by the transaction. Farmers frequently come to us on Friday night, buy tub butter at twenty-five cents a pound, print it up and sell it the next day for dairy butter at thirty-five cents.

"There is not much adulteration in lard, but one pound of the country article is worth two of the refined, from which all of the oil has been extracted. You can distinguish between the two by a simple test. In warm weather country lard will become soft and run to oil. That which has been refined always remains hard."

Gloomy Times Ahead.

"Maria," said the capitalist, hoarsely, "do you think you could give up this beautiful home and go to live in a cheap flat?"

"Why, John," exclaimed his wife, trembling with apprehension, "what is the matter?"

The broken man laid a document before her, bowed his head, and groaned aloud.

It was the bill for the children's new schoolbooks.—Chicago Tribune.

—A Biddeford, Me., man offered to pay his barber twenty cents if the barber would shave him in less than a minute, provided the barber would do it for nothing if the operation consumed more than that time. The job was done in fifty-four seconds. The victim paid the barber the twenty cents.

"OH, RATS!"

An Exchange of Pleasantries Ends Just as It Should Have Ended.

OUD blew the night winds. Monotonously rasped the early autumn katydid. And yearningly yowled the abandoned and shameless cat on the roof of the coal-shed.

"Maria," observed Mr. Billus, as he leaned back in his easy-chair and looked contemplatively at his wife, "your nose reminds me of an interesting novel, my dear."

"Why so, John?" she inquired.

"Because it is red to the very end."

Hoarsely murmured the night winds, perseveringly scraped the katydid and wilder grew the wail of the melancholy cat on the coal-shed.

Mrs. Billus sat in silence, listening to the weird voices of the night, her hands folded in sublime contentment and her eyes wandering from her husband's countenance to the shadow of his profile moving up and down on the wall as the flame in the cozy grate opposite fitfully rose and fell.

"John," she said at last, "the color of your nose reminds me somehow of the government of Louisiana."

"In what respect, Maria?"

"Because," she answered, softly, "it takes a lot o' rye to keep it up."

Mr. Billus thoughtfully rubbed his nose and listened awhile in pensive silence to the mournful night winds, the voice of the insistent katydid, and the despairing yowl of the ostracised cat in the back-yard.

"And that reminds me, Maria," he said, reaching out for another chair to rest his feet on, "that if I hadn't married you, my dear, you would probably have been for the rest of your life like a lottery ticket after the drawing."

"Why?"

"Because you would have been all torn up, my dear."

"It wouldn't have made any difference, John," said Mrs. Billus, sweetly, "I drew a blank, anyhow."

"You did, my love," said Mr. Billus, his voice trembling with tenderness, "a blank fool."

"And it would have been better for me, perhaps," she went on, plaintively, "if I had been like a newspaper with lottery advertisements in it."

"Why so, madam?"

"Because," replied Mrs. Billus, looking placidly into the fire, "then I should have been excluded from the males."

Mr. Billus got up and went out, and as Mrs. Billus sat looking dreamily at the dancing flames and listening to the sobbing night winds and the guttural refrain of the katydid she could distinctly hear Mr. Billus swearing and throwing stones at the cat.—Chicago Tribune.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Sleeplessness Cured. 4

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

E. FRANK, Pastor.
St. Severin, Keyleron P. O., Pa.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.

I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epileptic fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful.

Utah House, 300, 6th Av. N. LENHARD.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

HELP FOR NEW YORK

Large Gold Shipment To-Day from Europe.

$3,000,000 ON ONE STEAMSHIP.

Wall Street Cheered by the News and Stocks Are Advancing.

Bankers Report a Much Better Feeling Throughout the Country—Conferences of Financial Men to Arrange Easier Methods of Exchange—Failure of a Firm in Boston With Liabilities of $1,000,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Gold to the amount of $3,000,000 will start from Europe this week for New York. Nearly all of this will come by the steamship Majestic, which sails to-day. The gold will tend very strongly to relieve the money stringency in this country.

The above news gave strength to the financial world, which it has not had for days. Stocks were easier and advanced all along the line. The rate of money was very much lower; there was an apparent dawning of confidence once more which produced a decided feeling of relief among the men who, last Saturday, were willing to make any sacrifice for a temporary accommodation, and bankers reported a much better feeling through the country.

There were rumors all day of conferences and many sorts of meetings between financial men of all sorts to arrange easier methods of exchange and to form syndicates for the purchase of fabulous sums of gold in Europe. But none of these rumors could be run down with any success. The only thing which resembles a conference of any character was a sort of informal meeting of bank presidents in the Clearing House immediately after the regular morning conference. At this talk there was discussed the advisability of purchasing a large amount of exchange in London and importing gold therefor, but almost as soon as the subject was broached it was decided that it would be much more advisable to wait a few days to see exactly what effect the present shipment of gold would have on the financial situation.

FAILURE OF A BIG FIRM.

Whitten, Burdett & Young Have Liabilities of $1,000,000.

BOSTON, Dec. 10.—The assignee of Whitten, Burdett & Young states that no definite statement of the firm's liabilities or assets can be made now. A gentleman who should be well informed expressed his belief that the liabilities of the firm would be over a million. Six months ago the firm owed that amount, but showed an apparent surplus of $446,000.

Another gentleman somewhat conversant with the affairs of the firm said it was understood that by vigorous effort the indebtedness had been reduced some $300,000, in which case the liabilities must be somewhat under $1,000,000.

Liabilities Over $400,000.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 10.—The liabilities of Messrs. Nightingale Bros. & Knight, silk manufacturers of this place, who made an assignment to Judge Barkalow, are now stated to be not less than $400,000, and their assets, it is believed, amount to only about half that sum.

JUGIGO EATS AGAIN.

The Japanese Murderer Has Thought Better of Starving Himself.

SING SING, N. Y., Dec. 10.—The Japanese murderer, Shibuya Jugigo, has regained his former good condition. His sullen manner and silence have thoroughly disappeared, and now he has a smile and a nod for the prison officials and his keepers.

Lawyer John A. Heintzelman, his counsel, who intends to make an application in the Supreme Court for a commission to examine Jugigo as to his insanity has not yet appeared at the prison.

The prison physician, Dr. Hiram Barker, does not think there is any need for such an arplication. He said: "We examined Jugigo thoroughly and satisfied ourselves that there was not the least sign of insanity. He was normal in every organ of his body; not the least sign of disease. Before Jugigo began to fast on bread and milk he had a very hearty appetite. He goes to bed early every night after reading his prayer-book and sleeps soundly. In the morning he gets up generally about half-past eight. I have every confidence that there is no ground for a plea of insanity."

Jugigo's keepers say he is very quiet, but will nod to them when spoken to. Murderer Trezzard's father, who lives in Brooklyn, visited him yesterday.

THE SABBATH UNION.

Resolutions Presented for Closing the World's Fair on Sunday.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10.—The greater part of the morning session of the Sabbath Union was occupied in discussing a new constitution and in the election of officers. The discussions revealed that there had been serious disagreements among certain of the officers, and numerous personalities were indulged in.

D., President of the Worcester University, Ohio, who opposed Col. Shepard for the office, received 10 votes to Col. Shepard's 24.

Des Moines whs selected as the place for the holding of the next annual convention.

The Capital Police Arrest a Dangerous Crank.

WANTS TO KILL THE PRESIDENT

A Movement to Purchase All the Surplus Silver of the Country.

Mr. Dunnell Introduces the Apportionment Bill—Senators Discuss a Cloture Rule—New Postmaster for the House—Gen. Grant's Tomb Will be in New York—Mr. Quay and the Elections Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The police have in custody an alleged crank, named Edward S. Miller, who was formerly a government clerk. His reckless manner of talking about killing the President led to his arrest. A writ of lunatico inquirendo, addressed to the alleged crank, had been issued from court, and officers have been in quest of him since yesterday. He has been confined in asylums on one or two occasions.

In the year 1880 Miller was sent on some official duty to West Virginia, and while there it is thought he suffered from sunstroke or some similar trouble that left his mind unbalanced.

He returned the following year, and after the assassination of President Garfield he imagined that certain Democratic Senators had conspired to have President Arthur killed in order that Mr. Bayard should succeed him in the Presidential chair. Acting under this singular hallucination, he began writing letters and sending them to all the prominent Republican officials, including President Arthur.

FREE COINAGE OF SILVER.

A Movement to Purchase All the Surplus Silver in the United States.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—It is stated on the authority of a Cabinet officer that Ministers Reid at Paris, Porter at Rome, and Phelps, who has just sailed for Berlin, have been instructed to confer with the respective Ministers of Finance, representing the various countries to which they are accredited, relative to the formation of some kind of an arrangement, which will result in the practical free coinage of silver at as early a date as possible. These instructions have been issued upon the request of a large dumber of free coinage advocates in Congress, after extended conferences during the past two or three days with the leading financiers of New York, Philadelphia and other Eastern cities.

This movement has gone so far as to result in the formulation of a bill which provides for the purchase of all the surplus silver produced in the United States with a view to permanently and speedily taking silver out of the hands of speculators, who have been playing havoc with the money market.

The bill provides further that when silver bullion is on a parity with gold—worth $1.29 an ounce—the President may by proclamation authorize the free coinage of silver. The issuance of a proclamation is made conditional upon the success of negotiations with the principal foreign governments, which negotiations are to be left open to our ministers abroad under the direction of the State Department and the President. It is believed that England, France, Germany, Italy and Belgium will come into the alliance.

Senator Plumb introduced a free coinage bill in the Senate to-day carrying out the provisions outlined above.

The Apportionment Bill Introduced.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Mr. Dunnell, chairman of the House Committee of the Eleventh Census, introduced in the House a bill, making an apportionment of Representatives in Congress among the several States. The bill provides that after the third day of March, 1893, the House shall be composed of 356 Members. The representation of some of the States is increased as follows: Alabama, 1; Arkansas, 2; California, 1; Colorado, 1; Georgia, 1; Illinois, 2; Kansas, 1; Massachusetts, 1; Michigan, 1; Minnesota, 2; Missouri, 1; Nebraska, 3; New Jersey, 1; Oregon, 1; Pennsylvania, 2; Tennessee, 2; Texas, 2; Washington, 1; Wisconsin, 1. The representation from the other States will remain unchanged.

Wants a List of Uncle Sam's Bankers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Congressman Amos Cummings of New York has introduced in the House a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish Congress with a list of banks now United States depositories, amount of deposits in each bank, how deposited and the rate of interest each draws.

Senator Quay's Amendment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Senator Quay said that he had not prepared a substitute for the Federal Election bill, but he expected to prepare one which would be in accord with the views of the Republican party but would be perhaps more practical than the measure now under consideration.

IS DR. KNIFFIN MARRIED?

A Report that the Typewriter Has Become His Wife.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 10.—For some days it has been reported that Dr. Arthur Kniffin, the dentist whose wife was murdered in her home in this city about a year ago, had married Miss Emma Purcell, a typewriter, a relative of Mrs. Kniffin.

Mrs. Kniffin's death was mysterious, and has never been cleared up. Miss Purcell was sleeping with Mrs. Kniffin on the night the latter met her death, Dr. Kniffin being away from home.

A reporter saw Dr. Kniffin and asked him if there was any truth in the report that he and Miss Purcell had been married. He flushed up, and, becoming indignant, said that he would neither deny nor affirm the report. He declared that he had been persecuted by the newspapers. He said that he had concluded to remain silent for the present, but in time would speak, perhaps, in a manner that would surprise his enemies.

The report that has been circulated in Trenton is that Dr. Kniffin and Miss Purcell have been married for some time and have been living in New Brunswick.

BROADWAY, N. J., Dec. 10.—Nothing is known here of the reported marriage of Dr. Kniffin and Miss Purcell. The girl's relatives refuse to discuss the matter. The report is generally discredited here.

THE STRIKE MAY SPREAD.

All Union Railroad Men at Pittsburg May Quit Work.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 10.—The officials of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad claim that freight is being moved over their road by the regular trains, and that the blockade in the yards has been lifted. This statement the switchmen deny.

Frank Sweeney, of Chicago, Grand Master Workman of the Switchmen's Union, has arrived in this city, and a meeting of the switchmen will be held and the situation discussed.

All of the members of the union employed on the railroads entering Pittsburg have signified their readiness to quit work in the interest of the discharged Baltimore & Ohio switchmen upon a moment's notice.

Supply of Natural Gas Short.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 9.—A large amount of money has been spent in building natural gas pipe lines to Columbus, Dayton, Springfield, Troy, Sidney, Piqua and other manufacturing centers in central Ohio. The owners of factories in all of these cities have just been notified that the natural gas companies can no longer supply them with gas and will only fulfil private contracts. It is feared the supply will be inadequate even for private consumers.

The Great Chess Contest.

NEW YORK, Dec 10.—The first game of chess between the champions, Messrs. Steinitz, of New York, and Gunsberg, of London, was played last night and resulted in a draw. The position was slightly in favor of Gunsberg. The only witnesses were the 40 gentlemen who subscribed the sum of $1,000. It is probable that a few games of the series will be played in public. The next game will be played to-morrow.

PARNELL IN DUBLIN

The Irish Leader Receives an Enthusiastic Welcome.

HE SPEAKS TO THE BIG CROWD.

Escorted to the Mansion House as the Guest of the Lord Mayor.

Bands of Music and a Torchlight Procession To-Night in His Honor—He Will Deliver an Address in the Rotunda—Sir John Pope Hennessey Takes the Field Against Him in Kilkenny.

DUBLIN, Dec. 10.—Mr. Parnell arrived here to-day accompanied by 200 supporters as a body guard, and a number of other deputations, who went to Kingstown on a special train this morning to welcome him on his arrival from London and escort him to Dublin.

When the Irish chieftain arrived here there was a great crowd to greet him, and he was given a royal welcome. They cheered him with wild enthusiasm, and he was forced to make a few remarks. He said:

"You shall have no cause to regret that you stood by me, and you will be with me to the end, and together we will win for our country what God has determined she shall get.

"Something approaching to a fusion has been and is now taking place. This is what it is necessary for me to check and prevent, and for this I ask the help of our race. It might have been difficult to draw the line between a self-respecting alliance and a dangerous fusion, but that line has now been clearly marked. It was passed by Mr. Gladstone one month ago, when he suggested, through the mouth of Mr. Morley, for my consideration, whether the pledges which I had made to my constituents in Cork in 1880 were any longer binding and whether it would be possible for me or any of the members of my party to take office in the next administration. The subsequent attempt on Mr. Gladstone's part to interfere with the management of the Irish party and to veto the election of their leader has further revealed the mind of this accomplished strategist, and has shown to me fully, and to all partially, the danger upon the brink of which we stood and still stand.

"Mr friends, I thank you for this cordial welcome, and will address you more fully to-night."

Mr. Parnell was then escorted to the Mansion House, where he will be the guest of the Lord Mayor.

This evening a torchlight procession will be held in his honor, in which all the bands in the city will participate. The procession will escort Mr. Parnell to the Rotunda, where, as has already been announced, he will deliver an address.

THE KILKENNY FIGHT.

The Feeling in the District at Fever Heat.

DUBLIN, Dec. 10.—Mr. Parnell will take a personal part in the canvass of North Kilkenny, during the coming campaign for the election of a Member of Parliament. He is much cut up by the decision of Mr. Pope Hennessy to stand as an anti-Parnellite candidate, especially as it was Mr. Parnell who brought him forward as a candidate for the vacant seat.

It is probable that the fight at Kilkenny will be a sort of text for all the future fights in the various Irish constituencies, and for this reasons both sides will prepare with great care for this initial presentation of their respective cases to the people. The feeling in the district is at fever heat, and a more fully representative locality for the first appeal to the Irish people could hardly have chanced to offer itself.

Mr. Hennessy's action in repudiating Parnell, for whom he is known to have a great personal admiration, is thought to show the strength of the Catholic influence in the district. The extent to which this whole quarrel may resolve itself into a religious strife is, many think, too little taken into account in the current comments on the situation.

Davitt Waiting for the Envoys.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Michael Davitt is very anxious for the return of Dillon and O'Brien. In an interview he says that it makes but little difference whether these gentlemen go at once to prison or not, as is expected; their mere setting foot on Irish soil will, in his opinion, inaugurate a revolution in the sentiments of their countrymen that will cause a change at once violent and overwhelming.

Harrington Will Leave on Saturday.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Mr. Timothy Harrington has expressed a desire to have it understood that apart from politics the very best feeling existed between himself and the other Irish envoys. He still adhered to Mr. Parnell, and believed the sympathy of the majority of the American people was with that leader. Mr. Harrington will sail for Liverpool on Saturday.

They Miss the Whip.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—One of the most serious losses which the Irish party has suffered is that of the services of the experienced whip, Richard Power, Member for Waterford City. He remains with Mr. Parnell, and his defection from the party is apt to be a marked annoyance to it, as he is extremely popular in all parts of the House.

What Gladstone Says.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Mr. Gladstone has written a letter regarding the crisis in the Irish Nationalist party, in which he says there appears to be no question affecting himself, but only an unexplained contradiction between the Parnell of November, 1890, and the Parnell of all former dates since the Hawarden interview.

LEFT WITH HER FORTUNE.

A Kentucky Belle Loses Her Husband and $70,000.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The mysterious disappearance of Jomando Uberte Lavero with nearly $70,000 in cash in his possession is puzzling the brain of Mr. John A. Balestier, a lawyer at No. 31 Nassau street. The case was reported to the attorney by the pretty wife of the missing Spaniard.

Mrs. Lavero was Miss Cecile Watkins, of Maplewood Manor, Ky. Her father was a well known breeder of horses. He died a year ago, leaving a valuable stock farm and $40,000 in money in the First National Bank of Louisville.

The shock of her father's death had so affected Miss Watkins that she was sent to the home of a friend, Miss Lulu De Montano, of No. 417 Walnut street, Louisville. She remained for some time and had many suitors, among them Jomando Uberto Lavero, tall and handsome. He said his father was a wealthy nobleman in Spain, and had large estates in Barcelona. His love was reciprocated, and they were married in Paris by Rev. Dr. Cockerill on October 14 last.

Mrs. Lavero told Lawyer Balestier that she gave her husband a power of attorney, and he sold the stock farm for $30,000, and drawing the money that was to her credit in the First National Bank at Louisville, he brought her to New York. Miss Lulu De Montana came with them. Soon after their arrival Mr. Lavero received a cable from his father calling him to Spain. He told his wife that he had better go alone, as his father did not know that he was married. She consented, and he left her, taking some $69,000.

Mrs. Lavero has endeavored to learn when he sailed and by what line, but without success, she says, and, fearing that something might be wrong, she appealed to Mr. Belestier.

Having told this much, the charming young woman added that the mystery was made the more trying shortly after Mr. Lavero's departure by the disappearance of Miss Lulu De Montano. On a pillow in her room was found a note, in which, among other things, was the following:

"I have gone away, away with the man I love. You know I come of a passionate race, and will give up all for the man I love."

All the Holidays Gorgeously Arrayed.

A charming scene is the interior of The Crescent, where the Bazar of Holidays for the benefit of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union building fund is now in progress. The affair has many special attractions, and gives promise of an abundant financial harvest. The various festivals of the year are represented by interesting booths, which already have been noticed in detail, together with the different committees, in THE PRESS. The most unique, and one of the best attractions, is a large, heavily-laden van, drawn by a dapple wooden horse, and driven by a funny stuffed man in a white hat, representing Moving Day. The motto of the van is "It's cheaper to move than to pay rent." One of the funny sights of the bazar is to watch the men recognize the driver as an old acquaintance and hold protracted conversations with him. Old Father Time attends the bazar regularly, clad in a rusty scythe, an abundance of wrinkles, a profuse growth of snowy locks, a fireman's shirt, and an old pair of trousers, and accompanied by an hour-glass too big to be carried. At the pop-corn booth a handsome young fellow deftly constructed of corn husks and corn stalks presides. The art gallery is a famous collection of such things as "The Home of the Skipper" (Schweitzer), and "A Hard Case" (B. I. Valve). The cooking class fills orders for dainty viands while you wait.

The people have a merry time promenading over the smooth and spacious floor, and patronizing the several well-managed departments.

THE MELOPOIA'S MUSICALE.

It Opens the Union County Country Club's Casino, and Charms the Souls of a Large Audience in Evening Dress.

The first private musicale of the Melopoia Society of this city, took place at The Casino last evening. It was the event of the season, so far, and also the inaugural entertainment of the building it was given in.

The array of talent imported for the occasion exceeded anything of the kind that had gone before. Emil Fischer, who receives $350 a night for three nights a week in German opera at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, sang, as did also Miss Clary, who had been announced in private as a "phenomenal contralto from Kentucky." Miss Blanche Taylor, soprano, and Mr. Hartdegen, the violincello virtuoso. Besides, Mr. Chapman conducted, and Mr. Venino—who is more deservingly appreciated and more entirely enjoyed than any other pianist who ever appears in Plainfield—played.

The affair was a thorough success—socially and musically. The hall was filled to its limit, evening dress was the rule (as announced on the tickets), and everyone was in such excellent spirits that there was almost a continued round of applause from the time the chorus began to assemble on the stage, till the closing of the concert. Because of this epidemic of gratification, an excuse may be found for the unnecessary and uncalled for applause by the chorus of its conductor. It was very much out of place. What would the audience think if the chorus of the "Merry Monarch" loudly clapped and clapped Francis Wilson's entree? And yet Wilson is just as funny as Chapman.

The Casino is a very attractive room, although not yet entirely finished; and the acoustics are very fine, though at times Herr Fischer's voice and the chorus hardly had head room. The programme was as follows, and every soloist was rapturously encored:

   SOLO BY HERR FISCHER

Miss Blanche Taylor, who has never sung here before, is a lyric soprano, with a pleasing voice of good quality, especially on the medium tones. Both her solo and the duet with Miss Clary, received a recall. Miss Mary Louise Clary is a young contralto who has recently come to New York to study. She has naturally a wonderful voice, deep, rich and pure in tone, and which with cultivation will assist her to such a future as has been granted to few. Herr Fischer was the lion of the evening. The many lovers of German opera in this city need no introduction. The easy way with which he took a low C, captivated the hearts of the basses, and he good naturedly responded to all the recalls. The manner in which he sang Lassen's "It Was a Dream," showed that he was equal to any style of music.

Adolf Hartdegen charmed the audience, as he always does. There was a dead silence through the room while the deep, rich tones of his 'cello throbbed and swelled. In the "Air de Ballet" the imitation of a bagpipe was perfect, and during the air that followed the heads of the audience involuntarily kept time, and their feet would have liked to. Mr. Venino also did not disappoint his admirers. He played in a technically finished manner, although handicapped by a wretched piano of uneven tone. He was recalled but modestly declined to play again. The honor of being selected as the only home artist worthy to appear in such a galaxy of stars from abroad, is no more than is due his talents and his merits. Special mention should be made of Victor Harris, who is an exceptionally good accompanist.

The chorus did well. If there could be a fault found with it—the members did too well; that is, they sang with their whole strength, and sometimes tried to run away with their conductor. This showed especially in "Spring Song," "Evening," and "Only Thou," where there was not sufficient modulation, and the diminuendoes were given too abruptly. "Beneath the Stars" is a waltz song which was translated into English for Mr Chapman, and has not been rendered before in this country. It was heartily sung and very much enjoyed. The most finished production was probably "My Love Dwelt in a Northern Land," which is a beautiful song, and is also new to America. The finale to "The Mastersinger" was, according to Fischer, sung better than the opera chorus sing it.

To William R. Chapman is due the greatest praise for producing from a chorus, the majority of whom were unaccustomed to singing with a leader, such really beautiful music. The public are now anxious to compare this year's work with that of last year, when the Melopoia of last night.

The Hymn to Apollo by Roeder, will be given at the January concert of the Melopoia.
